Makeup of official village ballot now in question

The makeup of the official ballot in the April 17 Wheeling village election is in question following hearings Monday on objections to the nominating petitions of both Wheeling political parties.

Although the special electoral board ruling on the objections rendered no decisions, indications are that the To Overall Progress party's (TOP) place on the ballot will depend on the board's interpretation of the validity of signatures and election law.

Objections filed against the Wheeling Independent Party (WHIP), however, were essentially stripped of their impact when the board ruled to strike an objection to the candidate's statements of economic interests.

The board did, however, agree to review the objections although they were filed three days after the official filing deadline. This decision was apparently based on evidence the three days were legal holidays.

The TOP party's place on the ballot depends in part on whether the electoral board will invalidate 450 challenged signatures on the TOP petitions.

IF THE board invalidates the signatures for discrepancies with county voting records, the decision will hinge on the board's interpretation of part of the state election law.

The statute says nominating petitions must be signed by at least five per cent of the number of persons who voted in the last general election where the municipality voted as a unit and elected officials.

Attorney Gerald Chapman, representing the TOP candidates, contended there is no general election where the village votes as a whole and elects officials. He said this only happens during village elections and therefore the village election figure should be used.

According to statements during the hearing, about 2,100 persons voted in the last municipal election while about 5,585 voted in the November, 1972 election.

This would mean a smaller number of signatures would be required if the village election were used as the standard.

The electoral board, consisting of Judge Helen F. McGillicuddy, Judge Daniel A. Roberts and Village Trustee John Koepen, took the motions and testimony under advisement. They will rule on the objections at a later date.

Omni-House seeking funds from villages

by JILL BETTNER

If Omni-House: Youth Services Bureau in Wheeling is to continue to operate, area residents are going to have to dig down deep in their pockets.

The counseling center, established a year ago, serves Wheeling, Buffalo Grove, parts of Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect, unincorporated Prospect Heights and some areas of unincorporated Wheeling Township.

The financial support of these communities is vital to the future of the organization that operates out of a remodeled storefront at 516 N. Milwaukee Ave.

The Dist. 21 school board agreed to again act as sponsor for Omni-House in their application for refunding by the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission (ILEC). The application process takes about nine months.

THE $65,629 Omni-House hopes to receive from the ILEC will cover about half the projected operating costs of the agency. The rest of the money will have to come from contributions.

The Omni-House staff began a fund-raising campaign in January. They have collected nearly $12,726 from local PTAs, churches, social service clubs, business and professional people and foundations.

Because ILEC funds for the agency will not be available after next year, Digre said the current fund drive is doubly important. The staff is hoping to build a broad base of long-range financial support.

"We want to get some money lined up now so that we can continue to stay around after ILEC drops out of the picture," Digre said. "Our goal is not to be in the community for one or two years, but for 20 or 40 years."

IN JANUARY, Omni-House officials turned down a $2,000 donation from the owners of the Cheetah II in Half Day, a nightclub that features nude dancers.

The officials said the owners of the club were trying to use the Omni-House name for publicity. They did not want the name of the agency connected with the nightclub.

WHIP sets coffees tonight, tomorrow

The Wheeling Independent Party (WHIP) will sponsor neighborhood coffees at 8 tonight and tomorrow night. The WHIP party is running against the To Overall Progress Party (TOP) in the April 17 village elections.

Tonight's meeting will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Holland, 313 Fletcher Dr., while tomorrow's at the home of Clarence Eisenman, 116 Berkshire Dr.

WHIP officials said any Wheeling resident may attend the coffees to discuss village politics with the candidates.

L. B. Andersen Inc., 20 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling, will be closed today because of the death of its founder, L. B. Andersen. The corporation will open as usual tomorrow, according to officials.

PICKETS LEAN AGAINST merchandise outside the A&P food store in Wheeling while customers continue to and from the store. Organizers of the boycott, said, they hurt the store's business last Saturday with pickets while an A&P spokesman said very little if any business turned away. The boycott is over A&P alleged use of non-union packed lettuce on certain occasions.

Plan weekend campaign to urge boycott

Lettuce pickets supporting pickers

by LYNN ASINOF

Pickets who boycotted lettuce at the A&P food stores in Wheeling and Des Plaines Saturday may become a common weekend sight.

The pickets, who are supporting efforts by the United Farm Workers, (UFW) are urging shoppers not to buy from A&P stores. They say they will continue their picketing until the A&P chain makes the commitment to buy only UFW union lettuce.

Cynthia Kelly, who is in charge of picketing and leaflet passing in the Northwest suburbs, said A&P stores are selling some union lettuce. She said, however, the chain is continuing to buy non-union lettuce when UFW lettuce is not available.

"DURING THE PAST several weeks, A&P has made a great effort to handle union lettuce," she said. "But we want a commitment that when there is no union lettuce they will handle no lettuce."

Miss Kelly said, the lettuce picked by members of the Teamsters Union should not be considered union lettuce because the Teamsters have not signed contracts with their pickers.

According to an A&P spokesman in Chicago, the company thinks it is buying union lettuce no matter which union it is from. "It is not our job to worry about interunion problems. We regret we can't solve the problems," he said.

The picketing efforts are part of a nationwide movement to pressure two food chains, A&P and Safeway, into buying UFW union lettuce. The pickets are asking shoppers not to buy any goods from the stores until the chain is committed to carry only union lettuce.

MISS KELLY contended that pickets turned about 75 persons away from the Wheeling store Saturday. She also claimed each shopper represented $20 to $25 in merchandise, thus having significant impact on the store's business.

The Wheeling A&P manager said he could not comment on any matters concerning the picketing but indicated no business was lost last Saturday. The Chicago spokesman said the chain has not been hurt by the picketing and does not plan to change its procedures in the near future.

Miss Kelly said if the A&P chain decides to carry only union lettuce, this will pressure more lettuce growers into allowing their pickers to organize. "It would really be a blow to the growers if they were told those stores were only going to handle union lettuce," she said.

Miss Kelly said picketing and leafletting will continue in the Northwest suburbs, with heavy emphasis on the weekends. She said, however, they hope to expand the picketing to three days a week.

Lobbyists seek 4 cent-a-gallon increase

Milk price hike may be on the way

by LEA TONKIN

A small increase in bottled milk prices may be in the works for next month or a boost of four cents per gallon could be imposed across the board if powerful dairy industry lobbyists have their way.

The coming milk price rise follows two substantial upward swings in milk prices at the consumer level within the last two months. Consumers now pay an average four-to-10 cents a gallon more for milk as a result of these moves.

The possibility of a small price hike for bottled milk is raised by the Class I (bottled milk) price level, effective April 1. This was announced yesterday by the U. S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) regional office in Chicago at $6.71 per hundred weight, two cents over march prices.

According to administrative assistant Dick Emery, Class I prices paid to farmers are set in advance after the Price Levels for Class II (used in cheese and other dairy products) is averaged for an earlier monthly period. This becomes a base price to which other costs are added.

"Usually at this time of year, the price levels off," said Emery. "But the demand for cheese is so high it keeps the demand and the price levels up for milk supplies."

PACKING a bigger wallop at the retail level would be the effect of a change in the USDA farm support program as promoted by dairymen and their lobbying organizations. The dairymen seek a boost in supports from the current 72.5 per cent of parity (an established standard) to an 85 per cent parity level, starting April 1.

Despite efforts by the National Milk Producers Federation, USDA Secretary Earl Butz is holding out for a lower price support level. A rise to 75 per cent of parity will go into effect April 1.

USDA's experts say retail milk prices would climb four cents a gallon if the 85

Drowning your sorrows to cost more too...

Teetotalers and wine lovers may finally have something in common: the problem of rising prices.

But for milk-drinking teetotalers, the steadily increasing price of milk in the marketplace is not half as startling as the price on imported liquors still to come.

It seems the recent devaluation of the U.S. dollar will mean a higher price tag for the table wines and other liquors imported in fast-increasing volume to this country. The action was taken Feb. 12 as President Nixon asked Congress to approve legislation to devalue the dollar 10 per cent in terms of gold. Items imported to the U.S. after this date will cost more, while exports will cost less in the international markets.

IN ADDITION, changes in import excise taxes will boost imported liquor prices at the retail level said John Roman, manager of the Famous Liquor Store in Arlington Heights. It will take several weeks for many price increases to show up as current inventories are depleted, he said.

"But for some of our supplies, the price levels may go up soon because the wholesalers don't have adequate supplies," he said. The cognacs will be the most noticeable example. If they're selling at $9 a bottle, there's a tentative increase of $2 to $3 a bottle coming, said Roman.

"The imported wines are going up. The suppliers found out that people want them so they raised their prices," he said of popular French wines. "We anticipate that some imported French wines will go up almost $3 a bottle," he said. The most popular price range for wine is $2 to $3 a bottle.

As ever, the price-conscious consumer willing to try out a variety of brands can save a substantial amount of money. This is because the supply of wines from the well known French chateaus is dwindling, popping the cork on prices for the better wines.

When Roman speaks of the "lesser known regions" producing cheaper, quality wines, he's talking about such countries as Chile, South Africa and Australia.

And there's a range of quality domestic wines, sold at lower prices, he said.

ROMAN says he hasn't seen a noticeable increase in sales following the devaluation. "This hasn't gotten a big play yet," he confided, "but anybody who enjoys a good brand of wines should be concerned."

"Chicago is still the largest market for bourbon in the country," Roman added. "It's strictly an American drink, and in prices, there's no problem with American spirits."

James Miner, "number two man" at the Armanetti Liquor Store in Rolling Meadows, says the increase in imported liquor prices will be most noticeable in about three months. Both Miner and Roman noted a substantial hike in imported wine sales over the past three years.

Miner expects to see a sales upswing in mid-March "when people recover from their Christmas bills." If wine-lovers want to economize, he suggests the variety of domestic wines.

per cent parity level is granted. The Nixon Administration believes this would stimulate overproduction, turn away price-conscious consumers to dairy substitutes and cost taxpayers millions of dollars in government purchases of dairy surpluses.

"Testimony on this question is being taken right now," said Emery. He said the President seems to be against the support increase.

JUDY BROWN, a representative of the Associated Milk Producers Inc. (AMPI), mid-states region, said Monday the organization is cooperating in the industry drive toward the 85 per cent price support program. The region includes Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin. If higher prices are not effected, there will be no incentive to increase milk production to necessary levels, she said.

Approximately 25 Senators and more than 80 Representatives have been lined up in support of increasing dairy supports to the 85 per cent level, according to Miss Brown. "Our position is that it's unrealistic to say that higher prices will stimulate oversupply," she said, "because of the number of dairy farmers slaughtering their cows and going out of business."

Any increased price supports passed along from farmer to processor to distributor will then be passed on to the consumer, said John Loss, president of Chicago Milk Distributors. "But that's the last thing in the world that we want," he said yesterday.

Loss said a new contract, taking effect June 1 for local milk wagon drivers, may also be reflected in increased bottled milk costs.

It's defense's turn for spotlight today in Barrett case

by ANNE SLAVICEK

Urging the jury to convict "a corrupt and greedy politician, Edward J. Barrett," assistant district attorney Dan Webb concluded the government's arguments in the trial of the Cook County clerk.

This morning, defense attorneys Thomas Foran and James Casey will get their chance to argue their case before the jury begins deliberations on Barrett's guilt or innocence. Barrett, 72, is on trial for allegedly accepting $180,000 in bribes from officials of the Shoup Voting Machine Co., and for failing to pay federal income taxes on the bribe money.

A second series of charges says the county clerk used the U.S. mails to defraud the citizens of Cook County by accepting broker's commissions on voting machine insurance, instead of putting the commissions into the county treasury.

Webb's arguments late yesterday afternoon came after the defense attorneys rested their case on behalf of Barrett, after testimony from only four witnesses.

WEBB ARGUED the defense had failed to prove its allegation Shoup president Irving H. Meyers spent the $180,000 himself.

"The defense failed to keep its promise," made in opening arguments, Webb said.

Webb reminded the jury Meyers had told of coming to O'Hare Airport five times to pay Barrett bribes for voting machine purchases made by Cook County on Barrett's recommendation.

About 1,400 machines purchased during the years in question are among those the county uses in suburban polling places.

Webb showed the jury documentation for every phone call and plane trip Meyers said he made carrying out the scheme to bribe Barrett.

WEBB MAINTAINED Meyers was telling the truth on the witness stand "You saw his (Meyers) demeanor," Webb said to the jury.

"Foran threw everything at him but the kitchen sink in two days of severe cross examination, but Meyers told the truth."

Webb said Foran asked misleading questions "because he had no defense on behalf of Mr. Barrett. He's throwing in a red herring!"

"He was bluffing, he was trying to raise a smoke screen," Webb said.

"Would you like Eddie Barrett to remain the county clerk of Cook County so he can bleed the county dry?" Webb asked the jury.

"You can't line your own pockets and sit back and say 'I'm doing a good job for the county,'" Webb concluded.

THE TESTIMONY came to an abrupt end shortly before noon Monday.

Federal Judge Richard Austin had called for the next witness and defense attorney James Casey said, "Your honor, the defense rests."

The spectators in the crowded courtroom reacted with disbelief. "The defense rests?" Austin asked incredulously. "Yes, your honor," Casey responded.

The judge and attorneys then adjourned to the judge's chambers to discuss the instructions to the jury.

Earlier Monday morning, Austin had again denied a defense motion for a mistrial, the fourth made by the defense during the trial.

Witnesses who testified Monday morning included Barrett's personal secretary, Louise Lehman, and Edward Keating, a vice president of Arthur J. Gallagher & Co. insurance agency.

MRS. LEHMAN, who has worked for Barrett for 28 years, said she screens Barrett's phone calls and correspondence and handles his financial statements.

She said she had never given or shown Barrett statements from Gallagher which came with insurance commission checks, and detailed what insurance the commissions related to.

She said she endorsed the commission checks on most occasions rather than Barrett, and she deposited them in the bank or cashed them for Barrett.

Under cross-examination, however, she was unable to explain one $2,700 commission check signed by Barrett, which the county clerk had apparently cashed himself at a bank in the same building as Gallagher's office.

MRS. LEHMAN SAID she never met Anthony Lemisch, who allegedly delivered a bribe to Barrett's office. She refuted his testimony on a description of the outer office and reception area of the county clerk's office, but corroborated Lemisch's recollection of the walls of Barrett's own office are covered with paintings and mementoes

She said she had never seen Barrett in a camel's hair coat. In testimony last week, Meyers had described Barrett as wearing a "camel's hair-like coat" at their meetings.

"Mr Barrett is a very conservative dresser. I've never seen him in anything like that," Mrs. Lehman said.

Keating said orders for voting machine insurance were placed by Cook County Deputy Comptroller Richard Hodgman, not by Barrett.

KEATING SAID IT was his own decision Barrett should receive commissions on the insurance. Barrett has been an insurance broker since 1940, Keating said.

The Gallagher vice president said he had never discussed either the insurance or the commissions with Barrett. He said Barrett received a total of $6,000 in commissions on voting machine insurance.

During discussion before the jury entered the courtroom Monday morning, Austin refused to allow the defense to enter Meyers' income tax returns as evidence. Austin said the tax returns would be allowed only if Meyers' checks and deposit slips were also offered by the defense as supporting documents.

Austin said those were necessary "to give any meaning to the income tax returns."

During another discussion with the judge, Foran said "I could never in a million years prove that Irving Meyers gambled in Las Vegas with cash." Foran argued he did not have to prove Meyers' guilt of using the bribe money, only show inferences Meyers himself spent the money he says he gave Barrett in bribes.

Foran argued it was impossible for Barrett to prove his whereabouts at a specific time and date four years ago. In response to a suggestion from the prosecution, Foran replied "The idea that it would be possible to get anybody from Las Vegas, where cash gambling is the rule, to say Meyers gambled large amounts of cash... is silly."

O'Hare noise 'double dose' in area: report

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

The Northwest suburbs "shoulder twice their share" of O'Hare airport noise, a report by a Des Plaines city official contends.

"The communities surrounding O'Hare would not have too much to complain about if they could be convinced that everything possible was being done to reduce the noise problem. Waiting for quieter engines is merely failing at a task that must be accomplished," said Philip Lindahl, Des Plaines environmental control officer.

Lindahl's report was hand-delivered to Washington, D.C. yesterday by Mayor Herbert Behrel. The 20-page study was also to be entered last week in minutes of a Federal Aviation Administration hearing on "airplane fleet noise requirements."

FAA regional officials in Des Plaines denied Lindahl's charge 31 per cent of takeoffs and landings are conducted over the Northwest suburbs. The percentages for other directions include: east 22 per cent; southeast—16 per cent; northeast—11 per cent; southwest—10 per cent and west—10 per cent, according to Lindahl.

"THE ACTUAL STATISTICS are more balanced than that," said Les Case, FAA environmental and noise abatement officer.

Lindahl's totals were based on a 1972 Northeastern Illinois Plan Commission report on O'Hare use. The figures were compiled in October 1969 and were projected for 1975 airport traffic levels.

Case said the airport's "runway utilization log" for August, 1972, showed about 9 per cent to the northeast, 22 per cent in the northwest; 11 per cent west; 2 per cent southwest; 24 per cent southeast, and 32 per cent east.

Personnel shortages have limited runway log keeping, he said. No statistics for total use in 1972 are available.

Case said noise impact is now "distributed more evenly" over the suburbs because O'Hare tower chiefs, who plan runway use, "look at what happened the day before. This is a new phenomenon. The chief tries to hit people with noise who didn't have it the day before and he tries to avoid previous high use areas."

LINDAHL CLAIMED Park Ridge and Northwest Chicago receive "special treatment" because takeoffs over the communities on runways 22R and 27R, are prohibited between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.

Lindahl called for 24-hour a day use of "a recognized unpopulated tollway departure route" off runway 32R, already one of the airport's busiest, to relieve Northwest suburban noise. "The silent argument . . . is that by routing eastbound departures off 32R out over the tollway adds about two minutes to the flight time and costs a few dollars — so we suffer instead," he said.

Lindahl charged "a credibility gap now exists in the FAA community relations office" and he criticized FAA changes in takeoff requirements as "old existing procedures . . . an apparent attempt to deceive the residents of the O'Hare area."

Case answered by saying, "We never claimed noise would be eliminated. At this point, everything is being done without disregarding safety."

In August, 1972, the FAA ordered pilots to climb to 1,500 feet altitude at "full power," instead of a more gradual climb over neighboring suburbs. "There was a lot of pulling of hair to get the planes higher, quicker," Case said. "We were trying to balance safety and noise impact."

"CURRENT PROCEDURES in effect since April, 1970, restrict takeoffs between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.," Lindahl said. The FAA's lane of relief policy limits those night operations to runway 32L to the "maximum extent possible," according to the FAA.

"The noise sensitivity of people does not start at 11 p.m. and end with the roar of the first jet after 7 a.m.," said Lindahl.

Suburb officials have often called for a night O'Hare shutdown, similar to Washington (D.C.) National airport's. "That just is not up to us to determine," Case said. Control of airport hours rests with Chicago. "If the people want the airport to limit flights after 11 p.m., it's up to them to convince the city. It's not up to the federal government."

"We insist that the number one consideration is safety," Case said. "Flight procedures have been developed over the years and economics was not the reason. We could close the airport and solve the noise problem."

O'Hare officials can "play noise abatement" during hours of light operation, usually at night, he said. "From 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. we've got to use all our ingenuity and concrete to evaluate and handle the large amount of traffic" that can reach 150 planes an hour.

MUCH AIRPORT NOISE stems from use of the older, noisier DC-9, 707, 727 and 737 planes allowed under a grandfather clause in the 1968 noise abatement requirements. The planes do not meet the same noise standards as recent 747's, he said.

Lindahl's report will be included in the FAA hearing designed to require retrofitting of the old planes to meet current noise standards by 1978. The proposal would require changes in 50 per cent of airline fleet planes in 1976.

"I'm sure there's going to be a big fight over this," Case said. "The airlines will fight it because of cost. They'll either have to change the planes or get rid of them. The civic groups will say we're not doing it fast enough."

Lindahl's report added support to last summer's claims by former U.S. Rep. Abner Mikva and the Environmental Protection Agency that O'Hare noise reaches levels dangerous to hearing. In September, Mikva and EPA claimed suburban airport noise reached 118 decibels. About 110 can damage hearing of one in five persons exposed to the sound — similar to the blast of an auto horn three feet away — for 30 minutes a day over a prolonged period, EPA has claimed.

Lindahl reported readings of up to 106 decibels when monitoring 95 flights over six days in January and February. Fifteen per cent of the readings topped 100. About 17 per cent were less than 90 decibels.

Woodfield Place site features hotel, office buildings

Groundbreaking set for new complex

by NANCY COWGER

Ground will be broken in from two to six weeks for the first of two 11-story office buildings in Woodfield Place in Schaumburg, and a convention-hotel is expected to open its doors there within 18 months.

Robert Wislow, project leasing manager, Friday announced the anticipated construction schedule for the 27.3-acre development along Mall Drive between Higgins and Woodfield roads in Schaumburg.

The first of the office buildings is to open in March, 1974, along with a building housing from four to six restaurants and a health club. Construction is to start on the hotel in mid-summer this year, and is to open approximately a year later. Three retail buildings are to be erected as tenants are confirmed, said Wislow, with a final completion date for the entire complex in 1980.

THE TOTAL development is valued at about $50 million, and is to provide an estimated 2 million square feet of floor space.

The 550,000 square feet of retail space will be anchored with a major tenant of high-price merchandise, according to Wislow. He noted the development will be just past the Lord and Taylor extension of Woodfield Mall, and indicated he expects the major retail tenant of Wood-field Place to be a step up from Lord and Taylor. While he declined to name prospective tenants, he agreed the firm is negotiating with firms both new and familiar to metropolitan Chicago. He would neither confirm nor deny Neiman-Marcus Co. is among possible tenants.

No tenants have been signed for any portion of the complex, said Wislow, although negotiations are approaching that stage with prospective operators of the convention center-hotel.

The hotel will provide from 250 to 300 rooms, and will service both Schaumburg area businessmen and those from Chicago. Wislow expects it will draw some of Chicago's convention business with its access to the city via three expressway routes and to O'Hare Field via two.

HE NOTED Ill. Rte. 53 connections with the Kennedy Expressway, the future Elgin-O'Hare Expressway and the Eisenhower Expressway.

Wislow termed the new development a total business community, not limiting itself to office space and parking areas but providing all the amenities to serve the needs and desires of business personnel.

The health club will include sauna baths, a swimming pool, handball and indoor tennis courts and an exercise gymnasium, to serve the Woodfield working community as well as the general public.

WHILE WISLOW termed the office buildings speculative, he said they are more comparable with office buildings designed for a particular tenant, in that they will have bronze tinted windows, bronze window framing, special heating components to compensate for such factors as intensity of sunlight and other detailing not generally offered in speculative structures.

At the same time, said Wislow, the buildings are designed for maximum use of floor space, with central elevators and corridors only as required by tenants, to permit competitive rental rates. Rental in the office building will range from $7.50 to $8.50 per square foot, except on the first floor, he said. The building will total 180,000 square feet of office space, with 16,500 square feet per floor. Wislow's firm will establish offices in one floor of the building, he said.

Owner of the site is Woodfield Properties, Ltd., while developer is Equity Control Corp. of 208 S. LaSalle, Chicago. IDC Real Estate which Wislow represents, is the leasing and management firm. Designs are by Hammond Beely & Associates of Chicago and Carson/Oda Associates, which has been architect for other IDC leased projects. Financing is through I. J. Markin, Chicago.

Ex-boyfriend's car kills woman on highway

A Rolling Meadows woman was killed early yesterday when she was struck by a car while walking along River Road in Des Plaines, according to Des Plaines police.

Geane Jones, 19, of 2206 Eastman, was pronounced dead on arrival at Holy Family Hospital after the car driven by John Parish, 23, of 1845 Circle Dr., Des Plaines, struck her about one-half mile north of Central Road, police said.

The accident took place about 4 a.m., about half an hour after she left Bobby McGee's tavern, 704 N. River Rd., Mount Prospect, where she had been since about 10 p.m. Sunday night, police said.

Parish told police he had been at the tavern also with another girl, Wendy

Acker, 233 Fletcher in Wheeling that evening.

Parish told police he had gone to the tavern with a Wheeling woman and had talked to Miss Jones, whom he described as his ex-girlfriend, at one point during the evening, according to police.

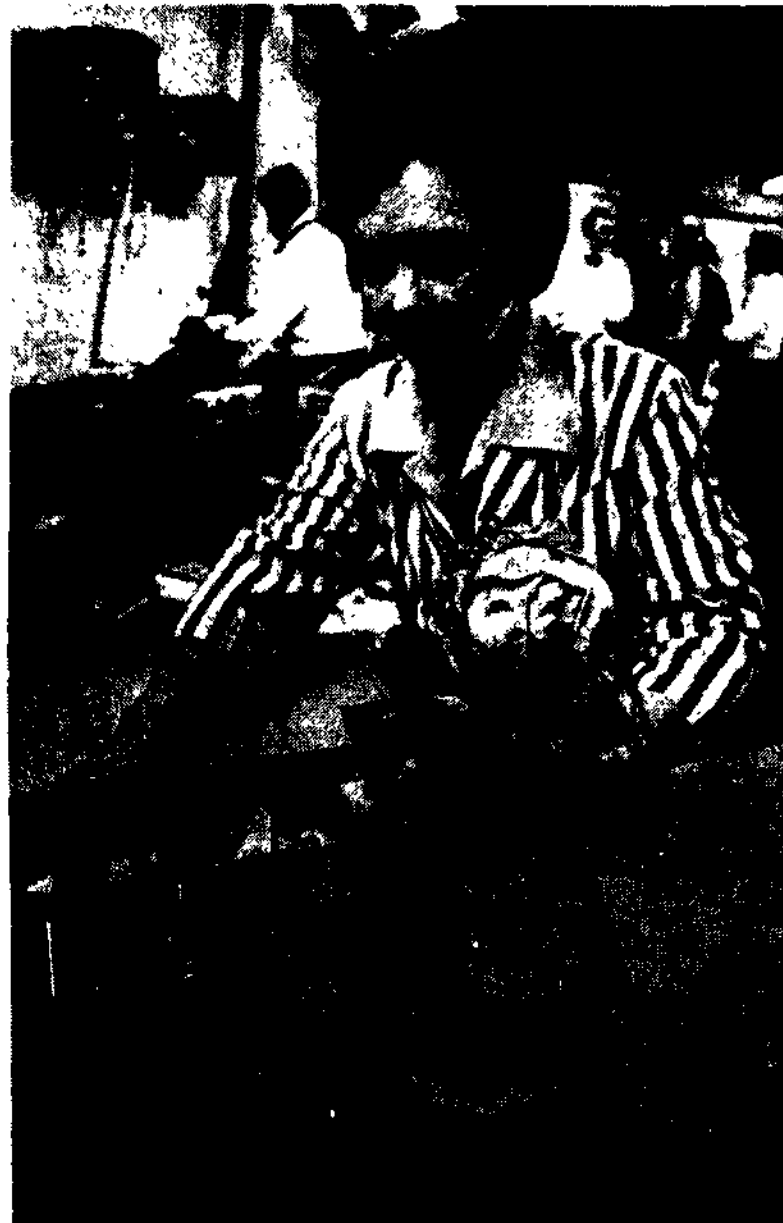

POLICE SAID Parish and the Wheeling woman left the tavern after Miss Jones. They were driving southbound on River Road when the accident occurred. Parish then rushed her to Holy Family where she was pronounced dead, police said.

Police investigators said there was no indication that the car had gone off the roadway. They said Miss Jones must have been walking on the road when she was hit because there was no trace of mud on her shoes.

Parish also told police he was observing the 45 mile per hour speed limit at the time. Police said Parish volunteered to take a lie detector test in connection with the accident and passed the test satisfactorily yesterday.

Parish was charged with failure to yield the right of way to a pedestrian and going too fast for conditions. He was released on bond and is scheduled to appear in court April 2.

UNPACKING U.N. lettuce at the Wheeling A&P food store is Mary Haddock. The lettuce carries the seal of the United Farm Workers (UFW). However, protesters say the food chain often sells lettuce carrying the seal of the Teamsters Union or no union at all. Until A&P makes a commitment to sell only UFW lettuce protesters say they will continue to picket the stores in the Northwest suburbs.

3-year-old girl drowns in Salt Creek

by JULIA BAUER

A daylong search for a 3-year-old Palatine girl ended in tragedy yesterday when men dragging Salt Creek discovered the body of the child, Susan Gieseler, apparently drowned at the Pleasant Hill Boulevard bridge.

The child, who lived at 159 S. Maple Ct., was discovered missing by her mother at 9:15 a.m. At 5 p.m., public works employee Robert Best discovered the child's body, which had apparently been washed into a sewer line entering the stream at water level under the bridge.

Palatine police originally were notified at 9:48 a.m. of the missing girl and a door-to-door hunt was started. The Palatine Fire Department began dragging the branch of Salt Creek at 3:30 p.m. A five-man team took a rowboat and searched the stream south of the Hellen Road bridge between Smith and Brockway streets. Another crew took long poles and swept across the width of the stream north where it was too narrow to allow the boat.

BEST, WHO WAS aiding in the search, was walking in the stream when he discovered the girl's body a mile downstream from her home.

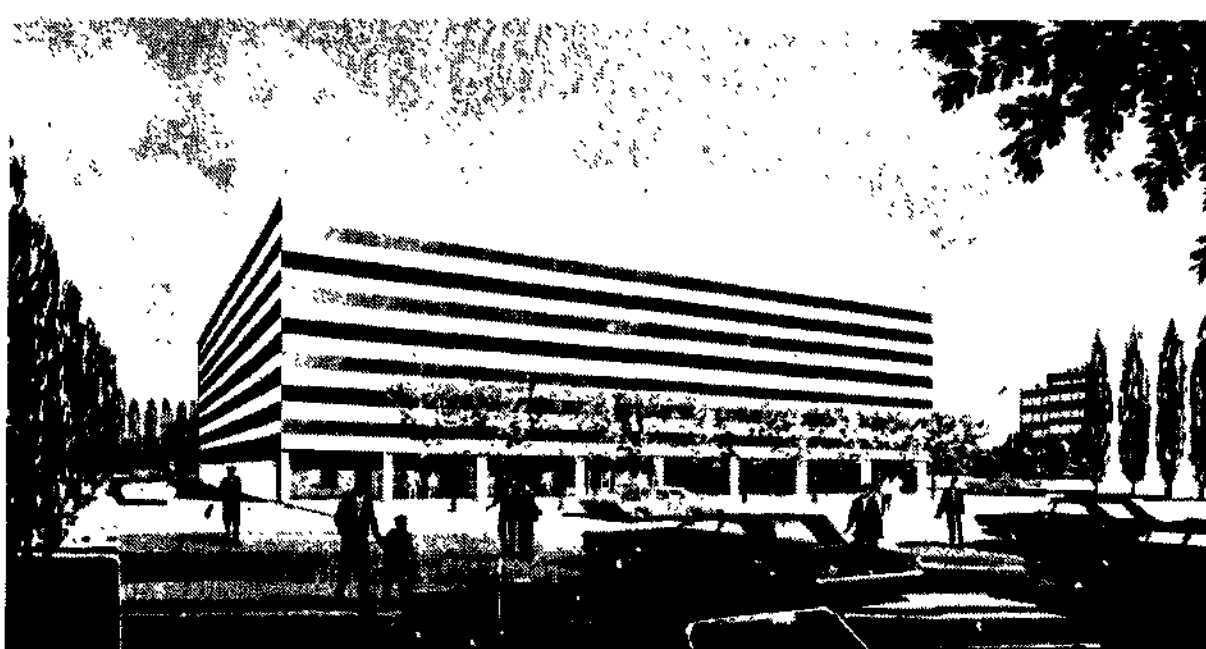

Mrs. James W. Gieseler, the child's mother, told police that her daughter had long blond hair and was wearing a pink coat and aqua slacks when she apparently wandered away from home yesterday morning.

The county's canine patrol was called out to attempt to track the girl. Cook County Sheriff's Police organized that portion of the search.

The neighborhood around Susan's house was filled with policemen as they knocked on every door to ask if Susan had been seen. Detectives questioned young children in another effort to find the girl.

The east bank of Salt Creek was fenced off. But the west shore, the side Susan's house was on, sloped down without a break to the water's edge.

A MAJOR MEDICAL building is under construction along Central Road just west of Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights. The 50,000-square-foot Northwest Medical Arts Building will have offices for 60 to 65 doctors and also will house a pharmacy, medical laboratory and X-ray clinic. The medical center is being financed by seven area doctors. The layered-appearing building will be built around a landscaped courtyard capped by a huge skylight. Harry Weese and Associates are architects for the building.

Henry Kissinger ready to marry?

by ROB WATSON
NEW YORK — It could only happen in this big, crazy city: Excavation work for the new Second Avenue subway has slowed to a crawl because workers have run into an astonishing amount of uncharted mains, cables, etc. Nobody knows what hooks up to what. Included are three gas mains (one a 30-inch); two water mains (one a four-footer), and something like 150 electrical wire ducts. It's just as confusing as what's on top.

POLITICAL BEAT: The word in Washington is that Henry Kissinger is going to marry Nancy Maglanes, a very frequent date . . . Robert F. Wagner Jr. is running for N. Y. City Council. His pa was mayor, his grandpa senator. . . Walter Hickel, ex-Interior Secretary, is reported ready to run for governor of Alaska against Democratic Gov. William Egan. Friends keep saying Hickel would like to occupy the White House.

WOMEN'S LIB: Queen Alla, King Hussein's bride, may set the Arab world on its ear. A tall blonde, 25, she likes jeans, motorcycles, water-skiing and is being taught by her husband to fly a helicopter. Jordan-born, she graduated from N.Y.'s Hunter College. Her papa is a former ambassador to the U.N. Oh, yes, she has dimples. . . Dixy Lee Ray, the 58-year-old marine biologist just named chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, has an Indian name, Oo-ma. It means Great Lady in the Kwikwaka'wakw tribe. Dr. Ray always brings her two dogs to the office with her, likes a sandwich lunch at her desk, lives in a custom-made, 28-foot mobile home.

SIS-WAR: That's what Texans call it. Little Southwest Airlines (a fleet of three 737s) is driving Braniff executives up the wall. Southwest is turning a tidy profit by halving the one-way Dallas-San Antonio fare to $13. It calls itself "the Love Airline." for a while had stewardesses in hotpants serving cocktails with love-potion names.

SPORTS ALL: The St. Louis football

Cardinals drafted a 260-pound defensive tackle who is deaf. Bonnie Sloan (from Tennessee's Austin Peay) reads lips so expertly he rarely makes a mistake. . . Marques Haynes, once a famed member of the Harlem Globetrotters, just signed a $300,000 loan agreement with a big N.Y. bank to start a black-owned-and-operated company in the garment district. . . Basketball-star-to-come is Adrian Dantley, a 6-5, 220-pound black at DeMartha High School in Hyattsville, Md. (a Washington suburb). The young giant has already had 250 college offers. . . How big is boating? Well, the sale figures are in from the N.Y. Boat Show and it was a record $58.7 million, almost $3 million up from last year.

AH, HOTELS: They're really not much different anywhere on earth. Best recent story is about the tourist who called the switchboard at his Tel Aviv inn to ask for a 7-up, "7-Up?" said the Israeli operator, "yes, sir." The drink never came, but his phone rang on the dot next morning at 7 to get him up.

Hospital to switch to frozen blood

Cook County Hospital has become the first major hospital in the country to change to an all-frozen blood system.

The change-over is expected to be completed by July, and, according to its proponents, will help solve the recurrent problems of blood shortages, serum hepatitis, transplant rejections and lung failure caused by particles in transfused blood.

The Health and Hospitals Governing Commission of Cook County Jan. 25 passed the resolution implementing the development of a 100 per cent frozen blood system.

The Governing Commission, an autonomous agent of Cook County, manages the public medical institutions of the County and is charged by state law with providing planning assistance for the development of a county-wide health care delivery system.

Dr. Gerald Moss, Cook County Hospital's director of surgery, and Dr. Massumeh Teltschi, director of the hospital's blood bank, point out that chronic blood shortage is due in part to the difficulties in storing fresh blood, which has a shelf-life of only 21 days. This short shelf-life results in waste, nationwide, that may run as high as 30 per cent of the total blood supply. Frozen blood, on the other hand, can be stored "perhaps ten years," according to the two physicians.

"THE FREEZING process itself," Dr. Moss explained, "is a relatively simple one. The red blood cells are suspended in glycerol (anti-freeze) and stored in a freezer at -80 degrees centigrade. All that is required to make them available to the patient is to wash out the glycerol and suspend the cells in saline or other infusion material. The thawing and washing takes about 20 to 30 minutes."

Difficulties in the washing process have been completely solved, according to Dr. Moss, who became familiar with the use of frozen blood while serving as a surgeon in Vietnam. Dr. Moss has worked at Massachusetts General Hospital with Dr. Charles Huggins, one of the pioneers in this field.

Frozen blood has other advantages besides its long shelf life. There is evidence that the possibility of transmitting the hepatitis virus, which kills approximately 5,000 persons yearly, is almost nil since it appears to be removed from the blood by the washing process. There is no totally effective method of screening blood for the presence of the virus, and the use of frozen blood is the only known way to insure that a patient does not receive the virus in his blood transfusion.

The chances of success in a transplant operation are greatly increased by the use of frozen blood in transfusions. The freezing and washing process removes the white blood cells, which are responsible for the development of antibodies. It is the formation of antibodies which causes the rejection of transplanted organs.

A FURTHER ADVANTAGE of frozen blood for trauma patients is the elimination of particulate matter in the donor plasma. The build-up of these particles sometimes clog the vessels in the lung and can result in lung failure in patients who receive a massive amount of blood at one time.

By switching to an all-frozen blood supply, Cook County Hospital will be assured of always having an adequate supply of blood on hand, including rare blood types. This is especially important for County Hospital, which must have enormous quantities of blood for its trauma and burn units.

The initial cost of converting to a frozen blood system entails a $70,000 investment in equipment and the addition of four technicians. Although the cost of frozen blood is now about $15 per unit higher than that of fresh blood, it is estimated that eventually the cost per unit of the frozen blood system may be just slightly more than the present cost of using fresh blood.

It is anticipated that Cook County Hospital will eventually set up regional centers to supply other hospitals that are in need of blood.

IT WAS ALSO announced that the North Suburban Blood Center, which supplies the blood needs of 12 suburban hospitals, donated 125 pints of blood to Cook County Hospital's blood bank on January 26.

The center has received more blood than it needed to meet the needs of the hospitals it serves, largely as a result of the extensive media coverage of the Chicago area blood shortage.

Philip Sears, administrator of the center, said, "Our donors from the 12 to 15 villages participating in blood assurance programs realize the community responsibility for supplying not only their own blood needs but those of Chicago's large urban hospitals, which have heavy blood demands."

The center sent a mobile unit into the villages to draw blood from the donors. The villages included Arlington Heights, Highland Park, Evanston, Lake Forest, Glenview, Glenview, Deerfield, and Des Plaines.

The Cook County Hospital Blood Bank was able to use 34 pints, and returned the rest to the Center.

The Almanac

Today is Tuesday, March 6, the 65th day of 1973 with 309 to follow.

The moon is between its new phase and first quarter.

The morning stars are Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

The evening stars are Mercury and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Pisces.

British poet Elizabeth Barrett Browning, wife of poet Robert Browning, was born March 6, 1806.

On this day in history:
In 1836, Mexican forces captured the Alamo in San Antonio, Tex., killing the last of 187 Americans who had held out for 13 days, including famed frontiersman Davy Crockett. From the slaughter arose the cry "Remember the Alamo!"

In 1857, the United States Supreme Court handed down its landmark ruling that Negro slave Dred Scott could not sue for his freedom in a federal court.

In 1904, King Paul of Greece died at the age of 62 and was succeeded by his son, Prince Constantine. A military regime took over the country three years later, and remains in control today.

A thought for the day: British poet Elizabeth Barrett Browning said, "The child's sob in the darkness curses deeper than the strong man in his wrath."

Mayor Daley's 'glamor girl'

Prim 38-year-old Jane Byrne proves you don't have to be a wrinkle-faced cigar chomper to climb the Chicago political ladder

by RALPH NOVAK

The plaintive cry is coming all the way from Washington, D.C., but it is as clear and crisp as the chill wind that carries it off Lake Michigan and into the mayor's office on LaSalle Street.

It is the Democratic National Committee and they are calling, "Come home, Richard J. Daley."

It is only about eight months since Daley's Chicago delegation was rudely bounced from the Democratic National Convention in favor of an upstart McGovern-oriented group. Out with the bad old politics, in with the good new politics.

But since then, George McGovern and his supporters have been singularly unsuccessful.

THE LEADERSHIP of the National Committee has reverted back into more familiar hands with the replacement of McGovernite Jean Westwood by Robert Strauss as chairman. And the party very solicitously asked for Daley's help in picking a new chairman for the resolutions committee. Out with the bad new politics, beginning last August when politics, in with the good old politics.

Daley's choice to carry his colors back into the battle was not one of his paunchy, wrinkle-faced cronies with an unpronounceable Polish name or even one of his paunchy, wrinkle-faced cronies with a pronounceable Irish name. It was Jane Byrne, who may be Irish but is definitely neither paunchy nor wrinkle-faced.

She is rather a trim, attractive 38-year-old woman who as Chicago's commissioner of consumer sales has never been too upset at being called "the glamor girl" of Daley's administration. But she cultivates the same primary quality as even the most weather-beaten members of the organization: loyalty to the mayor.

SITTING in her City Hall office, which is decorated by one photograph of her teenage daughter Kathy, one of John F. Kennedy and two of Daley, she says:

"The mayor can be a very warm man and when he has to be he can be very stern. I think of him much as I do my own father."

In return for her loyalty, Mrs. Byrne has received the mayor's praise. ("She runs the best department in any city in the country," he said recently.) And she has been thrust into national politics.

she was elected to the Democratic National Committee.

A former debutante, she got into politics in the first place by chance. Her husband, a Marine pilot, was killed in a plane crash in 1960 and, partly because she wanted something to do and partly because one of his speeches caught her fancy, she joined the campaign staff of Sen. John Kennedy.

Not long afterward she had her first meeting with Daley.

"THE FIRST thing he asked me," she recalled recently, "was why I had gone to work for the Kennedy organization directly instead of working for him. 'Why didn't you come to me?' he said."

"I was a little shocked. I told him that I was no big political whiz; that people hadn't exactly been begging me to come work for them. Then he said, 'But we take care of our people.'"

"I was getting impatient and I told him that after Kennedy won, I had offers of jobs in Washington — and I could show him letters if he wanted — but that I wanted to stay in Chicago. 'I worked for Kennedy because I thought he was a good man and I wanted him to win,' I told the mayor. 'Not because of what I thought I could get out of it. I used to think that's why you supported him, too, but I guess I was wrong.'"

"Just then he pushed his chair back from his desk and bent down. I thought he was tying his shoelaces but when he straightened up again there were tears running down his face."

"A little later when he said I would have to start off in the Democratic organization in Chicago by ringing doorbells in the precincts I said 'all right.' I've never regretted it."

BY 1966, Mrs. Byrne had served her political apprenticeship (she also was a full-time teacher) and she became manager of personnel for the Chicago Committee on Urban Opportunity.

Then in 1968 Daley nominated her as consumer sales commissioner, in charge of investigating unfair and illegal trade practices. She insists that since that time Daley has never pressured her to favor his political friends and has only talked to her about a pending case once, when a supermarket boycott in a black neighborhood threatened to turn into a riot.

Her new job with the National Committee is not going to make her a household word. (At least it didn't do that for her predecessor, Rozelle Boyd.) But the resolutions committee does have a real function — filtering the policy suggestions that are submitted to the Committee. And Mrs. Byrne is also a member of the future delegate selection commission, which is reworking the convention seating policy that caused so much trouble for Daley in 1972.

MRS. BYRNE remembers riding in an elevator at last year's convention while she was wearing her "Illinois delegation" button. "Oh," a fellow passenger sneered, "you're one of Daley's."

"They talked about broadening the party," she says. "But broadening doesn't mean isolating the people who can help you. The McGovern people should not have taken the elected leaders of this country and insulted them because by doing that they insulted those leaders' constituents."

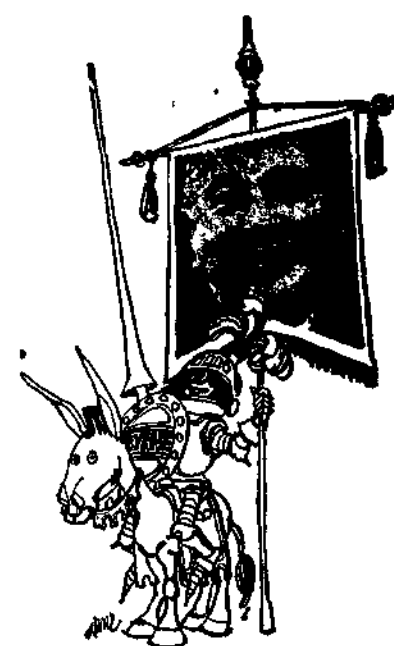

"If you don't have loyalty, you don't have a party."

With Daley and many other political warhorses exorcised from the ranks, the McGovern campaign "just became a white hat image that showed lack of practical and astute politicians," she says.

"And I can tell you something else: if Mayor Daley had anything to say about it, whether or not Tom Eagleton had been picked as the vice-presidential candidate, once he was on the ticket he would have stayed. Once the mayor supports someone, he is loyal to them. He won't throw them to the wolves."

THERE MAY be those who would argue that point. Former Illinois governor Otto Kerner and Chicago state's attorney Edward Hanrahan, for instance, are two former Daley proteges who encountered legal problems and were, if not thrown to the wolves, at least put in the mayor's dog house.

Others would say that loyalty can be carried too far, as the Chicago press has in pouncing on the revelation that one of the mayor's sons reaped a small fortune in commissions by selling insurance to the city.

But Mrs. Byrne sees only the benevolent political godfather as she prepares to help the 71-year-old Daley show those national politicians that he has a few final hurrahs left in him.

"I'm not going to be anybody's puppet," Mrs. Byrne says, "but I'd be foolish not to ask for the mayor's advice. People can talk about me being a proxy if they want. I'm proud to be associated with him."

Regner bill urges change in meeting law

State Sen. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, has introduced legislation seeking revision of the Illinois Open Meetings Law, adding two categories under which governmental bodies would be allowed to conduct closed sessions.

Regner's amendment would allow closed meeting to consider the sale of real property, and to consult with the attorney of the governmental unit on matters other than pending litigation.

The current law, which generally bars closed meetings by governmental bodies, exempts only discussions of the acquisition of real property and of matters involving pending court suits.

While the law specifies the public may be barred only from discussions of real estate acquisition and that final action must be taken publicly, Regner said an Appellate Court recently upheld the action of a school board that took final legal action for a real property acquisition in closed session.

He also said the right of a client, whether an individual or a governmental body, to consult in confidence with an attorney is based in common law.

"So what this bill actually does is to bring the law into compliance with a court ruling and with common law," Regner said.

Blame's shared for late bills

Late property tax bills — and the corresponding interest costs on warrants sold to bridge the gap between billing and collection — have become commonplace in Cook County.

Each time the bills are delayed, several hundred taxing bodies in the county have to issue tax anticipation warrants or other short-term notes. And the taxpayers pay interest on those notes.

Each time the bills are delayed those persons and agencies involved either point an accusing finger or offer excuses which range from the feeble to the plausible.

When late tax bill mailings occur more often than they do not — the case in the last 10 years — however, even the seemingly reasonable explanations become highly suspect.

This year is no exception. Cook County Board Pres. George Dunne has announced the bills will be delayed at least a month. Tax experts have estimated this delay will mean an additional $2 million in interest will be spent by the hundreds of county taxing bodies. The expense is expected to amount to about $70,000 a day.

While the announcement was followed by the customary rash of accusations, the responsibility for this year's delay, apparently, rests with John Boyle, chief judge of the county circuit court, and with the Illinois Department of Local Government Affairs.

But if they share equal responsibility in the matter, Judge Boyle has to be regarded as being more equal than the LGA.

Judge Boyle has the responsibility and duty to appoint members to the county Board of (Tax) Appeals when a vacancy occurs, as one did Dec. 1.

The work of that board is critical to the preparation and computation of tax rates and bills. Despite the fact the board was handcuffed by the existence of the vacancy, Judge Boyle did not appoint a member to that board for almost two months.

The LGA, at the same time, is responsible for determining assessments on the capital stock of certain Illinois corporations — figures equally crucial to the taxing process.

A spokesman for that department said serious computer programming problems in the office has delayed those computations.

That explanation sounds reasonable — it is difficult to argue with computer breakdowns.

However, we have learned computer problems have plagued the LGA capital stock assessment certifications for several years. Indeed, officials of the LGA have appealed unsuccessfully for at least three years to higher-ups in state government for an overhaul of the computer system.

Blaming computer problems in that light becomes a lame excuse at best.

Nevertheless, the LGA has taken steps this year to reduce the impact of its problem on county finances. Faced with an apparently unworkable computer, the state agency has acquired the assistance of Cook County's data processing division. The county should be commended for its cooperation.

That action by the LGA makes it less culpable in this year's version of the county tax mess than its counterpart, Judge Boyle.

Judge Boyle, it must be assumed, is perfectly aware of the real property tax process in this county. He also is aware, undoubtedly, that a major delay in the workings of the Board of Appeals can stymie that process and result in tremendous expense to the taxpayer.

Observers have claimed Judge Boyle was awaiting political instructions from Mayor Richard Daley before making the appointment.

It would be naive to expect Judge Boyle to make such an appointment without the advice and consent of the Chicago political power structure. However, he has the statutory responsibility to make the appointment and should not have tolerated such an extended delay.

The LGA's blame seems to stem from incompetence and misplaced priorities at the state level.

Judge Boyle, we feel, is guilty of complete disregard for the welfare of every taxpayer in the county — placing their interests secondary to political considerations.

The current episode, however, represents only the latest installment in what has become a continuing pattern in Cook County.

Most unfortunate, perhaps, is that the pattern is eliciting more shoulder-shrugs than cries of outrage.

The only way to disturb this absurd scheme is for an affected citizen or taxing body to file suit against every person and agency involved in the process. Only then can the ineffective system receive a full airing — an examination that could lead to meaningful reform.

Too many zeroes

To show how desensitized we have become to the words "millions" and "billions," especially in reference to dollars, a recent syndicated column reported the one-year earnings of a certain company at $8 billion.

Though this figure represents more than one-third the entire national budget and makes even General Motors look like a ma and pa basement business, it passed through several levels of copy editors and proofreaders and went unquestioned until it was spotted by the alert editor of a newspaper receiving the story.

The source of the boo-boo was traced back to the writer himself, who had meant, of course, to type $88 million.

That's how desensitized we have become.

That's the way the ball bounces again and again and . . .

She's delaying procrastination

This is National Procrastination Week and boy! do I ever feel like it. There are so many things I don't feel like doing that I may have to sit up nights to get it all into a single week.

The very first thing I will postpone is cleaning the linen closet which I haven't thought about doing since I didn't get it done for the Christmas of 1966. If I cleaned it I would no doubt decide that the first aid book should not be kept under the wash cloths where I remember stashing it temporarily when we moved into the house 18 years ago. And if I put it some place logical, like near the band-aids which are in the spice rack in the kitchen, I wouldn't be able to find it in time to render effective first aid.

On the office front, I will again delay putting a new ribbon in the typewriter — it's so easy to erase my boo-boos when the type gets this faint. I will admit that my memos are getting kind of hard to read but that's all right because nobody bothers to read inter-office memos anyway.

I think I will also postpone going to any of the local board meetings I should attend in order to be a Well Informed Citizen. I tried being a WIC once and almost lost my happy home. Matters brought up at the village board meeting led to my going to a plan commission meeting which led to a zoning board meeting, etc., etc., through park, library, grade school, high school and college board meetings. Some of them went on until the early morning hours and pretty soon it was common gossip in the neighborhood that I was cheating on my husband. It seemed better to be classed as just another apathetic citizen than a scarlet woman so I quit going to board meetings.

Wheeling trustee hit

At Monday night's Wheeling village board meeting trustee Valenza took away the right of freedom of speech from the Wheeling residents.

Trustee Valenza opened his comments by saying that seeing he was not seeking reelection (he is campaign chairman for TOP candidates) he felt he should say something about the previous Monday board meeting and that he was appalled by the hour and a half discussion on a "petty issue" that was under litigation and should never have been allowed to happen.

For those people who were not at the board meeting February 19, the "petty issue" trustee Valenza is referring to is "the rezoning of Strong Street." The board voted to send a recommendation to the zoning board to rezone the Strong Street area to an R-4 zoning — which is multiple dwelling. The Strong Street residents pleaded with the board to hold off this recommendation until the judge made his decision as this case is still in the judge's hands. The board ignored the residents' appeal to delay this action and the recommendation was voted on by all the trustees to send it to the zoning board.

This is the "petty issue" trustee Valenza referred to in his speech Monday night: I'm sure the residents of Strong Street don't think of the loss of their homes as a "petty issue." Trustee Valenza accused a "resident" of Wheeling, who is also a candidate in the upcoming election and chairman for the Strong Street Assn. of using this "petty issue" as a political tool.

Trustee Valenza asserted that even though there was a verbal communications, on the board's agenda, "this doesn't mean that any 'petty issue' can be discussed by just anyone." He would never allow anyone from the floor to come before the board and use a "petty issue" as a political tool.

Trustee Valenza asked, "What are meetings coming to be?" He also stated that there is a loophole in the agenda — which allows him to speak like this. That loophole is the verbal communications on the board agenda. Trustee Valenza asked his fellow trustees to recommend and vote on a ruling that would stop the outbursts from the floor concerning "petty issues." A "resident" asked to answer Trustee Valenza, but was told by Mr.

Scanlon that trustee Valenza did not ask a question but was making a statement. When the "resident" asked again to be heard he was ignored and the board then voted on the ruling to silence the residents of Wheeling. If you want to address the board you must submit a letter to the village clerk before noon on Friday and then at the "pleasure of the board" you might be able to be heard.

So, residents of Wheeling — we have a village board, who we can watch manipulate your lives, homes, taxes. But, we are not allowed a voice in our own village.

Now maybe the people of Wheeling will come and watch the trustees in action. Maybe they will find another freedom they can take from us.

Store's phone blitz tactics hit

Business today keeps protesting that despite its good intentions and constant efforts to improve its image it is still maligned.

An event last week, however, served as a perfect reminder of its true role in society. A large furniture store chain with a new store in Wheeling advertised for high school girls to work part-time.

Upon calling, they were told the jobs entailed filing in the office and dusting furniture each Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday on a regular basis.

But when they arrived at the store (I won't mention the name so that executives of Wickes furniture store won't be embarrassed), the girls learned that they would be making a telephone blitz to area homes. This they did, making nearly 400 calls each on each of the three nights.

At the end of the three-day blitz, the girls were told they would no longer be needed until the next phone blitz.

Their dreams of permanent part-time employment were shattered, along with their hopes of saving money for college, etc. But most of all, what was really shattered was their faith in business and the American system.

Unfortunately what they learned was that this IS the American system. As an adult, I can write this off as just another experience. But for teen-agers it is far more than that. Shame on you W—s, youth deserves better.

CAP seeks AT&T 'responsibility'

Senior citizen organizations in the Chicago area spearheaded by the CAP Senior Citizen Coalition with the support of the Chicago Metropolitan Area Senior Citizen Senate are pressing Illinois Bell Telephone for a 50 per cent reduction in basic telephone rates for seniors.

We are requesting the assistance of all American Telephone and Telegraph stockholders, big and small, in our fight to force Illinois Bell (98 per cent owned by AT&T) to adopt this position of corporate social responsibility. Send your proxies to the CAP Senior Citizen Coalition, 600 W. Fullerton, Chicago, Illinois 60614. We will vote them in person at the April AT&T Annual Meeting at McCormick Place. Don't sign proxies over to AT&T's management to be voted against us.

The telephone is a necessity. We need it to keep in touch with friends, relatives and doctors. We depend on it to order medicine and groceries.

AT&T with its subsidiary IBT is a highly profitable multi-billion dollar monopoly which can afford, at no extra cost to subscribers, to slash its rate for senior citizens.

Out our rates, not our lifeline.

Amnesty backed

Thank you for your editorial advocating amnesty for Americans who refused to be a part of the war in Vietnam. Some of them are POWs in federal prisons. Others are exiled. This is a time of healing. We are releasing enemy soldiers who killed our men. They are releasing pilots who bombed their people. How can we keep men in jail who would not kill anyone? Many of our forefathers fled conscription and wars in Europe by coming to the United States. We look back and applaud their courage and idealism. How can we now afford to lose men who would not cooperate with conscription and war in this country? Amnesty means forgiveness. The United States of America needs to extend and seek forgiveness.

Word a day

Business Today

by BERNARD BRENNER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The day of the "fiercely independent farmer who answers only to himself" is ending, two Agriculture Department economists predict.

Looking ahead to the shape of American agriculture in 1985, economists William T. Manley and Donn A. Reimund say they expect independently-owned and operated farms will still account for most production of grain and forage crops and range livestock.

Manley and Reimund, in a paper delivered at the Agriculture Department's recent annual "outlook conference," said they expected U.S. farming in 1985 to include two different, distinct groups.

ONE GROUP, they said, will consist of independent farmers selling crops like wheat, corn and soybeans on an open market, more or less as they do today although the farms will be fewer and larger.

Even these farms, however, will not be as completely separate from other parts of the food industry as in the past, the economists said. In some cases, growers could operate under a system of contracting ahead with purchasers before crops are produced.

Manley and Reimund added a second portion of the "farm production sector" of 1985 would operate as a closely-coordinated segment of a production processing-distribution chain.

Virtually all feeding of beef cattle, for instance, will be done under tightly-knit, industrialized arrangements in which the feeder operates as one unit in a team including slaughter operators, the economists predicted.

HOG PRODUCTION, in which 33 per cent of the output now comes from family farms, may also move toward a "more industrialized production - marketing system" if technical problems of large-scale hog production can be solved, the specialists added.

By 1985, Manley and Reimund said, it seems possible most milk and other dairy products will be supplied by cooperatives — selling their own branded products, or marketing under long-term contracts with corporations.

"In summary, the food system — and especially a significant part of the production sector — will not only more closely resemble other economic sectors by 1985, but it will be a more fully integrated part of the general economy," Manley and Reimund said.

They predicted by 1985, the food scene will be dominated by a group of "broadly diversified...merchandising organizations" producing both food and nonfood items.

'Only thing under control is wages'

Phase III may hurt labor: Meany

WASHINGTON (UPI) — AFL-CIO President George Meany warns that organized labor has "a stick in the closet" if the administration's Phase III economic program is not applied with equity. Meany, the head of 14 million union members, said Sunday he wanted to cooperate with President Nixon "in order to keep the prices down."

But he complained of "galloping inflation" and food prices "absolutely running wild."

"The only thing we have got under control is the workers' wages, and we think this is eminently and very definitely unfair," Meany said.

MEANY CRITICIZED statements by Nixon that it would not be wise to continue rent controls, and by Treasury Sec. George Shultz that it would not be good to control farm prices.

"The President is saying to the landlord, we can't touch him because he will go on strike if we touch him, and George Shultz is saying, the farmer, we can't touch him, he will go on strike — he won't plant."

"So the point is...that there is a stick in the closet for labor," Meany said. His reference was to a statement Nixon made earlier this year he had a big stick in his closet he would use if inflation got out of line.

MEANY SAID he was "mystified" by the statements of administration officials last week that the 5.5 per cent wage ceiling in earlier phases of the economic program would be strictly enforced in the current Phase III.

Meany said the Advisory Committee to the Cost of Living Council, which was assigned the task of recommending policy for Phase III, drafted a statement saying no single wage standard could be applied practically to the economy.

"If you ask me where we are going on the 5.5 per cent, I am just as mystified as you are," Meany said.

"I am quite sure there will be higher settlements...and I am quite sure they will be approved by the Cost of Living Council this year as they were last year," he said.

New food label proposals won't hike prices: FDA

The Food and Drug Administration told the food industry last week that newly proposed regulations for labeling nutritional content of food products do not necessarily have to result in higher prices.

The cost factor has been a primary objection voiced by the food industry since the regulations were issued last month. But Dr. Neal Dunning, chief of the FDA's Branch of Food and Nutrition Resources, suggested to members of the food industry meeting in Chicago the cost of labeling could be absorbed by existing advertising budgets.

Dunning said the labeling will "lead to better quality control" by manufacturers, who can then "build a marketing image around the concept of nutrition."

A FEW YEARS ago, Dunning said, such an advertising position would not have been effective, but today, he said, "consumers want this (type of information)."

"The consumer's voice is going to be heard," Dunning said.

Representing the food industry at the conference, Dr. Robert Smith, assistant director of research and development for the Quaker Oats Co., said "most food industry people are in favor of the food labeling concept."

But, he said, the specific proposals issued by the FDA "have raised the hackles of some industry people."

SMITH OUTLINED four major objections to the proposed regulations.

• The regulations, because they would be mandatory, "appear to say there is only one way to describe the nutrients in food products."

• Industry doubts that labeling will improve the nutritional level of Americans.

• The cost of the labeling will raise food prices at a time when "the nation ranks food cost ahead of nutrition" as a problem.

• The time requirement for compliance is "unreasonable."

The regulations, if adopted according to schedule, would become effective sometime this spring. Smith proposed a two to five-year trial period during which compliance would be voluntary and manufacturers could "learn more about their products."

SMITH ALSO criticized the regulation that requires labeling of added nutrients only if the product is advertised as "enriched" or somehow superior nutritionally, or if the label solicits letters from consumers requesting "further nutritional information."

Dunning countered "If you don't talk about nutritional qualities, you don't have to label, but if you do make nutritional claims, you have to tell the whole story." He termed the regulation "very straightforward."

He also criticized the proposal of a two to five-year trial period, noting "many industries are already quite well-informed" about their products, and he cited cereal manufacturers, "who have been listing ingredients for years." The cereal industry was also the subject of intensive Congressional hearings on nutritional quality three years ago.

Dunning said adoption of the proposed federal regulations on a mandatory basis is desirable to insure uniformity, and to avoid conflicting state regulations.

Referring to claims nutritional labeling will not make any difference in what people buy and eat, Dunning said the FDA plans "a large consumer education program" on nutrition.

Ask The IRS

Q) Is it true that this year's Federal income tax return asks questions related to Federal revenue sharing?

A) Yes. Your 1972 Form 1040 and short Form 1040A ask two questions related to the sharing of Federal money with state and local governments. One question asks the location of your principal place of residence (state, county, locality and township); the second question asks for the number of your dependents who are filing a return of their own or who did not live at your principal place of residence at the end of 1972.

You must supply the correct information in your answers to these questions to ensure that your state, county and local community, receive their rightful share of revenue sharing funds.

Q) Does every taxpayer have to give his state, county, locality and township in answering the revenue sharing question on place of residence?

A) All of this information may not be required. Only certain states have townships and these are specified in your tax form instructions. If your state is not listed there, you can leave this column of your tax return blank. Secondly, there are a few places such as Baltimore City, Md. and St. Louis, Mo., that are not within a county. Once again, these areas are listed in your instructions.

Unless you lived outside the U.S. on Dec. 31, 1972, you must enter the abbreviation for your state in the column provided. In addition, if you lived inside an incorporated city, town, or village, print the name of the municipality in the "locality" column. If you did not live inside the boundaries of such a location, check the box in this column.

Q) Can you give me some tips on how to guard against dishonest tax preparers?

A) The IRS offers the following advice to taxpayers seeking assistance from commercial income tax return preparers: never sign a blank return; do not sign a tax return prepared in pencil because it can be changed later; do not allow your refund check to be mailed to the preparer; avoid the advisor who "guarantees" refunds, wants a percentage of the refund, or supposedly knows all the angles; and avoid the preparer who advises a taxpayer to overstate deductions, claim fictitious dependents or omit income.

In addition, taxpayers should insist that the tax preparer sign the return he prepares and enter his tax identifying number. Finally, be sure to keep a copy of your return.

Q) What are the rules for deducting finance charges on department store revolving charge accounts?

A) You may deduct the "finance charge" levied by retail stores on your revolving charge accounts if the charges are based on your unpaid balances and computed monthly. Also, in the case of bank credit card plans, you can deduct the finance charge if no part of this amount is for service charges, loan fees, credit investigation fees, etc.

However, if you buy items on the installment plan and the carrying charges are separately stated, but the interest charge cannot be ascertained, deduct the lower of (1) 6 per cent of your average unpaid monthly balance or (2) the actual charge for the year. For more details, see IRS Publication 545, "Income Tax Deduction for Interest Expense." Use the order blank on the back of your tax forms package to obtain a free copy.

Q) I had no income tax liability for 1972, but I'm filing a return to recover income tax withheld from my pay. Can I still designate $1 of the tax withheld towards the Presidential Election Campaign Fund?

A) No. You can only make the $1 check-off if you had an income tax liability. This does not mean because you are getting a refund, you can't use the $1 check-off, but it does mean you must be able to show tax on line 20 of your Form 1040 or line 21 of your short Form 1040A to use the check-off.

Savings, loan gains in month behind last year

Savings gains of savings and loan associations in January ran slightly behind January of last year, according to the United States Savings and Loan League.

The League estimated the net gain in deposits at savings and loan associations was $3.1 billion, trailing last year's $3.3 billion gain by 5 per cent. It was the second best January on record.

"The contraction in the rate of growth appears directly related to the increase in short-term rates since mid-November when the Treasury bill rate began to approach the average return on savings deposits at associations of 5.35 per cent," said the League.

The League noted at year-end 1972, loans in process and loan commitments outstanding at savings associations totaled $17.3 billion. This means associations are committed to approximately four months lending volume with closings and acquisitions running at $4.4 billion a month.

Economy put market into 'state of shock'

NEW YORK (UPI) — The market appears to be in a state of "present shock," according to Edward A. Viner & Co. Economic events occur with such rapidity that the individual and institutional investor "overreact to each new development."

Market activity has become concentrated in a handful of high growth and Dow Jones issues, the firm notes, while "the majority of securities have been neglected." The firm has no antidote for the present "pessimistic mood," but believes most economic uncertainties have been discounted by the market.

The Doctor Says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Is there any proven medical value in boiling sea water for its trace minerals to cure diabetes or arthritis in older people? Also since goat's milk is lower in fat, is it better for a diabetic or for overweight people?

Dear Reader — There is absolutely no dependable evidence that boiled sea water is a satisfactory cure for either diabetes or arthritis. I know that boiled sea water has been pushed by some individuals for this but most reputable scientists would say that there is no evidence of it having any value for this purpose.

As far as goat's milk is concerned, it is not lower in fat. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, goat's milk is 4 per cent fat whereas the commercial variety of cow's milk sold is usually 3.5 per cent fat. Thus, there is no advantage in drinking goat's milk as opposed to cow's milk. Goat's milk has sometimes been recommended because it is more easily digested or sometimes because of allergies to cow's milk. This is unrelated to the fat content.

Now, it is true that if you have a local milk supply available you can get milk which is considerably richer than that commercially available. Milk from Jersey cows, for example, often contains more than 6 per cent butterfat while other breeds of cows, such as the Holstein, produce milk which is much lower in butterfat content.

Dear Dr. Lamb — My mother-in-law had a stroke seven years ago which damaged her brain and she was told not to use salt which she uses constantly. I would like to know if tomatoes, ketchup, or tomato juice is hurting her condition.

I feel it is because it contains calcium salt.

Dear Reader — The reason your doctor asked your mother-in-law to restrict salt was to avoid sodium. Normal table salt is made up of sodium chloride. This really doesn't have anything to do with calcium. Usually the sodium is restricted to help control blood pressure or to prevent the accumulation of fluid in people who have this problem, for example, with heart failure.

Certainly if she is using salt and her doctor advised her not to it's not doing her any good and may be causing her some significant harm. If she has high blood pressure and is supposed to be on a salt-restricted diet it will make it very difficult to manage her problem.

Fresh, raw, ripe tomatoes are relatively low in sodium content and are fine. Products made from tomatoes often contain lots of salt. Commercial tomato juice is one of these unless you get a dietetic type of juice which is low in sodium. Ketchup (except dietetic low sodium products) is exceptionally high in sodium salt and certainly should be avoided by anyone on a low-salt diet.

Individuals on low-salt diets should not add salt to the preparation of any of their foods, and if they limit the animal products in their diet and follow this procedure, they will have a fairly low sodium diet. A good low sodium source of protein is common mature beans and of these, the old Navy bean is as good as any. They contain a lot of protein and are as low in sodium as rice. They are also low in fat content.

The Lighter Side...by Dick West

How about amnesty for students with deferments?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ever since student deferments were abolished a couple of years ago, the percentage of draft age men enrolled in college has been declining.

This may be only a coincidence but it seems to suggest dropping deferments has somehow blunted the quest for intellectual enlightenment among America's youth.

Two student teachers meet BA requirements

Wilson Baker, 300 Touhy Ave. and Jacquelyn Means, 1089 S. Wolf Rd., both of Des Plaines and seniors at Elmhurst College, recently completed their student teaching requirements for the bachelor of arts degree.

During the current fall semester, Baker and Miss Means worked as student instructors in history.

A four-year private, liberal arts college located 16 miles west of Chicago, Elmhurst College confers the bachelor of arts degree in 27 major areas of study.

Delaney Marine PFC

Marine Pfc. Mark T. Delaney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard P. Delaney, 1027 Second Ave., Des Plaines, was promoted to his present rank upon graduation from basic training at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot in San Diego.

He received the meritorious promotion in recognition of his outstanding performance in all phases of recruit training. He is a 1970 graduate of St. Viator High School in Arlington Heights and attended Eastern Illinois University in Charleston.

At least there is a strong inference a young man's thirst for knowledge may be intensified by distaste for military service.

And if such be the case, then it follows some students must have matriculated to avoid going to Vietnam.

THE ALTERNATIVES being going to prison or to Canada, they opted for higher education. So now a touchy question arises:

With a cease fire in effect in Vietnam, do students who went to college to dodge the draft have a moral obligation to remain in school? Or should they be granted amnesty?

Seeking to get the feel of the public pulse on this sensitive issue, I posed that question in a series of man-on-the-street interviews. Here are some of the typical responses:

Mrs. Nellie Nightstep, housewife and mother: "As a housewife and mother, I say they should be forgiven. Those students were willing to make the sacrifice of enrolling in college to uphold a principle. The wounds created by the war will heal quicker by letting them rejoin society."

Commodore Claus von Frigate, retired ferryboat commander: "Principle, principle! They made their choice and now they should have to pay the price by staying in college until they graduate or rot, whichever comes first."

Millie Perceclobe, beautician: "Don't talk to me about student amnesty. My kid brother was sent to Vietnam and caught VD. Those college boys should have been forced to take the same risk."

Omar Sama-Serif, Persian Poet-philosopher now in the United States on a fellowship: "In my country we have a saying: 'If you want to dance you have to pay Arthur Murray.' That sums up my feelings on the student amnesty matter."

Sigmund Waterstock, financier: "Give those students amnesty and the next time there's a war the country will be overrun with pseudo-intellectuals."

Samuel Goodfringe, labor leader: "amnesty for workers who beat the draft by getting jobs in essential industry, yes. Student amnesty, no."

Owly Sue Cranny, dance studio telephone quiz operator: "Haven't those poor students been made to suffer enough? Answer that and you will win six free rumba lessons."

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

The deep sea finesse is taken against several missing cards that outrank the finessing card. You don't really expect a deep sea finesse to win, but you do hope it will shut out some of the cards finessed against.

Some deep sea finessees are of little value. Others can give you an extra chance to gain a trick.

Six clubs would be a better contract than six no-trump, but if this hand were played in a world championship contest it is doubtful if even one pair would get the club slam.

As for six no-trump, the mirror distribution with each partner having the same length in each suit leaves South with only 22 sure winners. He needs to score a second spade trick for his slam and the deep sea finesse gets it for him.

At some stage in the play, while he still has control of all suits, he leads a spade from dummy and plays his nine-spot. The nine forces the king and he makes his slam.

Was the play lucky? Of course! On the other hand, it risked nothing because if it lost to the jack or 10 he would still have

District honors for Grove

by JIM COOK
Gymnastics Editor

It's a wonder Elk Grove gymnastics coach Fred Gaines wasn't trying to schedule a dual meet following the district competition his school had just hosted.

The Grenadiers took five other teams to the cleaners with an incredible assortment of individual excellence, balance and depth in registering 174 winning points.

"I think our raw score was about 152 tonight," Gaines remarked after watching his strongmen sweep just about everything but the opposing team's bus drivers onto the awards platform. Elk Grove would, indeed, have come temptingly close to the national high school high of 154-plus as it tallied 152.30.

Forest View parted the green waters for second place with 64 points with East Leyden third at 61.5. Maine South notched fourth with 55 points ahead of rivals Maine East (22.5) and Maine West (12.8).

In steamrolling to the title, the Grenadiers qualified 20 gymnasts to the Niles West Sectional this weekend with Forest View contributing another eight in what promises to be a very representative showing by the Mid-Suburban League.

Only two things caused concern for the Grenadiers all night. The first came on floor exercise where Falcon Steve Roha cashed a nifty 8.15 for the title and Kerry McMahon and Scott Phillips were sectional shoos-ins by virtue of finishing among the top five with 8.1 and 7.55, respectively.

But junior standout Bill Bosslet had to be fished out of the at-large pool with a 7.25 before he got the green light to Niles West in the event. Likewise for Falcon Chet Szostek whose 7.35 split the at-large field.

The other "scare" for Elk Grove came in the very next event when rodeo ace Bob Siemianowski was bucked off the side horse during his mount. The lanky senior recovered for a 7.5 and an easy bye into the sectionals.

Gren Mike Heiberger picked up the slack with his best effort of the year for the horse title on an average of 8.3. Siemianowski's total fit into third place ahead of teammate Tom Chen's 7.35.

Having survived those two brief hazards, Elk Grove was virtually unbeatable. The Grenadiers went 1-2 in each of the final five event categories — sweeping four of them.

The horizontal bar trio of Phillips, Bosslet and Mike Broderick crowded the medal distribution center off an 8.8, 8.25 and 7.65, respectively.

The landslide resumed on trampoline where flyers Dave Hadley (8.45), Dave Khoshaba (8.35) and Steve Torgersen (8.85) left the field bouncing in his wake.

Ditto parallel bars. Phillips (8.45), Bosslet (8.2) and improving Dave Niemeyer (7.95) were unparalleled in another Grenadier sweep.

Jack Henry emerged as king of the rings with an 8.55 average and Phillips supported with an 8.05. After a brief interruption by Maine South's Rich Behnke (8.05), Bosslet put the lid on the event with a 7.85.

Phillips and Bosslet, perhaps tiring more from their constant trips to the trophy platform than from their routines, took the jaunt again when the all-around awards were presented off totals of 39.35 and 35.90, respectively.

Forest View ducked from under Elk Grove's shadow frequently enough to post its best showing of the season. Roha's blue-ribbon effort on floor ex started the ball rolling for the Falcons.

While neither Kevin Harvey's 7.05 nor Mark Ohlsson's 6.6 were high enough to qualify in the "ranked" category, they were both easily advanced in the at-large class.

Don Lanham made his first qualifying appearance on high bar where his giants connected for a fifth-place 7.4 before he returned in the same position on parallel bars with a 7.0.

Fives proved to be wild for Lanham after his 7.8 rings routine fell into the fifth place spot. His consistent scoring earned third-place honors in all-around with 32.9 points.

SPOTLIGHT ON GYMNASTICS

TOM TERRIFIC. Hersey rings ace Tom Doczi was unchallenged in his specialty Friday after clicking for a nifty 8.35 rings routine. It was one of six blue ribbons

Hersey stuffs 20 sectional berths

One short of the limit.

That was Hersey's status following an awesome display at its own district gymnastics meet Friday. The Huskies dismantled a field of five other teams by stuffing the sectional ballot box with 20 positions for 170 points.

Wheeling will send 13 to the Conant Sectional after finishing second at Hersey with 87 and Prospect will also ship 13 to Hoffman Estates by virtue of its third place 81.5 points.

Deerfield finished fourth with 27.5 points ahead of North Chicago's 14 and Lake Forest's 11.

Hersey qualified the maximum of three competitors in each of six events and failed in all-around simply because Coach Don Von Ebers only entered two boys. So dominant were the Brown and Orange that 18 of its sectional qualifiers were "ranked" (finishing in the top five).

The Huskies let everyone know their intentions in the opening floor exercise competition where Steve Schwabe and Blake Frodin shared gold medals with superb 8.55's. Ron Mitsos made it a sweep for Hersey with a third-place 8.2 and the romp was on.

It was nearly the same story on side horse where Bruce Freedman corralled the piece with 8.3, Bob Kornely added runnerup support with 8.2 and John Maseng came home in fourth with 6.7.

It wasn't until horizontal bar when Hersey was forced to dip into the at-large field for its third qualifier. Joe Shepherd earned the Huskies' third straight blue ribbon with a booming 8.6 and John Ludwigsen supported with a third-place 8.0. Captain Roger Kuhns finished seventh overall, but was an easy choice in the at-large pool.

Another Hersey parade developed on tramp when sweeping Jack McLaughlin (8.45), John Braddock (8.4) and Don Zasadny (7.35) mounted the bed.

In the only event the Huskies failed to capture, Joe Shepherd finished second on parallel bars with 8.05, Jeff Meessmann third with 7.55 and Kuhns fifth with 6.95.

If you can call it its worst showing of the evening, Huskie Tom Doczi captured the district rings title with 8.35, Dave Yeiser finished in a deadlock for third with 7.85 and Steve Wilson was swept into the at-large pool after finishing ninth with a 7.15.

Shepherd paced the all-around competition with a total of 36.50 and Kuhns earned the runnerup berth with 29.35.

In posting an overall second in the competition, Wheeling enjoyed its best success on parallel bars where Bill Harvel was the only one to solve a path to the top of the awards stand among the Huskies.

Harvel soared to a nifty 8.25 on high bar while Gary Pagano added a fifth with 6.85 and Rich Tomczyk a sixth in 6.7. Dennis Rieter earned a fifth on floor exercise with 7.45 and Jim Styles added a 10th with 6.3 to get the Wildcats rolling.

Wheeling's Dave Peterson registered a season-high 7.85 to claim a third-place prize on parallel bars where underclassman Jeff Kee added an eighth with 4.4.

The 'Cats earned their first three-man qualifying event on high bar where Styles notched a sixth with 7.2, Pagano an eighth with 5.9 and Tom Antoni a ninth with 5.45. Greg Moriarity was the lone Wheeling point-getter on trampoline with a fourth off a 7.3 average.

Pagano was in his best form of the season on rings in recording a third-place tie 7.55. George Olson contributed a 7.6 for sixth and Jim Scott a 7.4 for eighth in another three-man qualifying event for Wheeling.

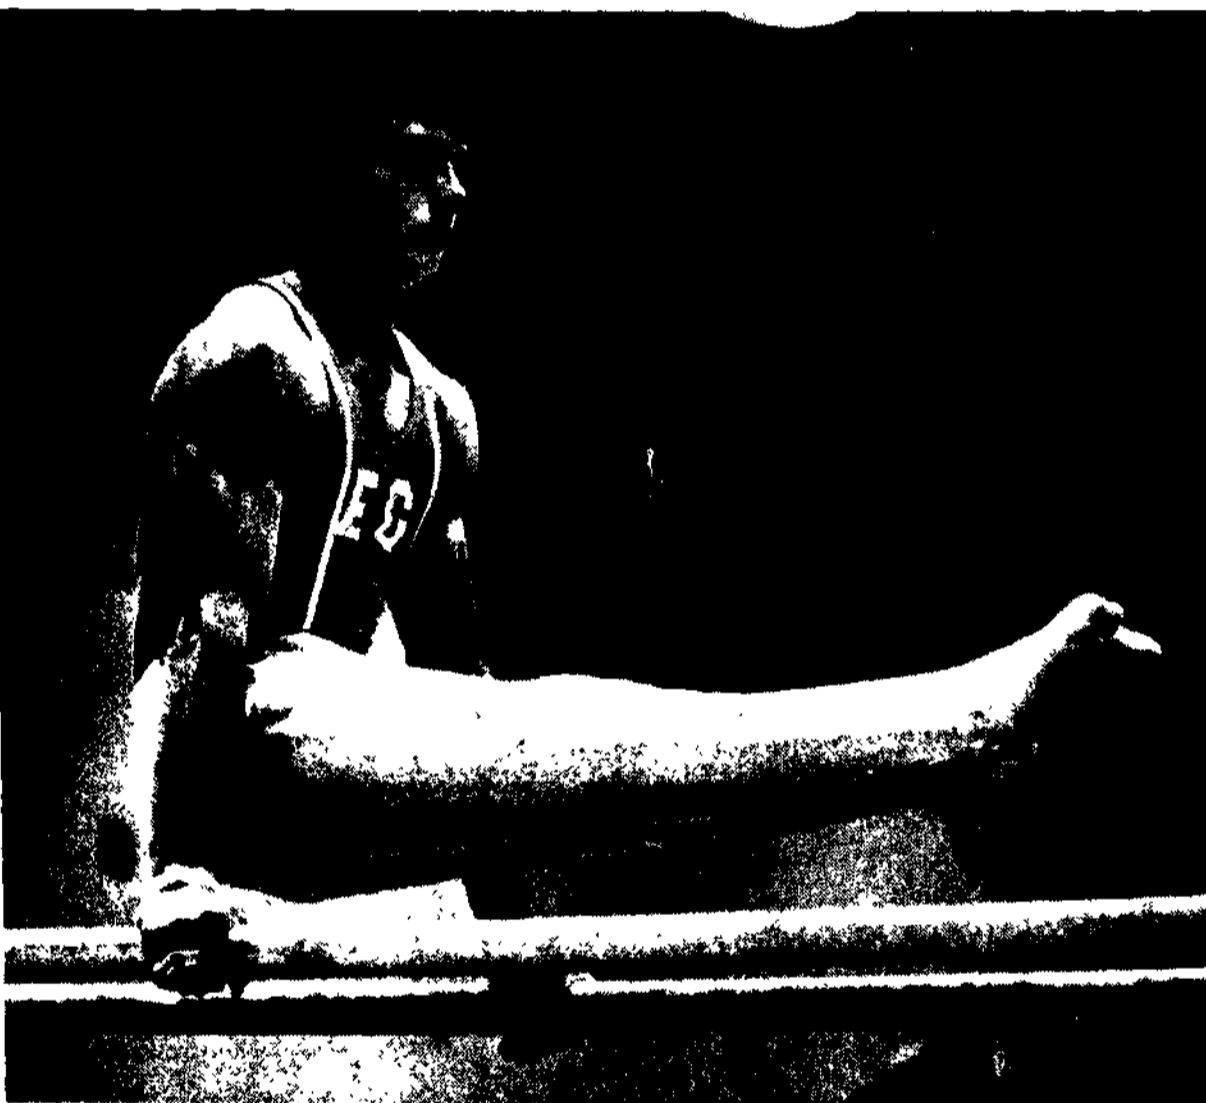

Both Pagano and Styles were easy sectional advances in all-around as Pagano posted 27.85 and Styles 25.9 for third and fourth, respectively.

Prospect, while shaded into third place in the final standings, qualified 13 boys for the Conant Sectional. The Knights advanced a pair of performers in every event but parallel bars. Frosh Doug Zahour nabbed a fourth place 7.7 and Paul Shively added a ninth place 6.6 on the floor.

Steve Scheibel and Dan Bartlett finished fifth and sixth, respectively on side horse with 5.6 and 5.3 while Bob McKee (7.6) and Jim McBride (7.45) nailed down fourth and fifth on horizontal bar with 7.6 and 7.45, respectively.

Gary Tonnese bounced to a fifth-place 6.95 on tramp and got support from McKee's 6.65 which earned sixth spot and five team points. Kurt Cederburg's 6.25 on parallel bars was the lone Knight point-getter, but Shively's sparkling 8.15 on rings for second and John O'Connor's 7.5 for seventh insured two more sectional qualifiers.

The Knights will also boast a pair of all-arounders as Paul Morath's 26.65 and Doug Zahour's 20.40 earned fifth and seventh-place credentials, respectively.

LEVATING. ELK GROVE's all-around ace Scott Phillips with 174 points. Phillips is state ranked in horizontal bar, parallel bars and all-around, with 174 points. Phillips is state ranked in horizontal bar, parallel bars and all-around, with 174 points.

Host Meadows bests guests

Rolling Meadows completed a district sweep by three area hosts in perhaps the most competitive action in the state. The Mustangs out-distanced a field of five other Mid-Suburban League teams with 112 points.

Conant notched the runnerup spot with 79.5 points to narrowly best Palatine's challenging 78. Arlington counted 64 markers with Fremd's 50.5 in pursuit. Schaumburg trailed the field with eight tallies.

The close team scoring also reflected the evenly balanced number of qualifiers that will be sent to the Conant Sectional. Meadows will advance 17 members, Conant, 16, Palatine 15, Arlington 12, Fremd 11 and Schaumburg four.

The Mustangs hinted at their supremacy with 16 points in the opening floor exercise competition behind Mike Goddard's 8.2 for second and Jim Mackitt's 7.9 for fourth.

Conant's Tom Gardner earned the floor title with a nifty 8.65 while teammate an Miller contributed a 7.15. Palatine produced a pair in the top 10 with Bill Snyder hitting 7.45 and Bob Gran 7.35 as did Arlington to the tune of Don Marquis' 7.4 and Dan White's 6.9. Fremd's Dale Burrow notched third with an 8.15 and Ted Ratz rounded out the top 10 for the Vikes with a 6.65.

Arlington put a stranglehold on side horse as John Golbeck (7.9), Nick Koehnke (7.2) and Geoff Rieder (7.1) all finished among the top five, but Blaine Dahl's 8.4 won the event for Meadows and Mike Goddard's complementary 7.15 for fourth gave the Mustangs a strong one-two punch.

Conant's Jerry Hawkinson and Mike Cohen found scoring room with 6.85 and 5.9, respectively, while Mustang Dave Gurka hit 6.7 and Palatine's Dan Maher and Chip Howes registered 6.85 and 5.65, respectively.

Godawa marched Meadows to the top of the horizontal bar with an 8.1 and teammate Dave Sundbloom contributed a 6.5. Conant enjoyed the most success as Dean Miller, (7.75), Rich Newmann (6.65) and Tim Dera (6.4) all cracked the top 10.

Palatine counted a pair in Bob Schergen's 8.05 and Bob Gran's 6.55 as did Fremd with Bruce Longhenry (7.25) and Bob Wagner (6.2) on board. Saxon Asle Klemma qualified "ranked" with a fifth-place 7.1 routine.

The Cardinals were back in business on trampoline where Bob Flubacher flew to a season-high 3.5 for honors. Kurt Davis (7.3) and Ray Herman (6.8) joined their teammate in the scoring. Meadows landed its duo of Al Sabatka (7.7) and Jim Losio (7.1) while Conant's Tom Hall (7.35) and Gardner shared the same score for third.

Fremd bunched two in the tallying

Mid-Suburban qualifies 149 for sectional competition

Gymnastics Editor

The mighty Mid-Suburban League (excluding Glenbrook North) will send an army of 149 gymnasts to invade two sectionals in the final step to the state championships.

The massive draft and induction came as the result of a spectacular area display at three different district sites over the weekend that found Hersey, Rolling Meadows and Elk Grove winning in their own fieldhouses.

MSL standard bearers will now funnel into either the Conant Sectional or the Niles West Sectional where the final competition before the teams and individuals get invitations to Prospect promises to be keen.

District champs Hersey (29 qualifiers) and Meadows (17) will be joined by Conant (16), Palatine (15), Prospect (13), Wheeling (13), Arlington (12), Fremd (11) and Schaumburg (4) at Conant.

Elk Grove's district titlists include 20 sectional qualifiers and Forest View numbers eight as the two schools skip into Niles West.

The Conant Sectional will unfold in two sessions beginning with floor exercise, side horse and horizontal bar Thursday at 7 p.m. and continuing with trampoline, parallel bars and still rings Friday at 7 p.m. Niles West will conduct its eliminations in two sessions Saturday beginning at 1 p.m. and concluding with another at 7 p.m.

The ticket to the state finals is challenging to say the least. Gymnasts finishing in the top three places in each event will be advanced as "ranked" qualifiers while an additional 12 who were not ranked, but whose scores are the highest among all four state sectionals, will also be given the green light to Prospect.

CONANT SECTIONAL

The Mid-Suburban reps should be the class of this field which will also draw qualifiers from the Barrington District. While Waukegan (17), Mundelein (12) and Barrington (12) appear to have the man-power, they don't have the depth. Only six of that district's gymnasts were able to crack the 64-position all-large field.

Hersey is favored to wear the sectional crown off its expected dominance in the districts. While the sectional will thin out the numbers considerably, Hersey should still have a firm contingent poised for the state meet.

Rolling Meadows should fare well individually with three-time winner Mike Godawa and Blaine Dahl fresh off district gold medals. Conant's district free ex champ Tom Gardner should make the most noise for the Cougars, but he'll have rugged competition from the Huskies.

Palatine thrives on the still rings where Dick Alcina, Scott Falkanger and Dan Flick all figured into the district's top five. The Pirates also have ammo in p-bar champ Ken Evensen.

Both Prospect and Wheeling show balance with qualifiers in every event, but they'll be cutting each other's throat on rings where each is strong. Knight Paul Shively captured a second on rings in the Hersey District while Wildcat Bill Harvel was a district champ on parallel bars.

Arlington's bread and butter is its side horse team of John Golbeck, Nick Koehnke and Geoff Rieder who are all capable of qualifying for state if they hit. Bob Flubacher also proved he can bounce with the best by bagging the district title on trampoline.

Fremd has found success on parallel bars where Mike Baldocchi and Jim Benson provide a potent 1-2 punch. Don Knigge is a serious threat to tre rings title if he can hit his specialty.

Schaumburg's marbles rest with rapidly-improving Asle Klemma who unrivaled a 7.1 routine in the districts to earn a "ranked" invitation to Conant.

Waukegan will pose threats in side eraser Marvin O'Neal (8.0) and all-arounder Don Wirtala (6.95 average). Mundelein owns a top floor man in Dave Kullen (8.5) and Barrington will be toughest in free ex where it qualified three performers.

NILES WEST SECTIONAL

A stellar field awaits the state hopefuls from Elk Grove and Forest View at Niles West. District qualifiers from both sites, Niles East and Glenbrook South, will also converge there in what many feel will be the state's toughest sectional shootout. Elk Grove's stranglehold at its own district and its 20 sectional qualifiers will be playing Russian Roulette with the likes of Evanston, Niles East, Niles West, Niles North, and New Trier East—all of which scored at least 130 during the dual-meet season.

The Grenadiers have been hot lately and should qualify over half their sectional numbers into the state meet. Forest View will rely heavily on district floor exercise champ Steve Rohm and versatile all-around performer Don Lanham who own the majority of the Falcons' eight sectional positions.

Niles East is carrying in 18 qualifiers, Evanston 17, Niles North and New Trier East 16 apiece, Niles West 13 and Glenbrook South, a dozen.

Niles East boasts a tough high bar man in Rick Robin (8.3) and a solid ring threat in Keith Kreitman (8.2). Robin also averages 7.85 in all-around.

That category, though, should belong to Niles West freshman phenom Bar Connor who threw an 8.8 parallel bar routine and averages over eight points for five events of work. Jim Roland worked an 8.0 on tramp for West and ringman Scott Gutman hit 7.95.

Niles North fields a strong free ex team (8.3, 7.75 and 7.7), owns a talented high bar candidate in Lauren Berland (8.0), can expect another 8.0 from p-bar man Mike Kravitz and has a state contending rings performer in Steve Sossman (8.75).

Chuck Sullerman throws 8.7 routines in free ex for Evanston, Fred Stukenberg hit 8.0 on horse, Eric Erickson nailed an 8.4 on high bar and Brian Franczyk is an 8.4 on trampoline.

New Trier East's Tom Pearson captured high bar with 8.65 and Larry Pattis took free ex for New Trier West with 8.4. Glenbrook South's Scott Ponto is a threat on rings with an 8.4.

STATE-RANKED Ken Evensen of Palatine soared to a season-high 8.4 on parallel bars in the Rolling Meadows District. His performance rates fifth best in Illinois. The Pirates finished third with 78 points.

Sue Chips stars; Harper girls 4th

The Harper Women's Gymnastics Team completed another very successful season by finishing fourth in the state championships at Illinois State University.

The achievement matched last year's state placement and is quite extraordinary considering Harper is only in its second season of competition.

"The girls performed every bit as well as I expected," coach Martha Lynn Bolt said. "Considering we were competing effort of intermediate-ranked Sue Chips. Since Sue's the lone gymnast from Harper in that class, competition was scarce throughout the year. But she clicked for a blue ribbon off a 7.8 on uneven parallel bars, a second in vaulting behind a 6.33, a 5.0 on balance beam and a 6.3 in floor ex for an overall 26.03 all-around total and another second place trophy.

"She was the only intermediate gymnast from a junior college," Miss Bolt beamed. "In two years, she's accomplished what some girls don't achieve in four years."

Sue's effort qualified her for advanced work next year — a rarity at any school. "The routines are much more difficult," Miss Bolt added.

Despite the pressure of the state meet, Harper met the tension with its usual steady display. The floor exercise team of Martha Selts (6.0), Mille Blanco (6.6) Kathy Oakley (6.2) and Kris Fredrickson (6.1) was consistent again.

Martha returned for a duplicate 6.6 on balance beam and Lynn Pearson matched it before Kathy contributed a 6.3 and Mille a 5.8.

Lynn rose to the occasion in vaulting with a nifty 6.5 as Martha added a 6.0, Kris a 5.8 and Margaret Newmann a 5.6. Harper's most potent scoring came on uneven parallel bars where Lynn soared to 7.3, Pat Kiwitz chipped in with 7.0, Martha supported with a 6.8 and Margaret spun to a 5.8.

against many four-year universities, I was very pleased with the girls' performance."

Seventeen schools entered the finals which were captured by Triton's 82.30 points and followed by Western Illinois' 81.36, Morris Valley's 79.64 and Harper's 78.40.

But perhaps most gratifying was the with Glen Stanford hitting 7.05 and sophomore Dick Morris, 8.8 while Palatine was counting the 6.9 of Bill Snyder.

Pirate Ken Evensen picked the right time to click for his best routine of the year when he notched a blistering 8.4 on parallel bars. Brother Larry complemented with 7.25.

Conant fared well with the trio of Rich Newman (7.45), Tim Derr (6.75) and Gardner (6.7) all scoring and Fremd claimed second and fifth with Mike Baldocchi (7.75) and Jim Benson (7.4) earning berths.

Mustangs Mike Godawa (7.6) and Terry Conroy (7.2) saved room for Arlington's Drew Parlee, C. 6.95.

Meadows and Palatine each netted three places on still rings as Godawa captured the championship with 8.55 ahead of teammates Bill Brandstatt (7.15) and Terry Conroy (6.8). Pirates Dick Alcina (8.05), Scott Falkanger (7.9) and Dan Flick (7.45) were bunched in places three through fifth.

Fremd's Don Knigge took trampoline honors with 8.35 while sophomore Jim Noll (6.95) and Pete Hendricks (6.75)

Avigliano creates instant winner

(Editor's Note: This is the ninth in an 11-part series featuring the coaches who have made the Mid-Suburban League what many consider the most fertile high school gymnastics territory in the nation. The coaches will appear alphabetically according to the schools they represent.)

Rolling Meadows High School is still waiting to celebrate its second full year in existence and first as a varsity competitor.

But the Mustangs' gymnastics program has already qualified as one of the best in the state of Illinois. Vic (possibly a shortened version of "victory") Avigliano is chiefly responsible for Meadows' overnight success.

While crediting assistant coaches Art Weidner and Al Gallatte, the 30-year-old Avigliano has guided the Mustangs to a 17-2 dual-meet mark and a high of 138.67 this season.

As a high schooler at East Leyden, Vic was in the capable hands of Don Von Ebers, now a Mid-Suburban opponent at Hersey. Injuries plagued Avigliano's prep career, but before graduating in 1961, he finished in the top 10 in the state on both parallel bars and horizontal bar.

Vic pursued his gymnastics endeavors at Eastern Illinois University where he was conference champion his junior year on both parallel bars and all-around. His senior term produced fourths in the same two categories at the NAIA tourney.

"I can remember several times when I thought about quitting," Avigliano reminisced. "Gymnastics has to be one of the toughest sports to stay with, especially as a freshman when all of your time is spent on fundamentals and basics."

"Everyone wants to come out and begin throwing the doubles off the high bar," Vic continued. "It's hard at the start, but finally you get a chance at a trick and when you can do it, then the satisfaction comes."

Vic Avigliano

Avigliano feels fortunate to be a member of the elite Mid-Suburban League coaching ranks, but also recognizes its demands.

"I like to take my time getting the kids prepared," he said, "but you don't get that chance in this league. You have to be ready with your best the second or third week of the season or else you're a loser. It almost cheats the kids when you can't take your time with them."

Avigliano also has an interesting philosophy about side horsemen. "I don't think any other piece (equipment) requires more discipline than the beam," he kindly referred to it.

"I don't mean just the self discipline required to work the thing, but also in the classroom, too. It seems like all good side horsemen are tall, thin fellows with an A average. Whenever I look for someone to work it, that's what I look for," he joked.

Avigliano, an 85-pound wrestler in junior high school where he appeared to have a future in the sport, also doubles as a trainer for both the Mustang football and track teams.

"I guess I've had so many injuries, that they figure I'm good at it," he chuckled while describing various torn ligaments and chest injuries he's suffered during his years as a competitor.

Vic's contributed assistant coaching stints at Oak Lawn (one year) and Elk Grove (four years) before taking the reins at Meadows.

And already he's shared some experiences other coaches never see in a lifetime.

Next week: Schaumburg's Gary LaRocco.

Nothing matches state tourney

THINK WHAT a dull time of year this would be for the average sports fan if it weren't for one thing.

We're all sick of winter and it's not spring yet. We're still trying to recover from huge Christmas bills. We're tired of being cooped up inside, but it's too muddy and cold to do much outdoors yet. Vacations for most of us are still months away.

In the professional sports world there's not too much to get excited about at this point. Sure, baseball is just around the corner, but spring training is a big bore unless you're fortunate enough to take a vacation in Florida.

Football, of course, is long since over. (If you're a Bear fan that may be for the best). Basketball and hockey seasons have dragged on for what seems an eternity. The regular season doesn't mean much anyway and the playoffs are still a month away.

One event, though, always brightens things up in March in this state. It radiates like a lantern in a dark tunnel.

Even the casual fan in this area does not need to have this happening identified. It is, of course, the state high school basketball playoffs.

One of the best things about it is that it stretches out over three weeks. It's not over in three hours, like the Super (hohum) Bowl, or in less time than that, like a heavyweight championship boxing match, or even in a week like the World Series.

And it involves each and every high school team in the state — many for more than a game. Sure, the lower-echelon teams are usually out of it in one quick evening. But the important thing is that the hope, the weeks of anticipation, are always there.

What would the mediocre teams have to look forward to from Christmas on if it weren't for the tournaments? And how sweet it is when an ignored underdog wins a few now when they mean the most.

Maybe it seems out of perspective to compare high school contests, involving 17-year-old kids, with pro playoffs which are heralded throughout the world. But I submit that for any one community or any individual fan, there is nothing, but nothing, more intriguing or gripping than the historic, traditional prep cage play-offs.

Even those teams which are slipped the knockout punch in the first week — which, of course, includes most — can then pick another favorite fairly close to home, settle back and enjoy every minute of the madness, identifying with those raw youngsters who suddenly are asked to cope with more pressure than most of us encounter in a lifetime.

If you're lucky enough to get away to Champaign for a weekend and get tickets into the Assembly Hall, you can soak in the atmosphere and enjoy it to the fullest. Just roaming around that college town for the weekend of March 23-24, even without entering the arena of combat, will impress upon you just how much the proceedings mean.

If you can't do that there's always the good old tube. (What other high school event can you ever follow on television? But then, what other comes close to this in magnitude?)

There have been volumes written in this state reminiscing about past tournaments, classic championship games and the greatest of the great teams. Many clichés are annually dragged out about March madness, tourney hysteria, etc. We've all seen plenty of that literature, interesting to be sure, but this piece will not attempt to review specific tournaments. To do so properly would require a book anyway.

It is interesting, though, to ask ourselves just what it is that sets this series apart from others. What causes grown men to temporarily border on insanity and harbor fleeting thoughts of homicide in connection with that %&&% ref that just called a charging foul on one of our boys?

The same charged-up fan may hardly bat an eyelash at some of the pivotal plays in the World Series or National Basketball Association playoffs or Stanley Cup Series — unless his own city happens to be represented.

But even then it's not the same. You just don't feel the intimacy or close identification with a pro team representing a metropolitan area of millions that you feel with a community of a few thousand, when your hopes are riding with a neighbor boy whom you're watching grow and develop.

In the big-business world of pro sports, in which salaries are orbiting so fast that they are fading beyond comprehension, a big incentive is more greenbacks to be awarded to the winner. But even the loser doesn't exactly starve.

No such ulterior motives enter into prep competition. The name of the game is pride with a capital P. That and emotion more intense than you'll find anywhere. Emotions of not only youngsters playing, but all of us who somehow are more aroused when such green competitors are involved.

On one hand you have Kareem Abdul-Jabbar hoping for a payoff sum to add to the $400,000 per year which he "earns." On the other hand — last year, for example — you had several youngsters still living in poverty surroundings (one of whose family did not have a telephone at home and some others who lived in trailers) representing Thornridge High School. And playing with such determination and brilliance that they're being called the greatest high school team in state history.

Which do you root harder for — teenagers or fat cat pros? Which brings out stronger feelings, now when so much in an abstract sense is at stake?

I know my answer to these questions. The fascinating world of high school playoffs, of amateur sport at its best, dwains tonight at regional sites.

It all makes this time of year so much more bearable. It's time now to watch and enjoy.

North gymnasts fail to advance

East, West send seven to next level

The combined domination by Elk Grove in its own district gymnastics meet and the powerful field that will pour into the Niles West Sectional limited Maine East to just five advancing qualifiers and Maine West, two.

Elk Grove flooded the district competition with 174 points and 20 qualifiers while Forest View finished second with 64 markers.

East Leyden notched third with 61.5 ahead of Maine South's 55 for fourth. Maine East rang up 22.5 points for fifth and Maine West 12 for sixth.

Demon Joe Darby turned in the top mark by the local Central Suburban League rep as he mastered parallel bars for a 7.2 and an automatic sectional-qualifying fourth. Warrior Phil DaPrato also cashed in on the opportunity for fifth with 7.0 and will also carry "ranked" credentials into further eliminations at Niles West this weekend.

A gymnast was considered "ranked" if he finished among the top five in any event. In addition, the top nine averages in each event that were not "ranked" from the three correlated districts, advanced to the sectional with "at-large" status.

This is where the two Maine sister schools did well. In the opening floor exercise competition, neither Steve Slaw nor Bill Yoder from Maine East were able to crack the top five.

But by virtue of posting 7.2's, the Demon duo qualified in the at-large field which also included participants from the Niles East and Glenbrook South districts.

Side horse was another fruitful event for East and West. Again unable to place among the top five in the competition, Demon Steve Stela and Warrior Bill Lump still parlayed their respective 7.1 and 7.65 averages into easy qualification among the nine at-large candidates.

The same was true in all-around where Maine East's Stan Kutin combined a 5.2 on side horse, 5.7 on free ex, 4.65 on high bar, 5.65 on parallel bars and 5.05 on still rings for a 26.2 all-around total and a berth in the at-large field.

Maine North's Jim Zitkus earned his team's only point in the Glenbrook South District with a 10th-place finish in all-around with a total of 14 points. Zitkus, however, was unable to qualify for either the ranked or at-large qualifiers.

Sectional competition will be conducted at Niles West on Saturday with the first session (free ex, side horse, high bar) beginning at 1 p.m. The evening session (tramp, high bar and still rings) will continue at 7 p.m.

The top three boys in each event along with the 12 outstanding scores from a total of all four sectionals, will be advanced to the state meet finals at Prospect March 16 and 17.

Excitement at Kemper Invitational

'Out' call angers Taylor, spurs Ashe

by ED WORKMAN

The Guinness Book of Records doesn't include an entry for worst calls by a tennis official or a controversial match point in Sunday's finals of the $50,000 Kemper International would probably be in it.

Arthur Ashe captured the $10,000 first prize with a 3-6, 7-6, 7-6 "victory" over England's Roger Taylor. But the deciding point proved to be a disputed call that cost Taylor the match in straight sets.

Leading 7-6 in a second set 12-point tiebreaker Taylor hit a forehand volley in Ashe's backhand corner and the crowd applauded the "end of the match."

But Eleanore Uhrle, West Chicago, linesman on the baseline called "out." Taylor screamed, and pleaded with the umpire to no avail. He had the linesman replaced but by that time the damage was done. Ashe went on to take the tiebreaker and then won a third-set tiebreaker to capture his first tournament of the year and his first match in a month.

NBC showed the match on national television, but almost unbelievably the TV camera was pointed elsewhere on match point so an instant replay of the disputed point was impossible.

A bitter Taylor held court for the press after losing the third-set tiebreaker 7-2 in the gym of Lyons Township High School in LaGrange.

When asked about the rest of the match, he said, "The rest of the match really doesn't matter, does it?" He added, "I could tell she wouldn't change her mind. I shouted, 'it was on the line.'"

Taylor was asked if England has a school for tennis officials. He replied, "No, but we have some schools for the blind."

For Ashe it was a sweet victory. He had been beaten in the finals of the World Championship of Tennis tourney in Chicago for two straight years.

After surviving three match points against Chicago's Marty Riessen in Friday's quarter-finals, Ashe said he decided "the Gods are with me. There is no way I can lose now." He was right on both counts.

Australians Ken Rosewall and Fred Stolle took the doubles championship with a 6-7, 6-4, 6-2 victory over New Zealand's Brian Fairlie and Egyptian Ismael El Shafai.

Although Taylor was the big loser for the tourney, the game of tennis was the big winner. Friday's quarter-finals at both LaGrange and Lake Forest High School were sell-outs as was Saturday's semi-finals at LaGrange. There were only a few scattered seats for Sunday's finals despite TV coverage.

It all adds up to the fact that some 20,000 persons bought tickets for the week-long tourney in two suburbs far removed from Chicago.

Tennis everyone?

Divorce: A changing scene

Men, women demand equal rights in court

by DOROTHY OLIVER
(Second of a series)

On one side of the battleground is the men's liberation movement, represented by America's Society for Divorced Men (ASDM). American Divorce Association for Men (ADAM) and other divorce reform groups in the country. Rallying behind the same battlecry but not willing to mix initials with those of the men, is the woman's movement, represented by National Organization of Women (NOW), Women's Equity Action League (WEAL) and others. Barraged by verbal attacks from this angry offensive are the judges who preside over divorce court, matrimonial attorneys and state legislatures. THE BATTLE IS on and ongoing.

Women and men stamp down their feet and demand equality, justice and fairness in the war called divorce. The other side responds with study commissions, bar association proposals, reformed laws and precedent decisions.

Each side takes their jabs from the other.

"If judges, lawyers and legislators were as ignorant as they often appear, we could forgive them for certain errors from time to time — But they cannot be excused or forgiven as they continue to perfect and maintain the divorce racket for sake of profit while explaining all manner of injustices behind the cloak of the alleged best interests of children," proclaims ASDM in a general statement bulletin.

"THE PROFESSIONAL organizations and bar associations won't answer the charges of (ASDM and ADAM) . . . They don't want to dignify this thing. Those organizations serve to set off the member's fanaticism. All they do is charge heavily for services they can't deliver," said one matrimonial lawyer.

"They (men's reform groups) tried to put pressure on this court and I never let them appear. I once told them they were trying to revolutionize everyone but themselves," smiled a divorce division judge.

"Laws are made by men for men and interpreted by men for men. Whenever we come out with a position on any topic the legislators pick out those parts that appeal to them as men and drop out those parts for the protection of women," said a representative of NOW.

Despite the antagonism between the opposing forces most judges and attorneys agree the woman's movement, in influencing society, has influenced decisions handed down from the bench. A few are more generous to the men.

"ASDM IS A driving force behind the courts," says Leonard Timpone, a Chicago divorce lawyer who works with men referred to him by that organization. "They have had an effect on the people who use their services and made them aware of what their rights are."

"The only people who have an effect on the courts are the litigants," he continued. "Through ASDM more men are asserting their rights and the judges are taking notice."

"We're getting better decisions all the time," said Richard Templeton, president of ASDM. "A lot of the judges and attorneys know we are here and I feel many of the decisions that have been fair to the man have been made because of our organization."

Templeton realizes his organization is not the most popular in legal circles. "Attorneys hate our guts," he laughs. "There are very few attorneys we'd recommend to the men who come in here. . . The ones we do are righters — they are honest and reasonable. And if we ever find out that ours are in any way dishonest we chop their heads off."

TEMPLETON CLAIMS that thousands of men have come to ASDM for counseling since it was established in 1967 by the late Charles Metz. He also claims thousands of members across the country who have paid their dues and receive a monthly newsletter.

The national headquarters of ASDM is located in a small store front office in Elgin and houses two desks, Templeton and his assistant Ted Downey. The two offer a sympathetic ear and some realistic advice to men who have either been through, are in the midst of or are contemplating divorce.

"We don't have the educational background in counseling but we carry to the client an empathy that is needed," said Downey.

Both men have been there. Both are divorced and came out of the experience angry. Templeton cites "extreme dedication" as the reason he left his New York public relations job to counsel men, "the second class citizens in a divorce action."

FOR $40, A CLIENT is entitled to an open-end counseling session during which Templeton or Downey will assess his situation, will educate him as to his rights and how the "divorce racket" works, and will plot a course of action for him to follow. An additional $35 will give the client a year's membership with ASDM, their newsletter and continued service.

"We like men to come to us before anything has happened but we can untangle the mess if we have to," Templeton said. "Our operation is very legitimate, honest and our integrity is excellent. We don't make much money but we receive a lot of letters that are very rewarding. If a client isn't happy with us we hear about it. But we try . . . We do the best we can."

Some of ASDM's former clients wouldn't agree. A Prospect Heights man, who has been dragged into court constantly by his ex-wife, sought Templeton's help, was counseled and referred to a "good lawyer . . . one who will fight for you."

NEARLY $200 LATER the man had dropped his lawyer, who "led me down the wrong track and did practically nothing. ASDM was of no help whatsoever," he added.

Others had reserved words of praise. "My lawyer and I decided not to mention I'd been to ASDM when we went to court. They helped me by getting me a good lawyer but even that lawyer told me some judges will go against you if you mention ASDM."

Still others can't say enough. "Without ASDM I would never have come out as well as I did in my divorce," said one. "I've got my kids and that wouldn't have happened without Templeton," said a Hoffman Estates father.

ASDM would gladly accept credit for causing the changes being seen in divorce court. Judges tend to dismiss that organization and instead cite the woman's movement as the major force "if there is one." Ironically, the women want no part of the accolade.

"WHEN JUDGES say woman's lib they think it means go out and get a job," said Betty Dwyer, convener of the committee of marriage, divorce and family for the Chicago Chapter of NOW. "Judges are now saying to a woman after her 28-year marriage ends, 'Get a job . . . You've never worked in your life before but get a job.'"

"Work is work. We feel a housewife's work is a contribution to her family for which she's never been compensated. To a judge a job means what you earn money for. When women go into court they tell her she can't get alimony because of woman's lib. Woman's lib has nothing to do with it."

Betty feels the woman's movement is becoming the scapegoat for not only judges but legislators — the men who make laws for men.

"The no-fault divorce concept brought forward by the Uniform Divorce Act contains all kinds of passages on enforcement of support orders, collection of alimony, etc. But the only part the legislators are picking up is the no-fault divorce. They don't mention women's rights," she said. "Because fault has traditionally been tied to compensation, with the wife as the innocent party, she has received alimony or child support. With only no-fault there is no compensation."

NOW ADVOCATES compensation for wives based on the length of the marriage, the age of the parties, the income and number of children. Betty's committee is interviewing divorce judges in Cook County to find out their interpretation of the laws.

"They're trying to make us equal in penalties but not equal under the law," Betty said. "As long as a woman in Illinois is presently responsible for the bills of her family she should be entitled to half of the income."

"People think because we're feminists we think only of women. Actually we're looking for equality under the law. The courts don't understand the woman's movement. They're taking away the laws that would provide women economic compensation but not providing them with equal jobs, equal pay or an equal right to get into school. If I don't have the right to collect alimony then I must have the other equal rights."

Tomorrow: Beware of the pitfalls of divorce.

ESPECIALLY FOR THE FAMILY

'Get her before she gets you'

by BARRY SIGALE

To America's Society of Divorced Men, the key idea behind a husband obtaining the best terms possible in a divorce from his wife is "to get her before she gets you."

The man who acts quickly and aggressively and without hesitation, who documents each and every slipup by his wife while he himself maintains a proper front, can put his wife and her attorney in a defensive posture from which they probably could never recover.

By "digging up all the dirt" especially if he can prove infidelity on the part of his wife, the better the husband's attorney can argue against the payment of alimony to his wife and for custody of the children by his client.

If the wife is cheating on her husband the best thing to do is spy on her and her lover.

ALL THIS I learned and was advised while posing as a distraught, mistreated suspicious husband who is contemplating divorce from his wife but who needs guidance, advice and help in going about it the right way.

My ruse was that I was a $13,000-a-year catalogue writer for a department store, living in an apartment in Chicago with my wife and two children, a boy, 3, and a girl, 7 months.

Though we had $4,000 in our savings account, another $200 in our checking account and my wife made more than $10,000 a year, she was still not satisfied with her existence, according to my story.

Further, my wife was having an affair. Although I didn't catch her with another man I "just knew" she was stepping out on me. She was supposedly attending business meetings several nights a week while leaving me to attend to our two children.

OUR SON AND daughter, in this story, were suffering from their mother's extracurricular activities and were being stripped of her love and affection.

My argument was that while I loved my wife, even to the point of asking her to attend marriage counseling sessions with me, for the sake of the children I thought a divorce might be the best answer for my problem.

When I first made my appointment to talk to a counselor at ASDM it was suggested by Richard Templeton, president, that I stay at home with my wife no matter how difficult the situation and "for heaven's sake, don't hit her." It set the stage for a revealing session with counselor Ted Downey.

Downey sits alone in a tiny store in Elgin which has been converted into an office. He is a short man with glasses and a concerned stare.

DOWNEY'S MAIN claim to being a marriage counselor is that he was personally dragged through the court system in divorce proceedings with his wife. Otherwise, he has a degree in business and several courses in fields related to counseling.

Downey hears me out, then proceeds to give me advice on the assumption that divorce is the only thought on my mind, even though I tell him I would consider reconciliation. And his words remind me of Templeton's telephone advice.

"Take all of your valuable papers and put them in a safety deposit box," Downey says at the beginning of the hour and a half session. "Send letters to all your charge accounts either closing them or reissuing you a new number in your name. Send this out by certified mail."

"THEN CHANGE your mailing address, to yourself at another address or to your family. Take your savings account passbook and take the money out of the account. This is important, especially if your wife blows up when she hears you're going to divorce her."

"Pay all your bills off, the car payments, everything. But it's important you get the money before she does. It's difficult for you to get money back once she takes it."

"Then change the beneficiary on your life insurance policies to your children or other family members, but not to your ex-wife."

At his request I give an account of my wife's activities and who I suspect she's having an affair with, where and when. This leads to a strong suggestion by Downey that I take advantage of a $35 ASDM membership offer.

Among other things, the $35 would provide me with surveillance services. In other words, they would spy on my wife and her boyfriend.

"YOU MUST KEEP a diary and document everything," he says. "Find out the other man's name and address, where they meet or have a drink before they go to his house. Something more than just circumstantial evidence."

"We'll follow your wife to school. We'll get his license plate number and address. Catching her one time is going to help but not in court. You must catch her three or four times."

"But first, you must lay the groundwork, do the spade work. If you want the kids you must document everything. Keep a log. It's easy to remember incidents but not dates."

I ask Downey if this isn't being devious and add if it is I'm not sure I want to do it. Also, I don't think I want to drag this out in court.

"OF COURSE it's devious," he says. "But if she's not going to be above board why shouldn't you be devious?"

Traditionally, the wife makes out like a bandit in a divorce case, Downey implies. The court system for a long time has given special favors to the wife; the husband is treated unfairly and the burden of proof in getting the courts to award custody of the children or other profitable terms to the husband is on the man.

Once a divorce is finalized, he implies, the wife is sitting pretty. She usually gets the kids, the house, the car, the material goods. The husband is on the outside, breaking his back to afford the alimony payments, only able to see his children at long intervals and then only briefly.

But it doesn't have to be like that, according to Downey, and if it takes devious methods then so be it.

"DON'T SAY anything to your wife about this," Downey continues. "Until you have documented everything don't say a word. If you do she might go to her attorney right away. Or she may say, 'All right you son-of-a-bitch' and go out and do what she was doing anyway. Or she may become frightened and stay home. Then there's nothing you can do."

"Don't confront her even if you know she's doing wrong. Don't, I repeat, don't reveal any information until you're ready to move. Keep cool. I know it's so easily said, but you have to be like a saint. Take all the hassle you have to. But don't hit her."

When I repeat that I don't know if I want to go through with all this, especially the surveillance, and that I may not want a divorce after all, Downey addresses himself to the issue of reconciliation.

"MOST MEN come here when it's too late (to save his marriage). But obviously you're in an ambivalent state. You want to save your marriage. There's a great deal of weight on your shoulders. But can you be sure she'll change? If she's been like this before will she be like this again?"

Downey suggests I see a social service agency to discuss the possibility of returning to a normal married life again. He agrees it's possible to settle our differences. He spends a few minutes discussing the possibilities. Suddenly he says:

"You have to dig up all the dirt you can dig. It's like a civil war, it is a civil war. For your own well-being, you ought to try to solve your problems and know in your own mind (if you can)."

Then he adds, "How will you feel when you visit your son and he says, 'Dad, why didn't you fight for me?' And after the visit you say to yourself, 'Why didn't I?'"

HE SUGGESTS I think things over for a few days. Templeton, who handles the followup on those who come to ASDM, would call me in a few days to discuss the matter.

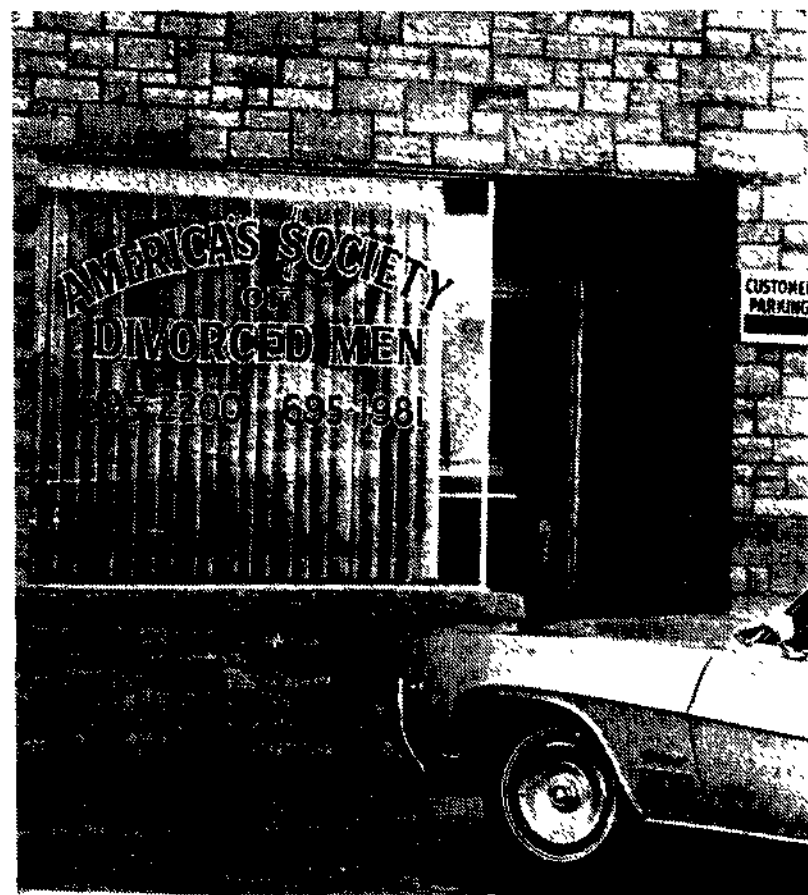

As I leave I look at the card Downey gave me earlier with the name of an attorney I should call if I decide to go through with the divorce. "He writes one of the finest petitions for divorce I've ever seen," he says.

And the not-so-famous saying on the message board next to Downey's desk is brought to mind. The quote, out of context but serving as a summation of ASDM's philosophy, is by Edmund Burke, an 18th century pundit. It reads: "All that is necessary for the forces of evil to win the world is for enough good men to do nothing."

COUNSELING "THOUSANDS" of men each year is a full-time job for Ted Downey and Dick Templeton of America's Society of Divorced Men.

Elgin. Neither claims to be a professional counselor but feels they can empathize with what their clients are going through.

WHO'S THE FORCE behind the changes going on in divorce court? Judges like to point to the woman's movement and the legally accepted emancipation of women, but tend to ignore the men's movement and groups like America's Society of Divorced Men. Officers of ASDM don't agree.

Eye test hints for children

In observance of Save Your Vision Week, March 4-11, The Chicago Northside and North Suburban Optometric Auxiliary is stressing vision tests for all.

In taking children for their first professional vision examinations the auxiliary suggests making appointments early in the day before children are tired. It also suggests talking naturally as one would about any other routine experience.

Since the examination is painless, parents should not suggest fear or mention the possibility of glasses. In the majority of cases glasses are not prescribed, according to a spokesman.

The auxiliary also suggests going into the examining room with the child, but letting the vision specialist lead the conversation and letting the child answer for himself.

Dear Dorothy: It's time to start saving up for cascarones for Easter. In West Texas we used these for almost any kind of a fiesta, but now just use them for Easter. To make cascarones, start saving raw eggshells. With a serrated knife open the egg as close to the narrow end as possible in order to get the yolk out whole. If breaking the yolk isn't important, open as close to the end as possible. Rinse the shell thoroughly and drain. When dry, store, open-side-down, in a used egg carton.

A few days before Easter get a supply of confetti, glue and colored tissue paper. Fill the shells with confetti, thread a thin seal of glue around the opening and cover the hole with a square of tissue paper. I hide the cascarones around the yard (unless the weather is bad and we have to use the basement) and turn the children loose to find them. Once they do, it storms eggshells, confetti and laughter as the children delight in crushing the cascarones over each other.

Sometimes the grown-ups get involved, too. I try to include as many of the children in the neighborhood as possible (this means a lot of eggshells) and it always turns into an Easter they love to remember. —Claire Grabowski Sounds delightful! Why not enlist a few mothers to save their eggshells? Participation makes it more fun.

Dear Dorothy: My cake pan has an insert. Sometimes the dough oozes from the bottom before it starts to bake. Help! —Marie P.

Line the pan with foil, letting the sides come up about an inch.

Dear Dorothy: I don't know whether all ham slices (with bones in) are salty, but I was told to always boil such slices for 10 minutes to get some of the salt out. I've done it ever since and no more salty slices. Then I add the brown sugar and stuff. —Doris B.

The Tower:

...London's sinister landmark of jails, jewels

by CLARE WRIGHT

LONDON — As often as we've wandered through the grounds and structures of the ancient Tower of London we still feel a creepy chill slither down our spine every time we revisit the sinister London landmark.

It's been hundreds of years since the last head toppled off the courtyard block — and the bloodstains must be long gone. Yet the gory past of the place seems to have a way of hitting you square on as you stare up at the turrets — and contemplate the ghosts that might be lurking around those haunted battlements.

Located on the East End of London, on the north bank of the Thames River, the Tower is actually a group of stone buildings, all built at different times and for different reasons.

THE GIANT keep or White Tower was built by William the Conqueror 1,000 years ago.

"It was so strong in those days it could have held off a whole army," a London friend told us as he guided us around the massive structure.

If you watched "The Wives of Henry VIII" on television a year or so ago, you'll remember that two of the King's unfortunate spouses were locked up in the White Tower. Anne Boleyn and Catherine Howard were both imprisoned there before they went to the scaffold. So was Lady Jane Grey, who had the shortest reign of any English queen.

The place gets to you. Maybe it's those sharp-eyed black ravens fluttering around — or seeing the stone slab on the spot where the terrifying scaffold once stood — or recalling the story of Lord Essex and the others who died on that scaffold. And if there's a sinister grey mist, as there always has been the times we've visited the Tower, you can almost feel impending doom enveloping you.

ONE GREAT way to dispel this kind of feeling is to go beneath the Tower to gaze awestruck at the Crown Jewels, which certainly must be some of the most precious stones and bric-a-brac in the whole world.

It's quite a sight watching those fabulous jewels and 48 other priceless relics sparkle in the quiet gloom of an electronically guarded modern-day dungeon.

There are two chambers to wander through. The upper one is a large hall on the ground floor where ermine-trimmed coronation robes and various serving pieces from Royal palaces make up an eye-popping exhibit. Dishes big enough to serve a roast pig — salt cellars four feet high!

THEN WE walked down 49 steps to the underground vault. There — behind steel doors a yard thick — are the Crown Jewels in all their glorious splendor. It's an array of royal wealth that leaves you breathless.

Besides the electronic alarm systems, there are also the Yeoman Warders, or "Beefeaters" to guard the English treasures. These proud-looking gentlemen still wear the picturesque uniforms designed in Tudor times. Every night at 10 p.m., these colorfully-clad guards elaborately lock the Tower in the Ceremony of the Keys.

The Yeoman Warders live on the grounds of the Tower. Also official residents are the six black ravens. Legend has it the Tower will stand as long as those sinister birds keep flying around it.

And — probably as long as the royal ghosts move about the historic old stone fortress.

Yeoman Warders, or "Beefeaters," still wear Tudor times uniforms to guard the Tower.

For nearly a thousand years, history has been made in the Tower of London. (British Tourist Authority photo)

TRAVEL LORE

by Clare Wright,
TRAVEL EDITOR

Ever notice how you can usually spot a fellow tourist by the camera dangling over his shoulder?

Some of them fool you though. They're the travelers with the handy little instant-camera jobs tucked in their pockets or handbags. With the new automatic lens settings on modern-day cameras you don't have to lug around so much complicated equipment. Thank goodness!

Recently I chatted with a friend of mine who works at Eastman Kodak, and here are some suggestions he gave me for taking top-notch vacation snapshots:

- Know what your camera can do. Read instructions carefully — or better still, talk it over with the experts at your photo shop. It's also a good idea to shoot a test roll and have it developed before you leave on your trip.

- Keep your camera handy at all times on your trip — day and night.

- Take an ample supply of film when you head for foreign countries. It's outlandishly expensive abroad — and not always available. However, be sure to check customs about the amount of film you can bring into each country you're visiting.

- Don't carry unprocessed film in your carry-on luggage. It might be harmed by the x-ray devices used in security measures by the airlines.

- Never leave a loaded camera or film in the glove compartment of an automobile — or in the direct rays of the sun. Excessive heat can damage the film — especially if it's color.

- When you're on a beach keep your camera in a plastic bag. Sand and spray can do it a lot of harm.

- Don't take pictures in a haphazard way. Use your imagination and plan a picture story of your trip from the minute of departure to the moment of arrival back home.

- Remember that simple pictures are the best kind. Get close-ups whenever you can. Put people in your pictures as often as possible.

- When you travel abroad, be sure to register all foreign-made photo equipment with the U. S. Customs Office at the port of embarkation before leaving. Then be sure to slip a copy of the registration in your passport case, or some other safe place, so you won't have to pay duty on your own camera when you arrive back home.

- Never take pictures of people in foreign countries without asking their permission. Sometimes they want to be paid. Other times it's against their religious beliefs to have themselves or their dwelling places photographed.

- Don't take pictures in churches and cathedrals or art galleries. Usually there will be a sign at the entrance warning you about this — or a guide to set you straight. If in doubt, be sure to ask.

- Never take pictures of military installations — especially in Eastern Europe. This could result in confiscation of your camera — and even arrest.

- When the sun is shining brightly, it's best not to take pictures between the hours of 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. And, of course, always be sure the sun isn't in the camera lens.

- Supply yourself with some fast film for use at night on sightseeing tours, city strolls or folk rock shows. Again, it's a good idea to experiment at home first.

- Don't take dull, static pictures of people. Put some atmosphere in the background — at a street market, sitting in a sidewalk cafe, or with a famous landmark nearby.

- If you're taking a photo that's particularly important to you, don't limit yourself to one shot. Snap one from a distance, another a little closer to the subject — and make a third one a tight close-up.

- Be sure to hang on to your camera and equipment wherever you go. Don't leave it in open view in a locked car — or unguarded at an airport, pier, or depot.

Your camera is one of the most important items you take on your trip. It will capture wonderful memories that will last long after your holiday is over.

Although the agency is just a few months old, Mrs. Friedrich's travel experience has been extensive since 1969, according to Stuart Rotchford III, president of Total Travel, for three years leading Midwest wholesale operators of tours to Mexico, Hawaii and South America.

Most recently, Mrs. Friedrich was travel manager of First Arlington Travel Service, and formerly she was a travel consultant at Drake Travel and Chicago Motor Club in Chicago's Loop.

The new Travel-And Inc. sales manager has traveled widely in Europe, the Caribbean and other parts of the world.

If you are in New Orleans with a group you can rent an entire moving car for $25 an hour in off-peak hours and decorate it to your taste for a mobile French wine-bread-and-cheese party.

The Streetcar Named Desire exhibit in New Orleans is open from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday. There is no admission charge, and you can explore the interior of the old trolley car.

One of the best places left in New Or-

Louisiana's Creole cuisine is world-famous.

Colorful religious rites in Kandy

by JACK P. GABRIEL

KANDY, CEYLON — One of the world's greatest annual events takes place in this lovely island country, located off the southeast tip of India. It is held in Kandy, a hillside city 72 miles from Colombo, the capital, and is called the Esala Perahera.

Almost all visitors to Ceylon arrive in Colombo, and nearly all of them go to Kandy. The road between the two cities winds through lush green jungle, passes coconut plantations and terraced rice fields with high mountains not far away.

The Esala Perahera takes place this year from Aug. 14-24. The time for it is chosen by astrologers and it is one of the greatest and most colorful festivals in the world. It dates back to the 2nd Century A.D., when King Gajabahu celebrated his victory over the people of South India by ordering a yearly perahera, or procession, to be held to commemorate that time, and in much the same way, but now thousands of Buddhist worshippers, and many tourists, crowd into Kandy to see the exotic spectacle. It honors the Sacred Tooth relic of Buddha, which is kept in the Temple of the Sacred Tooth.

DURING THE Perahera, glittering processions wind through the center of the city every night. Participants include members of five temples, each group with its own dancers, torch bearers, drummers and decorated elephants. It ends the day following the night of the full moon, when as many as 60 or more elephants walk proudly along arrayed in satin, silk and velvet, all richly embroidered in silver. Conspicuous on that night is the huge animal that bears a replica of the basket that contains the Sacred Tooth relic of the Buddha.

The last night is the most exciting and festive of all. There are then about 1000 richly adorned dancers, whose movements are accompanied by the rhythm of at least four different kinds of drum playing. Torchbearers light the processions, often spinning the flames impressively.

It is awe-inspiring, unforgettable and much more than a spectacular religious festival. With its origin in customs older than 2,000 years, this Perahera is one of pride and delight, an annual public expression of the culture and ritual, even the life and faith of an entire race.

As it is different every night, some visitors stay in Kandy for the entire festival. Whipcrackers make their weapons sound like pistols as drums roll their pulsations along narrow streets, oboes wail and the dancers leap and whirl in a flashing mixture of silver, crimson and white. Obviously aware of the part they are playing, the elephants sway majestically along the route, to the particular delight of visitors.

Guide lines

Q.—Is it possible to rent a camper in Hawaii?

A.—There's a variety of vehicles available on all the islands, from pick-up trucks to deluxe homes on wheels. Daily rates start at $25 for two, $28 for four. Airport pick-up arrangements are possible. One suggested camper operator is Camper Rentals Hawaii, 1336 Dillingham Blvd., Honolulu. Your Northwest suburban travel agent may have more names for you.

Q.—I once heard about a discotheque in Paris that has been described as a "pseudo-Texas saloon deep in the heart of Montparnasse." Do you know the name of it?

A.—We checked around and decided you must mean the Barbary Coast Saloon, 11 rue Jules-Chaplain. Our friends who have been there say it's a bit incongruous for Paris, but fun to go to if you have an extra evening. You can get a good tourist meal for around $3.00 and you can dine until dawn breaks over Paris.

Q.—What is the temperature like in Las Vegas in the spring months? Also, does one dress up formally to go to the big hotel shows?

A.—Spring temperatures average in the 70's — cool enough in the evening for light jackets, sweaters or stoles. Most people wear semi-formal clothes to the dinner shows — dark business suit with tie for the men — long dress or dressy pantsuits for women.

Q.—Where can I obtain a copy of Kevin Cahill's "Medical Advice For the Traveler" which you discussed in your Travel Lore column recently?

A.—You can order a copy from Kroch and Brentano's Bookstore for $3.95. Allow several weeks for delivery.

Q.—We are planning a trip through England this summer. We want to rent a car and drive through the countryside using "bed and breakfast" places for our accommodations. Do you think we need a travel agent to help us with our plans?

A.—Absolutely! It's the only way to assure yourself a carefree vacation.

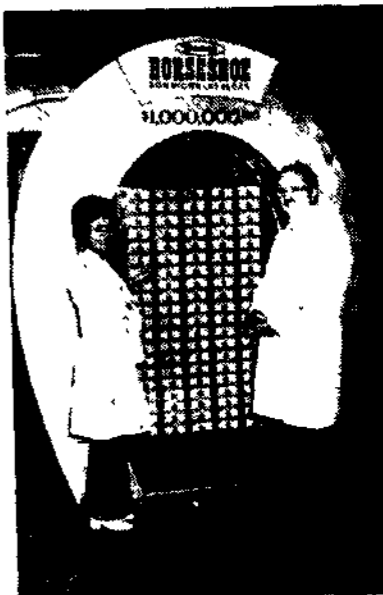

On the day after the Perahera has ended, the Diyakapana Mangallaya takes place. This is the water-cutting ceremony, and revolves around the filling of four goblets by river water. The goblets are then spectacularly returned to Kandy, and there they repose until the following year when they are filled once again.

Take a French canal excursion

Cheval-Voyage, the Frenchmen who launched horse-drawn wagons to explore secluded byways in Quercy and Brittany at four miles per hour, thought perhaps travelers might like the same pace on France's little-known canals and waterways. So, Nautic-Voyage (located at 8 rue de Milan, Paris 9) has cabin-cruisers and houseboats for individual rental to launch vacations afloat.

Cabin-cruisers accommodating four to six people leave the Camargue's Port Cassanere with its access to two different Midi canals. One cruise route threads Aquitaine, the Pyrenees and Cevennes while the alternate plies the wider Camargue. Handling the helm is easy, no license is necessary, and a quick repair service is always on call. Cabin-cruisers for 4 range from $120-$300 per week depending upon the season.

For those who prefer the canals of Burgundy, houseboats comfortably sleeping four start from the picturesque town of Verdun-sur-le-Doubs for a week's cruise, beginning any Saturday or Sunday. Reservations for both must be made 30 days in advance.

ONE MILLION dollars! Captain and Mrs. Olof H. Ohlson, of Wilson Travel in Palatine, were able to LOOK at that much loot while escorting a group of business executives to Las Vegas recently. While there, the Ohlsons attended the Mint Casino's gambling school, where each was awarded a diploma as experts in the various games of chance.

A total of 70 Wisconsin travel agencies and resort owners will be cooperating in the show which will highlight some of the thousands of commercial facilities offered by the vacation state.

SWISSAIR EXTENDS SKI SEASON

Swissair has extended its low-cost one-week G.I.T. packages to Alpine ski resorts through the month of April.

Student Bargains

New student rates for transatlantic crossings of the Queen Elizabeth II have been announced by Cunard Line Ltd. Students between 16 and 25 can travel to or from Europe for $150 on a shared-room basis in tourist class on the 22 sailings beginning April 6.

A 12-page magazine featuring ski packages to the Canadian Rockies, Eastern Canada's Laurentians, and weekend visits to selected cities is available free from Air Canada or Northwest suburban travel agents.

PITCH A TENT IN OZARKS

Two "new's," a wilderness-environment campground and newly conferred federal recognition, are expected to make news of interest to Ozark vacationers for the 1980 craftsman's settlement at Silver Dollar City, Mo.

Both the community and campground are on 2000-acre Marvel Cave Park. The cave, itself, with passageways explored a distance of 32 miles and a main "room" 20 stories high, was recently designated a national landmark.

One hour south of Springfield, Mo., Silver Dollar City and its campground open April 28.

CONVENTION CENTER

A $14 million ultra-modern convention center, accommodating three times the capacity of existing facilities, will be inaugurated late this year in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Located on the beachfront in the heart of the city, the Condado Hotel and Convention Center will link the Condado Beach and La Concha Hotels and will have 15 meeting rooms with capacities ranging from 50 to 5,000.

Miami-Mexico ferry offered

MIAMI, Fla. — An up-to-the-minute concept in vacation cruising, geared to today's Americans-on-wheels, will shift into "high" with the inaugural voyage of the unique M/S Bolero carliner announced by Commodore Cruise Line.

This specially-built, 12,500-ton vessel, designed to carry 500 passengers and 230 cars, will offer a regular cruise schedule to Mexico from the Port of Miami, beginning in October, according to a company spokesman.

The eight-deck, French-built cruise-carliner will make weekly trips to picturesque Veracruz, gateway to the country's heartland, famed Cozumel with its duty-free shopping, and Puerto Morelos, a Yucatan port eight miles across the Cozumel channel. There also will be a bonus stop at Key West, Fla.

Passengers will have many options, booking either one-way or round-trip passage with or without cars. In addition, motorists debarking in Mexico can return to Miami on the Bolero the following week or drive home via the colorful Pan-American Highway.

Entire families can board, with mobile homes or campers, on the cavernous car deck. Groups in chartered buses can enjoy the combination of flexibility offered by motoring off to sites and cities of their choice while enjoying the best of luxury cruising and land traveling.

This "floating hotel" will offer ship-board activities for every taste and includes a shopping arcade, barber shop

'Easy Travel' is a good neighbor

A good travel firm begins at home

by CLARE WRIGHT

Even though they serve clients from all parts of the country, building a good image in their own home community of Elk Grove Village is the most important aim of the people at Easy Travel.

"We do much more than just work here . . . we LIVE here too," points out attractive Jeanne Shaw, general manager.

The 17-year resident of Elk Grove Village added: "It's pretty necessary to have completely satisfied clients when you keep meeting them in the supermarket — or other places around town."

Located at 573 Landmeier Rd. in the 7 and 11 shopping center at the north end of Elk Grove, the agency is a branch office of the 30-year-old Easy Travel operation. Other locations are in Northbrook, Woodstock, Old Orchard and the Prudential building in the Loop.

HARRY AND JULIE Cooper started the travel organization and are still active, along with their son-in-law, Stanley Sherman.

Easy Travel is the only travel agency in the Elk Grove area. Because of its proximity to important industrial areas, it has developed nearly a hundred commercial accounts.

A large amount of referral business evolves from these commercial accounts, which has earned them clients from other parts of the state, and as far away as New York, Boston and Florida.

"It still seems a little strange to me — booking a trip to Europe for somebody who lives a thousand miles away — but they keep coming back to us!"

Jeanne had just returned from a Caribbean cruise on the Queen Elizabeth II the day we stopped in to see her, and her rested relaxed manner belied the heavy pressure schedule that's part of her days at the agency.

A DEDICATED professional travel expert who loves her work, Jeanne has been general manager of the Elk Grove branch of Easy Travel the past year and a half. Previously she was with Travelwise in Northbrook and worked as a travel consultant in a travel agency in Park Ridge.

Besides managing the busy office, Jeanne calls on business accounts, works on individual travel accounts, specialized travel and even conducts group tours now and then.

Last year she escorted a tour of 60 people to the Mardi Gras in New Orleans — first class all the way.

"That was quite a challenge," she smiled — and obviously she loved it.

Jeanne has nothing but fervent praise for her staff members.

"They're all sincere and dedicated and take a personal pride in every trip they book — whether it's a weekend in Milwaukee or a world cruise," she declares.

TRAVEL CONSULTANT Barbara Faber, has been with Easy Travel four years, and previously worked at Travelwise in Northbrook. Like Jeanne, she is widely traveled in all parts of the world and is especially expert on cruises — and Mexico, Hawaii and Ireland.

Barbara has conducted tours too. She admits the most unique was probably the time she led an incentive group of 40 business men to a golf convention in Miami.

"They called me 'Mother Barbara,'" she laughed.

BUNNY WOLFE, also a travel consultant, works mainly on commercial accounts for the agency. She is a graduate of the Pat Stevens travel school and worked in another suburban travel agency before joining Easy Travel.

The agency staff also includes Nancy Roth, as bookkeeper; Eldon Roth, who is route man for commercial accounts, and Robin Shaw, who works three days a week assisting her mother, while finishing her senior year in high school.

Easy Travel is a member of ASTA, MAST, and the Elk Grove Chamber of Commerce. The ASTA sign in a travel agency's window is a symbol of leadership and dependability in the field.

Jeanne Shaw is also a charter member of the Elk Grove Women's Club, and the agency cooperates with the community's Welcome Wagon for newcomers.

Easy Travel consultants have arranged trips and tours to just about every corner of the world. Right now Africa trips seem to be a favorite.

"And we have a local attorney who is planning a trip sailing on the Nile," says Jeanne.

WHAT'S A GOOD package right now? Easy Travel has a nifty one-week trip to Spain with a low tab of $359 — air fare included.

"I guess you could say our big specialty is Las Vegas," comments the Easy Travel manager, who admits it's a big seller in the area.

"And when it comes to Las Vegas packages, we can compete with any agency in the Chicago area on price!"

Easy Travel has another specialty they're particularly proud of. When young travelers — from 19 to 25 — come to the agency, they're handled with care.

"These young people need a lot of guidance, and no matter how busy we may be we always have time to talk with them and advise them," says Jeanne.

Easy Travel in Elk Grove Village is open from 9 to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday, Friday from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m., and on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Bowfishing lengthens fishing season

For the bow hunter or fisherman who finds himself succumbing to the seasonal malady of "cabin fever" because big game is out of season and fish'n isn't what it ought to be, there's a remedy: Go bowfishing.

It's easy and inexpensive but there's a problem... It's a habit-forming sport. Many times the inspired fisherman has found himself leaving rods and reels home in favor of standing in the bow of a light boat with bow and arrow.

For bowfishing, before the hunt comes the equipment and for the potential bowfisherman already in possession of a hunting bow, he can outfit himself for under a $15 bill.

The basic needed tackle goes like this: A bow reel equipped with at least 50 feet of strong nylon line. The bow reel or spin-cast reel should be easily mounted to the bow and have a spring wire line holder to prevent line from playing out too soon when aiming at sharp downward angles. A 35-40 lb. test line is commonly used for smaller fish but upwards of 70-100 lb. test should be used for larger species.

Bowfishing arrows are made of solid fiberglass and equipped with rubber fletching (feathers). These special arrows are recommended for a couple of important reasons: first, even a small fish will roll and thrash when struck and can easily break a wooden or other light shaft material. Second, the added weight of the solid arrow offers greater accuracy and penetration when shooting into depths of up to 15 feet of water.

The arrow point is usually a single barb point to enhance maximum penetration. Some bowfishermen, however, go to a heavy-headed single barb or double barb in order to hold heavier fish.

Now that you're equipped you're ready to go bowfishing, and the places you should be spending your time fall into the general categories of streams, marshes and the shallow back bays of larger lakes and reservoirs.

A quick check with your state game and fish department will tell you what kind of fish are available in your area for bowfishing but the most popular species on a national basis are carp and suckers. In the southern states various species of gar are sought.

You're standing in the bow of the boat and now if you haven't already learned — polarizing lens sunglasses will help cut the glare of the water and let you see down into the depth in excess of 25 ft. when conditions are right.

Because you are looking down, your underwater view is affected by light refraction. When viewed from an angle your target is always somewhat lower than it appears to be, so: aim low! Only experience (hits and misses) can teach you to relate depth and angle.

If you're interested in starting this fun-time sport — or improving a beginning skill — write for a free copy of "Tips On Successful Bow Fishing," Dept. GO, Ben Pearson Archery, P.O. Box 270, Tulsa, Okla. 74101.

Fishing lure colors aid in making easier catch

Fishermen are often advised to use dark colored lures on cloudy days for the best success. Is there a valid reason for this commonly accepted practice, or is it just a myth that has grown over the years?

By applying common sense thinking to the question "When is lure color important?" the fishing experts at Mercury outboards suggest that you can determine with some accuracy which color is best for a particular situation.

Biologists say that fish probably see color more as shades of grey than as the brilliant tints we see. Therefore, lures will appear as white, black and hues in between, depending upon their color, and some — such as silver and copper — will be brighter because of their light reflecting qualities.

Dark colored lures on cloudy days definitely work, and the reason must lie in what the fish sees. With less sun on the water, the chance for light to reflect off the side of a bait fish is considerably reduced.

Large fish probably see small fish and other aquatic animals as dark forms. It makes sense to use a lure which appears natural under these conditions. A silver or white lure which reflects a lot of light just isn't what the big fish expects.

If you're after a big fish where he lives — say under a log or rock — then color can be a deciding factor.

Many fishing guides are of the opinion that unless a "resident" fish is attracted by something unusual, chances are he'll ignore your offering. He won't be aroused by something that looks commonplace. Bright colored lures are recommended.

Fishing in dingy water is another situation that demands some thought about lure color. Here, the amount of sunlight available is at a minimum, yet bait fish in dirty water are usually very light in color. A dark lure could seem out of place.

Schools of feeding fish usually pay little attention to color, so anything that will attract their attention is likely to work. However, keep in mind the possible flash of sun reflected off silver and white lures.

If you do some thinking about what a fish expects to see under certain conditions, your chances of presenting him with what he wants are much better.

Pre-vacation auto inspection prevents unnecessary stops

As every experienced motoring-vacationing family knows, the quickest way to reach their destination in the great outdoors is by avoiding any unnecessary stops.

Most of the unnecessary stops that today's modern motoring family are apt to encounter can be prevented by just one scheduled stop prior to departure.

That one stop is at the local service center.

A pre-vacation bumper-to-bumper car maintenance inspection will detect potential mechanical problems that could cause aggravating travel interruptions, possibly shortening the vacation or even causing it to end — only 20 miles from home.

If the family is planning on towing a boat, trailer or camper, they should inform the technician of this before he begins his inspection. This will enable him to take the additional load into consideration.

Stopping by choice, not chance, is the key to a successful motoring vacation.

The only stop that must be made en route to one's destination, and depending on distance, of course, is for fuel. Best practice is to "drive on top of the tank," which means stopping for gasoline whenever the gauge shows the tank is down to "half full."

These stops also offer the opportunity for "en route" front end checks which the gas station attendant will make for free, such as tire pressure, coolant level, oil and battery.

There are, of course, other good reasons for making stops along the way. There is the comfort stop, especially when the kids are along, and the one to give the driver a chance to relax, at, say, every 150 miles covered.

There is also the lunch stop, the stop for overnight lodging, and sometimes

Bass fishing: a fast catch

"They're up!" is a familiar yell among many fishermen and what it means is that a school of feeding white bass or black bass has run a school of frenzied shad to the surface and are rapidly reducing their numbers.

Sometimes these schools stay up only seconds. Sometimes as long as 30 minutes. However long they stay up, the fishermen who stay with them in the "jumps" are in for some fast fishing. It may happen in the back of a small cove, in front of a public boat dock, under a bridge or in the middle of the lake.

Here are some tricks:

On top they'll usually hit shad-looking baits such as the Doll Fish or Vibrator. Work it fast. A quick retrieving spinning reel like the Zebco Cardinal 4 works well. So do fast retrieving spin-cast reels such as the Zebco One. If you're an ultra light fisherman, small white or yellow maribou jigs will work.

Don't forget the big fish in the school. They may be white bass or even trophy black bass but regardless, they'll probably be below the school.

Maybe they're lazy... letting the little guys on top do the hard work... but they are there and if the right bait is presented the right way, they'll hit. Use something that will get down like a Ditch Digger or heavier Doll maribou jig.

If the surface feeding fish are black bass, here's a tip: the school won't be too far away when they're not feeding on top. Work the areas with structure (drop offs, brush, etc.) and when you find them you'll have some top to bottom fun throughout the day.

Great Outdoors!

Helping keep the outdoors great is everyone's job. You've heard it all before, but it's still true. When you're enjoying outdoor living, you can do your part by not littering, by recycling products that used to be part of the trash heap, by not burning leaves or trash... and by asking your neighbors not to, also.

When watering the lawn or washing the car, don't let the water run excessively. If you are cooking on a gas grill, you're using the cleanest burning source of energy available. Use it wisely... supplies are limited, and natural gas is one of the most valuable resources we have, and a real plus in helping clean up the environment.

New tuned exhaust system boosts Johnson 135 power

The 1973 Johnson 135, the most powerful stock outboard in the company's history, is built around the same powerhead as the Stinger GP high-performance outboard that powered Johnnie Sanders to victory at the 1972 Outboard World Championships.

Both the Johnson Stinger GP and the Johnson 135 are built on a 99.6-cubic-inch cylinder block, and the 135 has some other features that it "borrowed" from the racing program.

The increase in power to this year's 135 comes chiefly from the new tuned exhaust system — a system that was developed, tested, and proven on the race course. This year's 135 also has redesigned porting and combustion chambers, and a new gear ratio.

The 115 now has the same 99.6 cubic-inch displacement as the 135, accounting for much of the 15-horsepower boost from last year's 100 for this No. 2 member of the V-4 line. The Johnson 85 retains the 92.6-cubic-inch displacement it had last year. All three of these V-4s are drainless for 1973 as all the Sea Horse outboards are, and use the 50-to-1 fuel mixture.

Johnson's new Power Shift II is shipped with all the V-4s. This new shift is a hydraulically assisted system, with a positive mechanical back-up, and contained in the Power Shift II control unit are the ignition, warm-up and choke controls, adjustable throttle friction control and an overheat warning horn.

The control unit also doubles as a padded contour arm rest for the driver, and has the safety of start-in-neutral only.

The 1973 Johnson 85, 115 and 135 all feature MagFlash capacitor discharge breakerless ignition, a system, which, in less than five millionths of a second (.000005 seconds), puts out up to 35,000 volts of spark to the surface gap spark plugs. The Johnson technicians point out that it's 250 times faster at the firing gap than a conventional ignition system.

Some of the other features common to the V-4 line include Pressure Back piston rings, which provide less friction, less engine wear and better fuel economy, and let two rings do the work that three used to; a thermostatically controlled cooling system; and, new for '73, a programmed tilt-and-trailing lock that permits the pre-selection of the desired up and down tilt position by moving one, easy-to-reach lever.

Other features standard to the V-4 line-up are a new crankshaft with improved balance; larger upper and lower main bearings and larger wrist pins; a larger driveshaft; and a redesigned adjustable stern bracket, for easier engine removal and height adjustments.

A new power trim-and-tilt unit and a flexible cable steering system head the list of accessories. Each V-4 is available with a choice of seven aluminum propellers at no extra cost. Three bronze and four Teflon-S coated stainless steel "SST" props are available at extra cost.

New 'family' jet offers several new advantages

Waukesha is introducing a new jet package in its 1973 line, the Model 302/2. The company claims it is an ideal "family jet" just right for all-around boating.

The new 302/2 Jet features the new Jacuzzi VJ pump which offers several new advantages. It is equipped with a steering rudder for greatly improved control at low speeds. All aluminum parts are hard anodized to reduce corrosion-erosion from sand, gravel and seawater.

The new 302/2 Jet joins the 351/4 Jet and 400/4 Jet in the Waukesha line.

The Waukesha 302/2 and 351/4 Jets offer fresh water cooling, exhaust and intake system as standard — no extra cost. The company offers a full one-year warranty on all of its complete jet drives — not just the engine.

Fisherman's survival kit helps out in emergency

Most outdoorsmen think of survival gear as something needed when traveling in wilderness country. And rightly so, but today — thanks to reliable equipment — many recreational boaters are journeying to remote areas where the comforts of civilization are not handy. Although there is little likelihood they will meet with an emergency situation, it never hurts to be prepared! Storms and accidents can happen.

Fishermen and boat campers experienced in wilderness travel have many helpful suggestions for those who want to build their own "preparedness" kit. From these the outdoor experts at Mercury outboards have selected some ideas that are especially suited to boating enthusiasts.

Shelter from inclement weather is a primary objective of outdoor preparedness. Your kit should include a 10x12-foot tarpaulin with grommets, and 50 feet of 1/4-inch nylon cord.

With these you can quickly convert part of your boat to a satisfactory shelter. Throw the tarp over the windshield and tie down the corners and edges through the grommets. If you want to get off the water, use the tarp as shelter on shore. Tie it to trees or weight one edge with stones and make a lean-to.

Food is the second consideration. Put in canned goods (with the labels taped on), foil packaged foods (dried fruits are excellent) and some Army field rations (available at surplus outlets).

A can opener is needed, and you might want to include a small, one-burner sportsman's stove fired by LP gas. Dip some matches in paraffin, seal them in a can. Now you can eat — and have a choice of hot or cold food.

First aid supplies are next. Include merthiolate, bandages, gauze, compress, tape, large triangular cloth, and a book on first aid remedies.

The staff at Mercury recommends that you pack these few items in a waterproof container and leave it in your boat. With them it will be impossible to meet and handle almost any emergency. Other equipment, such as flares, can be added as desired.

Boating: a growing sport

BALLENTINE, S.C. (UPI) — Recreational boating is one of the nation's fastest growing outdoor sports.

The National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers says Americans spent nearly $4 billion last year on boats, boat equipment, and related costs such as fuel and marina storage.

To save storage fees, many owners transport their boats to and from their homes aboard specially-designed trailers. These can be backed into the water at the concrete launching ramps which are located profusely around lakes, rivers, inlets and other waterways. Nearly 4 million boat trailers are now registered in the 50 states.

Registration statistics indicate America's pleasure fleet includes about 700,000 "pure" sailboats, 700,000 yachts with inboard motors or large sailboats with auxiliary power plants and 5.4 million outboard motor boats, big enough to require licensing.

In addition, authorities estimate there are about 2.2 million smaller boats, mostly fishing craft, which are powered by outboards too small to require registration. The rules differ from state to state, but the typical state law requires licensing of any boat with a motor of 10 horsepower or more.

Within the powerboat fraternity, there are distinct strata. The upper class consists of cabin cruisers, usually 30 to 40 feet long, which are fitted out with sleeping accommodations, galleys for cooking, and toilet facilities.

Cabin cruisers are good for taking long trips, which require you to spend several days and nights aboard. They cost anywhere from $25,000 to $250,000.

Houseboats, rapidly growing in popularity, are flat-bottomed, slow-moving boats meant to be anchored in one place most of the time. They make great weekend homes for water-loving families. Since they are designed for comfortable living rather than flashy performance, they are much roomier than cabin cruisers.

In fact, a houseboat resembles a small floating cottage with a covered porch at each end. Again, costs range widely, depending on size and luxury of accommodations.

By far the largest class of powerboats are runabouts. As the name implies, they are designed for "running about" lakes or waterways for picnicking, water-skiing, fishing, swimming, or just for the sheer joy of whipping through the water at high speed.

Runabouts generally have no galleries, toilets or sleeping facilities. They are primarily for one-day outings on the water. They are driven by outboard motors range in size from 15 to 150 horsepower, or inboard-outboard motors, which may go as high as 260 horsepower.

The size and type of the motor is a major factor in determining the cost. You can buy a pretty runabout with adequate outboard power for around $2,500, or a deluxe model with high horsepower for $3,500 to $5,000.

Averaging out manufacturer's statistics — and just looking around a busy lake on a balmy Saturday leads to the conclusion that the typical powerboat is a 16-foot runabout with a 40-horsepower outboard motor. It cost about $2,500, complete with trailer.

One unfortunate aspect of boating's phenomenal rise in popularity is that some waterways now get dangerously crowded on summer weekends and holidays.

The perils of on-water collision are heightened by the fact that many new owners take their boats out and operate them at top speed without ever bothering to learn the "rules of the road" of water navigation.

Drunken driving also is a menace, on waterways no less than highways.

But a careful boat driver, like a careful auto driver, usually can anticipate and avoid these traffic hazards. And once you've gotten away from the crowded waters around the marinas, and into a lonely stretch of tree-lined lake where you can fish, swim, eat lunch or just nap in the sun — well, it's mighty peaceful and pleasant out there on the water.

Popular boat size

If your pleasure boat is between 14'7" and 16'6" you've got lots of company. According to the Johnson Outboards News Bureau, 40.3 per cent of the nation's pleasure boats fall into that size category while another 22.6 per cent are 16'7" or longer.

Boating sales on the rise

One of the big barometers of the boating industry at the start of each year is the amount of orders placed by the public at the National Boat Show held each January in New York City.

At the 10-day exhibit this year, orders hit the record high from last year by $2.3 million and topping the previous record of $57.8 million set in 1969.

This year is also expected to see another upsurge in sales of boat trailers. About 50,000 of them were sold in 1972 to bring the total now in use to 3.8 million.

All new 135 H.P. heads Evinrude's outboard line

Up to 135 H.P. is Evinrude's Starlite 135, a 99.6 cubic inch outboard and Evinrude's most powerful 1973 V-4, stemming from the principles learned on the racing field through revamping the exhaust system. Included are thinner reed valves, new combustion chamber shape, and a new porting technique.

Seven extra cubic inch has also been added to the new Starlite 115 H.P. and it now stands at 99.6 cubic inches. The Starlite 85 H.P. remains at 92.6, but all three units have performance-proven pressure-backed piston rings for longer life and better power seal.

Engineering has focused its attention on the larger horsepower 50's, 65, and V-4's, with an all new "Power Pilot" hydraulic assist-mechanical shift, plus increased horsepower. Evinrude's "Firepower" Magneto Breakerless CD Ignition utilizes individual ignition coils to fire series-gap, surface-gap plugs employing very short, high tension leads. Therefore, the distributor and related parts, including the anti-reverse ring, have been removed.

The new crankshaft is strengthened by a larger top main bearing; larger wrist pins and wrist pin bearings provide more durability, while an improved cooling path around the cylinders gives more consistent temperature and eliminates piston sticking due to "hot" spots.

The "Power Pilot" hydraulic assist-mechanical shift operates very similarly to power steering on an automobile. A mechanical linkage on the control box through a cable is linked at the engine and operates an "in-line" hydraulic valve mechanism on the vertical shift rod to control the shifting.

The new "Power Pilot" control system was designed to afford operator comfort as well as being virtually effortless to operate. It has a "hot horn" and a new "start in neutral only" feature. A special bar on the underside of the control handle must be depressed to shift the motor into gear.

The two-cylinder 50 h.p. and the three-cylinder 65 h.p. are loop-charged in-line engines and also include the new "Power Pilot" hydraulic assist-mechanical shifts.

All three V-4's, the 65 and 50 h.p. also have a new feature called "through tilt-pin steering." This allows the steering cable to pass through and anchor to the engine tilt tube, coming out the other side, and by means of a link, connect to the engine steering arm.

This system simplifies dealer installation, eliminates drilling extra holes in the transom, and removes mistakes in the system adjusts. Another brand spanking new feature is the "Programmed Tilt Latch" that simplifies motor tilting, whether on the water or trailering.

A new accessory on the 65 h.p. Triumph 20-inch shaft up through the 135 Starlite is a "Power Trim" feature, which gives "on the go" adjustment of engine trim angle at full prop thrust. The electro-hydraulic "Power Trim" kit bolts directly to the engine, without removing the outboard from the transom, and is controlled by a remote cable with a dashboard-mounted electrical switch.

The 40 h.p. has been improved and now boasts a "neutral start only" mechanism. It is the top of the Evinrude big h.p. motors that can now burn lead-free fuels. All that is required is an octane rating of 91 or better for the 40 h.p. down through the 2 h.p.

The two-cylinder 18 and 25 h.p.'s have been changed to make them easier, safer, and more dependable with the addition of Low Tension Ignition. This system routes the low voltage from the generating source to the high voltage coils, located close to the spark plugs.

Its use of a generating coil under the flywheel and a high voltage coil mounted close to the spark plugs results in a high voltage rise that is almost two times faster than a standard magneto, and with the use of auxiliary gap spark plugs, reduces plug fouling at idle and slow speeds. The entire ignition system will have long life and low maintenance costs.

The smooth, alternate firing twin 4, 6, and 9 1/2 h.p. Evinrude outboards have all new appearances. All three have overboard drains eliminated — as does the entire Evinrude line of outboards. The 4 h.p. comes in two models: the Yachtwin with its 90 degree deep water drive, and the Lightwin sporting a fisherman's weedless angle drive.

A new plastic propeller and slip clutch design have been added to the Yachtwin to extend gearcase life and provide a more consistent torque in salt water usage. The high-impact Lexan propeller will help reduce blade breakage and is free of cavitation erosion. It also gives longer life and smoother operation.

The 6 h.p., with its forward, neutral, and reverse gear shift, is now referred to as the small outboard with all the big engine features. It weighs in at only 51 pounds and has a six-gallon remote fuel tank.

The 9 1/2 has all the features of last year, including no overboard drains, full gearshift, steering handle that swivels down for compact storage, 8 tiltout positions, and is portable weighing only 60 pounds. Remote control, steering and gearshift controls are available as accessories.

The 2 h.p., referred to as the "Little Guy," has many features other small outboards cannot claim: rewind starter, rubber isolation, water cooling, shock absorber, isolated semi-weedless propeller, and ease of operation.

Recreational boats growing in number

In less than 70 years, the number of recreational boats in use throughout the United States has grown in spectacular fashion. The 1972 figures show more than 9 million pleasure boats in use compared to 400,000 in 1913.

Boating safety program scheduled at Boat Show

Row riding, gunnel riding, and riding the top of seat backs are three of the most dangerous boating practices, according to the U.S. Coast Guard Safety Detachment stationed at Fox Lake.

Safety in Boating will be discussed by Coast Guard officers at 7:30 p.m. each evening at their booth at the Midwest Boat Show, March 9-18, at the Arlington Park Exposition Center in Arlington Heights.

More than 100 marine dealers will display all kinds of pleasure craft and boating accessories at the show, a buyers market that attracts boating fans from Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Iowa as well as the Chicago and suburban area.

Informational programs on Coho Salmon fishing, Underwater Photography, a marine photography exhibition, and other entertainment features will highlight the Midwest Boat Show along with the safety lectures by the Coast Guard.

Gunnel Riding, the Coast Guard will point out, may be a hazard to boat operator and passengers alike. There's only a 50 per cent chance of survival if someone falls overboard. In falling, the operator's natural reaction is to pull the wheel in the direction of the fall which can put the boat into a hard turn, resulting in others falling in the water and a runaway boat.

Row riding, though it looks like fun, can have serious consequences. Even at slow speeds, boats cannot stop fast enough to avoid striking someone who falls off the bow. Riding on top of the seat back while operating a boat also is dangerous because it is more difficult from this position to reach controls and avoid collisions.

The Coast Guard points out that running a boat so that it endangers life, limb, or property can incur a fine as much as $1,000 or a federal prison term or both.

Besides coming to the Midwest Boat Show, boaters may contact the United States Coast Guard Auxiliary, or the United States Power Squadrons for information available about boating safety courses. Boating course schedules are available by calling 800-243-6000.

More than 100 marine dealers will display all the latest in pleasure craft and boating accessories at the 10-day show, billed as a "Buyers Market Place."

Midwest Boat Show hours are Friday, March 9, 6 p.m. to 10:30 p.m.; Saturday and Sunday, March 10 and 11, noon to 10:30 p.m.; Monday through Friday, March 12-16, 4 p.m. to 10:30 p.m.; Saturday, March 17, noon to 10:30 p.m.; and Sunday, March 18, noon to 7 p.m.

Admission is $2.00 for adults and 75 cents for students.

Government study investigates ways to make outdoors accessible to all

An enormous amount of hard work is going into the distinctly earthly task of ensuring the maximum return for all Americans from their expenditures on land and facilities for outdoor recreation. As humanity has become more and more circumscribed by steel, concrete and glass, human needs for recreation and untouchable nature have become not only more obvious but, for some, indeed critical.

A person whose life is a series of buildings, sidewalks and vehicles may be a finely honed, efficient tool in his civilized world, but he may not feel that he is fulfilling his humanity.

Many persons of all ages like to engage regularly and frequently in some kind of activity out-of-doors, in pleasing surroundings; but not all persons can. This, along with the need to make optimum use of planning expertise and tax dollars, is one of the concerns of an intensive study going on all over the country and centered in Washington, D. C.

Named simply "The Nationwide Outdoor Recreation Plan," the study has a simple goal: to present a plan whereby all levels of government — federal, state, and local — move forward together in making the Out-Of-Doors World of Recreation more accessible and satisfying to the public.

The Department of the Interior's Bureau of Outdoor Recreation has been charged with producing such a plan, and has the expertise, organization and talent to do it.

During its 10 year history, the Bureau has become consultant and advisor to federal agencies with outdoor recreation functions and has a partnership with each of the states and with many local governments in the acquisition and development of recreation areas and facilities.

While boat industry grows boating facilities lag behind

NEW YORK (UPI) — More than 46 million Americans will go down to the sea in pleasure boats in 1973, creating probably the greatest wave of prosperity in yachting since improved production methods opened the sport to the common man after World War II.

These boating bulls, according to industry estimates, will pour about $4 billion into the economy in purchases ranging from nuts and bolts up to 50-foot yachts.

Tips for fisherman who has outboard

To help make fishing from a boat more productive, Johnson Outboards offers these tips for the most effective use of your outboard:

Explore a new lake first. Cruise around and note fish covers, shady spots, deep holes. Consult a topographic map of the area.

Check to see if state regulations permit trolling.

By trolling with the lure in the water, you're covering a lot of territory. Use a deep weedless plug. If this fails, try a shallow diving plug. Vary trolling speeds. Check plug action.

When fish are found, anchor and cast in that area. When the action stops, start trolling again.

Reverse trolling is one of the best techniques for fishing the shoreline. You can go slower and work an area more carefully.

When fishing weed beds or holes in open water, use the outboard to run upwind of the area, then drift.

In a nutshell, if you have an outboard, use it. Explore. Troll. Work a shoreline. Cast.

ities. All of these "Friends of BOR" are assisting in the formulation of the nationwide plan.

The Bureau, with cooperation from the many agencies with an interest in outdoor recreation, is assembling a full inventory of publicly owned outdoor recreation areas and facilities, which includes data on their extent, purpose and cost.

The best talent in each agency has been assigned to 10 federal work groups to explore such specialized areas as urban recreation, quality recreation resources areas, and recreation needs of the disadvantaged. Problems and their possible solutions will be explored in all the subject areas.

Citizen involvement was sought early in the plan's evolution through a series of forums held in 10 cities across the country. Major themes and critical issues emerging from these forums were then analyzed for inclusion in the plan. Help has also come from citizen conservation organizations and industry groups with a stake in recreation.

State and local recreationists have added their knowledge and recommendations through such organizations as the National Association of State Outdoor Recreation Liaison Officers, the National Association of Counties, the National League of Cities, and the National Recreation and Park Association. Individual state and local park officials have also contributed.

Two massive data gathering studies are under way, one personal interview survey to determine the recreation habits and desire of the American public, the other an inventory of federal, state and local recreation areas and facilities collected on a county-by-county basis.

Also, there is a selected inventory of privately managed recreation projects.

yachts complete with wall-to-wall carpeting and color-coordinated bathtubs. The total will bring to 9.5 million the total of recreational boats in existence on all waters of the United States.

In contrast, the number of marinas, boat yards and yacht clubs with waterfront facilities has increased at a snail's pace — from about 5,000 10 years ago to an estimated 5,900 in 1972.

These are lucrative businesses but they are difficult to establish because of the scarcity and high table waterfront property and similar costs for installation of facilities.

This has been no deterrent to the boat builders and to the thousands of companies that produce boating accessories.

As Howard F. Larson, president of the Boating Industry Association, reported recently in a "State of the Industry" speech to BIA members: "The year 1972 saw our member companies reach records in production and sales, and in most cases, profits. There have been impressive gains by our companies, and our business forecasts, spirit and enthusiasm in this industry are running at one of the highest peaks in our history."

$4,000 gadget

Seen at the National Boat Show: A $4,000 "gadget" called a Thruster which gives a boat the capability of slipping in and out of tight spots, sideways, even against strong winds and currents. The Thruster, a diverter valve, fits into the bilge and pumps seawater by way of a hole in the bottom of the hull through apertures in the hull sides. Over 1,000 gallons per minute of jet-thrusting power can accommodate boats up to 100 feet.

From all these data, analyses concerning present and future demand-supply and cost/benefit relationships will be made.

Throughout the nationwide plan, each facet of the recreation picture will be treated in the triangular context of resources, institutions and people, and subdivided geographically into central cities, the suburbs and fringe areas, small cities, the countryside, and special recreation resource areas.

When all information has been gleaned from every conceivable source it will be distilled into a comprehensive report, with a release scheduled for the end of 1973.

The report, however, will not be the last word. The plan will be revised every five years to reflect the progress it has engendered, and to assess the needs not yet met.

The plan, though still very much in the works, confirms that the nation's recreation needs are great: its goal is to assure that they are met.

Have outboard checked prior to boating season

Most small boat owners will be putting between 50 and 60 hours on their outboards this season. The amount of wear and tear on the engine is equal to putting 10,000 miles on your car! In that length of time, for a two-cylinder outboard,

Each spark plug fires 15,000,000 times. Contact points open and close 30,000,000 times.

The magneto delivers 30,000,000 charges of current 15,000 volts per charge.

Spark plug wires deliver a total 450,000,000 volts.

The crankshaft will rotate 30,000,000 times.

On this basis, it's easy to see why engine parts, particularly the ignition system, wear out, says Champion Spark Plug Company.

Conditioning your outboard before the boating season begins can eliminate the embarrassing situation where you are the first in the water — and also the first out, long before the fun season ends!

Make sure spark plugs are cleaned and gapped. If this was done last season, consider installing new spark plugs to get this season off to a good start.

Go over the rest of the ignition system carefully making sure contact points are in good condition, adjusted to the proper gap, and that spark timing is set correctly. Check all cables for broken insulation, loose connectors or for frayed spots. Replace all worn cables.

Make sure you have an extra set of spark plugs on board as well as a wrench to install them. Keep these in a good, dry place to avoid rusting.

Make sure the fuel system is clean, and all components operating properly.

With these sorts of precautions plus your other normal "get-back-in-the-water" checks and adjustments, you're ready for another trouble-free fun-season on the water.

Mercury models receive new refinements in 1973

The most powerful production outboard ever offered to the general boating public by Mercury highlights the 1973 outboard line. The 150-hp Merc 1500 is a six-cylinder, in-line model with exclusive Direct Charge powerhead design. Another new-comer is a four-cylinder, in-line Merc 850, rated at 85 hp.

The rest of the new Mercury offerings include another six-in-line, the Merc 1150 rated at 115 hp; the three-cylinder 65-hp Merc 650; the four-cylinder 50-hp Merc 500; four twin-cylinder models, the 40-hp Merc 402, 20-hp Merc 200, 9.8-hp Merc 110 and 7.5-hp Merc 75; plus a single-cylinder 4-hp Merc 40.

Every model has received significant improvements with resulting benefits to potential buyers. Among the refinements are additional corrosion proofing, particularly on the lower-horsepower motors, improved operating performance and greater component reliability.

With a gain of ten horsepower over the previous most powerful Mercury, the Merc 1500 incorporates "power-ported" pistons as an additional source of fuel/air mixture to the combustion chambers. This results in added power without increased displacement.

Twister-powered boats took both the twin-engine and single-engine titles. Power porting has also been extended to the Merc 850 for improved high-speed performance.

The Merc 850 has a 5-hp boost over its four-cylinder predecessor with no increase in piston displacement or overall weight. The engine has the Mercury Direct Charge induction system for efficient fuel intake and exhaust removal.

The exclusive powerhead design, combined with power porting and pulse-timed exhaust, enables this model to produce 85 horsepower from only 66.6 cubic inches displacement. Direct Charge engines are provided on all models from 40 through 150 hp, except the Merc 500.

An improved production process, producing "cam-turned" pistons for all Direct Charge engines, makes each piston fit the cylinder bore more precisely. The result is all-around better performance, especially at startup when the engine is cold, as well as reduced slap and scuffing and longer life through less wear.

Pulse-timed exhaust, already on the Merc 650, has been extended to the 85, 115 and 150-hp Mercs. Increased power and fuel efficiency result from this application.

A change in the Merc 1150 gear ratio to 14:28 makes it common with that of the Merc 1500. The maximum full throttle rpm for the 150-hp engine is 4800-5800 rpm with 4800-5300 rpm for the 115-hp engine.

Breakerless Thunderbolt ignition and extended life Perma-Gap spark plugs are standard on all Mercury outboards from 20 to 150 hp. The smaller engines, 4 to 9.8 hp, also use Perma-Gap spark plugs and Thunderbolt Phase-Maker Ignition. The patented Thunderbolt ignition systems are of the capacitor-discharge type.

An improved electrical system has been applied to the Merc 402 to increase reliability. The Merc 200 now has a breakerless ignition system, similar to that of the 40-hp engine, and requires no points to adjust or replace.

Thunderbolt ignition can fire spark plugs considered "fouled" by conventional standards. Sure starting under a variety of adverse operating conditions, plus virtually no lead fouling or pre-ignition problems, are major advantages.

Mercury Thunderbolt ignition and Perma-Gap spark plugs allow the use of regular automotive gasoline at a 50:1 gas/oil mix using Quicksilver Formula 50 or Formula 50-D outboard oil. Lead-free or low-lead gasoline without phosphorus additives is also recommended.

Electric starting is a standard feature on all Mercury outboards from 40 to 150 hp. Additionally, manual starting is available for 40 to 50 hp and an electric-starting kit is optional for 20 hp. All production electric-start models are equipped with an alternator to charge the battery while the engine is running.

The fuel pump is integral with the new centerbowl carburetor on the Merc 200, 110 and 75 models. The centerbowl design prevents fuel leakage into the boat when the motor is fully tilted out of the water.

The choking mechanism has been changed to a push-pull type for easier operation. The choke shutter is of the "butterfly" type that fits closer within the carburetor air intake chamber. Cold weather starting is improved, especially where temperatures are below 50 degrees.

On the Merc 110, 75 and 40 models, the reverse locking mechanism is automatically engaged whenever the shift lever is moved to neutral or reverse. Conversely, the lock is released when shifting to forward gear, enabling the motor to tilt up in the event an underwater obstacle is struck. This device is already on all the larger Mercs.

For shallow-water operation, the 9.8, 7.5 and 4-hp models have an auxiliary tilt position actuated by a manually operated lever. The fisherman can get in close to shore by tilting his engine several inches above its normal setting without having to change the tilt pin location.

Extensive corrosion proofing refinements have been carried out on the four smallest Mercs. Material changes, including non-metallic or stainless steel parts plus improved seals, assure longer life in saltwater environment. One obvious change is that the end of the propeller shaft is not totally enclosed by a cap-type nut to cover all threads. The threads are protected against damage, enabling easier removal of the nut.

A change affecting all Mercury models is a completely painted powerhead using baked black enamel. Enhanced appearance and improved corrosion resistance have resulted.

All production Mercury Outboards have an internal fuel recirculating system which returns unburnt fuel or crankcase residuals to the combustion chambers and also increases internal bearing lubrication.

Mercury Power Trim is now offered as standard equipment on the long shaft 150 and 115-hp models. Designated as the Merc 1500 PT and Merc 1150 PT, both feature an improved factory-installed double-acting hydraulic system which provides the boater with remote pushbutton trimming of the motor for a more level ride despite changing water and load conditions.

Gourmet meal for fisherman

The secret to good outdoor fish cooking is found in advance preparation — and a hot skillet. Here are some hints that will add considerable flavor and fun to your next fishing expedition.

Keep the fish you catch alive if possible. If not, remove the viscera immediately and place the fish on ice. Fish taste best when freshly caught, immediately killed and cleaned.

Wipe the flesh with a paper towel or dry cloth. Don't salt the fish, but pepper can be used. Salt tends to draw moisture from the flesh, and should be added only after the fish has been cooked.

Next fill a large skillet with enough cooking oil or grease to half cover the fish. Heat this until it sizzles. When the fish are put into the skillet, the hot grease will quickly seal the flesh against grease penetration and will help retain natural moisture.

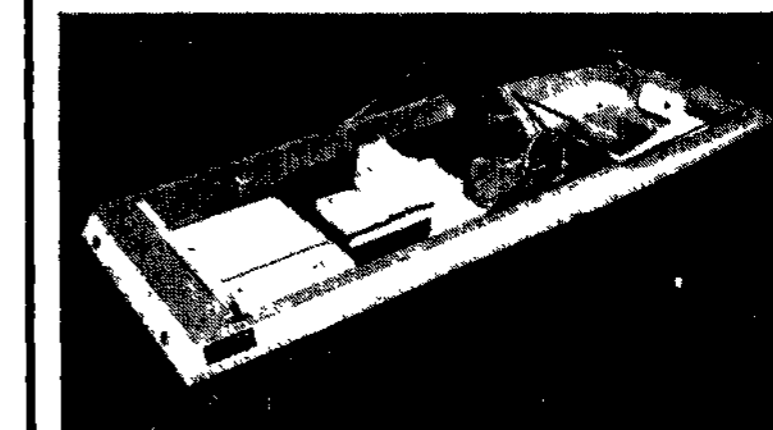

Each fish added will lower the temperature of the grease, so it is best to let it sizzle again before putting in another piece. Turn the fish to fry on both sides. Keep the grease hot. Wipe excess grease from cooked fish with paper towels.

Garnished with lemon and served with fried potatoes, a shore lunch of fresh fish is hard to beat.

CANOING IS A rapidly growing boating activity. It has been estimated that there are around a half million canoes in use in the United States today. Canoes vary in shape, size and construction materials. From this selection, there is a canoe that should fit every boating enthusiast's desires.

Canoeing rapidly becoming popular recreational outlet

NEW YORK (UPI) — There is no accurate count, but there are probably more than a half million canoes gliding around the nation's waters and this facet of recreational boating is growing steadily. So much so that several states have established canoe trails for these devotees to the sport of paddling.

Prominent among them are Florida and Texas.

The former has recently published a highly informative 40-page booklet, "Florida Canoe Trail Guide," which sketches the attractions of the 16 river canoe trails now in the state's Canoe Trail System. Difficulties to be encountered as well as the pleasures are described.

From Texas comes "Texas Rivers and Rapids," an all-encompassing, 64-page magazine that describes light rivers in detail. It also includes checklist tips on canoe clothing, first aid equipment, utility items and personal articles to consider packing. There's even an article on canoe cooking, and 13 safety "Rules of the River."

Among the recommended trips in the Florida booklet is the 66½-mile journey on the Peace River from just east of Fort Meade downstream to a point near Arcadia.

"The Peace is an ideal river for canoeing," the booklet states. "Dense forest borders the waterway along most of the trail with the only mark of civilization being an occasional bridge, power lines and some pasture land. rarely, a house is visible from the river.

"The flood plain abounds in wildlife of all kinds from field mice to wild hogs."

For those seeking more excitement there is the Black Creek trail which begins near Green Cove Springs and winds through 17 miles of river swampland and sand hills to its terminus at the St. Johns River.

"The trail offers many challenges to the canoeist," the booklet says. "Near the beginning a set of small rapids will be encountered, as well as numerous logs and submerged stumps that will require negotiating."

"The scenic beauty of the stream is complemented by the presence of alligators and numerous wading birds. Fishing is good all along the way for bass and bream."

Among the interesting trips scribed in "Texas Rivers and Rapids" is one along the Guadalupe, although the magazine warns: "Anyone running the Guadalupe should have previous canoeing experience. If the water is less than a foot under Sprecht's Crossing Bridge, the rapids downstream are going to be mean and fast."

Another is a 17-mile stretch of the Colorado from Bend to Post Oak Creek "where towering bluffs, scenic canyons, and beautiful water make this trip enjoyable for any canoeist."

Or try the 39-mile paddle along the Brazos River from Highway 16 through craggy cliffs and boulders to Highway 180.

A copy of "Florida Canoe Trail guide" may be obtained free of charge by writing: State of Florida, Department of Natural Resources, Division of Recreation and Parks, Larson Building, Tallahassee, Fla., 32304.

"Texas Rivers and Rapids" is available for $3 by addressing the magazine at Box 673, Humble, Texas 77338.

Boating books, pamphlets published by government

NEW YORK (UPI) — One of the least known sources of excellent, inexpensive publications of interest to recreational boaters is the U.S. Government Printing Office.

The titles available include books and pamphlets by the Navy, Coast Guard and other government agencies on boating navigation, electronics, safety and other related topics.

Many of these publications were prepared at considerable expense by some of the best experts in their fields and their cost, when compared with equivalent, commercially available texts, represents a good bargain.

Prices range from as little as five cents for a pamphlet, "Safety Tips, in, on and Around Water," up to as much as $7.25 for the "U.S. Navy Diving Manual," a book which explains general principles of self-contained and surface-supplied diving, first aid, emergency procedures and diving accessories.

There is a "World Port Index" for $1.50 which gives locations and descriptions of maritime ports with references to appropriate sailing directions and charts.

Some other titles include "Navigation Compendium," "Navigation Dictionary," "Shipboard Electronic Equipment," "The Skipper's Course," "American Practical Navigator," "Troubleshooting and repair of Radio Equipment," "Marine Crewman's Handbook."

The Handbook provides information on small boat and ship handling, piloting, towing, basic construction of small ships, emergency procedures, communications, rules of the road, and a glossary of nautical terms.

Altogether, there are more than 70 of these publications available from the U.S. Government Printing Office.

Anyone can obtain a list of these boating and boating-related publications by writing the USGPO, Public Documents Department, Washington, D.C.

Any citizen may also request to have his name placed on the USGPO's mailing list to receive a free copy of the biweekly bulleting, "Selected U.S. Government Publications," which advises the reader of some of the latest and most popular publications available.

Boating books, pamphlets etc., 2/35—

There is also a commercial firm, Technical Information Services, P.O. Box 2404, Los Angeles 90024, which offers for 50 cents a selected list of government publications relating to boating, along with an order form.

Teach family navigation on long-distance cruise

Add more fun to long-distance boat cruises by teaching family members the rudiments of navigation. You don't need to be an expert navigator, and the technique doesn't call for a lot of expensive equipment.

With nothing more than a map, a compass, and an hour of spare time, the outdoor recreation staff at Mercury outboards advises that you can set up an inland-water navigation problem that will be challenging, instructive, and entertaining.

First, obtain a good map of the lake or area you plan to cruise; one that shows landmarks and navigation aids if they are present. Then orient the map to north and tape it in place on a table or other suitable flat surface.

The north/south heading can be determined with an inexpensive compass, and the map should have an arrow indicating these directions.

Next, determine where you intend to go during the cruise. Then — using the compass — plot a course reading the directions from the compass in degrees. At each point of course change, re-orient the compass to the map and plot the next leg of your cruise.

In this manner indicate all course headings on a sheet of paper, and where a direction change is necessary show a landmark or navigation feature that will alert the helmsman.

If you are able to determine distance traveled and elapsed time at a given speed, these factors can be given the helmsman instead of landmarks or navigation markers. This requires knowing your boat's speed and plotting it against the map in terms of time between check points or course changes.

To avoid compass deviations that could affect your headings, plot the course to be taken when you are as near the actual starting point as possible. Be alert for compass errors in the boat. Aluminum has no effect on a compass, but steel and other metals will cause incorrect readings.

The challenge comes in seeing if you can actually reach your destination by compass navigation. The staff at Mercury says that as a family game, amateur navigation provides plenty of interest, and puts the pressure on both navigator and helmsman to do a good job.

Come to the Boat Show and see why the '73 MerCruiser runs rings around all other stern drives.

You can see it all at the Boat Show. The boats, the fun, the power of stern drive boating. When you take a close look at the boats, start with the stern. Chances are you'll find a MerCruiser. The fact is, MerCruiser powers more stern drive boats than all the others put together.

There's a '73 MerCruiser marine propulsion system that'll take a boat and run rings around all other stern drives. The 120 and 140 for dependable family boating. The 165 that outruns competitive sixes and eights. The Superstar 888... a hot V-8 with surprising snap. New this year are the big 225 and 255 with MERCTRANS II transmission. And check out the features that are standard to get you out on the water in style... safety features to always keep you going. They're built in... not tacked on.

We'll be easy to find at the Boat Show. So when you look at the boats, start with the stern. Start with MerCruiser.

Retail events in the northwest suburbs

FOREST CITY, a retail store geared to home improvement, opens this April at 201 W. Rand Road, Mount Prospect. The store will carry a full line of building materials, home improvement and decorating needs that the handyman and homemaker require for their home repairs and remodeling.

Home improvement store opening in Mt. Prospect

Opening this April, at 201 West Rand Road, Mount Prospect, Illinois, is one of the most talked about stores in the country today. This new Forest City store is the tenth of its kind in the country and the first of many coming to the Chicago area.

Forest City, started over 50 years ago as a lumber yard in the Cleveland area. Later a garage and home remodeling department was inaugurated. In the early 60's the company gave birth to a number of new innovations to teach home owners how to remodel and make their own repairs to overcome the high cost of labor.

From lumber, the company branched out into every aspect of building material, home improvement needs, and decorating requirements.

"Most unique in Forest City's concept are the many 'How-To' centers about the store. These 'How-To' display boards feature step-by-step instructions on the installation and repair covering just about every household need.

"These How-To centers have made Forest City the talk of the building material industry," said Jim Smith, District Manager for the Forest City chain. "We have visits daily from other dealers throughout the world with camera and note pad in hand. Today our concept is being copied even in remote areas of Australia and Sweden."

Local marine dealership uses new sales concept

The Boat Super Market, located in Rolling Meadows Shopping Center, is a prime example of a new concept in retail marina dealerships.

Shelly Morris, president of Marine Marketing Assoc. Inc., and owner of the Boat Super Market, has taken proven marketing techniques from other fields (such as the programs typically associated with super markets) and utilized them in the boating industry. The basic idea is giving the customer the opportunity to buy boats at a low price, with a package deal included. This has been a successful formula for the Boat Super Market.

"When we opened up in August," Morris said, "it was a sleepy time for the boat industry, but we moved more boats last fall than the average dealer did all year." Morris has received numerous sales awards from boat and motor manufacturers that confirm his success. He said that unlike other dealerships, he operates year 'round and has not yet had a slow month.

Morris said because he buys in mass quantity, discounts are passed on to the customer. Complete package deals are the main feature of the Boat Super Market's sales program. The Boat Super Market also provides free storage until the spring for its customers. Also on hand is a complete service operation with a trained staff to handle any repairs.

Morris is making plans for a national chain of Boat Super Markets for the near future. "By this time next year I plan to have 15 stores in the Midwest,"

Lawn care center changes ownership

After almost 30 years of service to the northwest suburbs, Kersting's Lawn and Garden and Charles B. Gray Sales and Service have been sold to Olson Care Enterprises.

The new owner, Jack Olson, brings a full line of interior and exterior maintenance service as well as continuing existing sales and services.

"We will continue to offer the same quality retail sales of lawn care equipment and service that these two fine stores were noted for," Olson said. "In addition, we will offer the most complete landscaping, interior maintenance and property management that has built our company into what it is today."

Joining Olson will be experienced sales personnel such as Steve Haut, formerly with Kersting's; Jim Griffin, head of the service department; and Bob Kulak, landscaping foreman.

Olson Care Enterprises will operate out of the former Kersting's location at 621 N. Main St. in Mount Prospect.

New program developed by leasing firm

David Silbert has recently been appointed Leasing Manager of Jim Kelly Leasing Inc., a sister corporation of Jim Kelly Ford, both located at 525 E. Main St., Dundee.

As head of the leasing firm, Silbert has aided in the development of an entirely new concept in car leasing.

According to Silbert, prior forms of leasing involved returning the automobile at the end of the lease period with the individual or company being billed for necessary repairs.

The plan, which has been copyrighted, is the Kellilease Incentive Equity plan. Unlike other leasing procedures, the plan offers a rebate to the lessee upon the return of the automobile. The lessee is also given the opportunity of selling the automobile to the highest bidder, thus increasing the amount of rebate.

Details on the Kellilease Incentive Equity plan on all makes of automobiles may be obtained from Silbert.

Economic growth expected for 1973

A continuation of economic growth can be expected throughout 1973, although there will be some slowing of the pace in the second half. This was the consensus of predictions by Government and private economists compiled by the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia.

According to the forecasters, gross national product will increase $110 billion. It is estimated that there will be a 7 percent increase in the Federal Reserve Index of Industrial Production and a 3.6 percent rise in the Consumer Price Index. Consumer spending is estimated to be about $783 billion and unemployment is expected to drop this year to 5 percent.

Forest City stores are designed to be self selective so that those customers who wish to shop hurriedly can easily find their needs and depart. However, the stores also feature many, many sales persons within each department qualified to answer every question technically, yet in language understood by the layman.

Whether the Forest City customer requires instruction on how to build his own garage or how to hang a picture, Forest City is well staffed to come up with the technically correct answer.

"We have been amazed throughout the years," continued Mr. Smith, "by the people in every walk of life who find great satisfaction making their own repairs or improvements such as installing a three piece bathroom, hanging paneling, putting up ceramic tile, installing formica, or antiquing furniture."

"Most people have the ability to do a professional job, but they usually lack the proper materials, tools, instructions, and confidence. We supply all four," said Mr. Smith.

New recruiting agency opened

John Todd, Countryside Office Plaza, 855 Sterling Ave., Palatine, is a new professional recruiting agency founded by John H. Kuzma of Arlington Heights.

John Todd is an agency that specializes in the recruitment of sales and sales management personnel for the consumer product industry. John Todd, a licensed agency, is free to all applicants.

Kuzma stresses the fact that John Todd applicants receive complete counseling. "A prospective job applicant should have complete career evaluation before considering seeking any new employment. He should seek the same professional advice on his career as he would his financial planning."

Mr. Kuzma has chosen the northwest suburbs for the location of his new firm because he feels it is the fastest growing of all the Chicago suburbs.

"I have found that most of the individuals I have dealt with in the past reside in this area. Therefore, why not bring the professional services out to the suburbs for the convenience of the people who live here," Kuzma said.

Authentic looking imitation leather

For decades, the textile and chemical industries have been trying to produce a substitute for leather but were only able to come up with poor imitations.

The recent introduction of polyurethane has made it a whole new skin game. This was the major breakthrough and new refinements are coming through daily. Some of the newest products merit a second look before they are recognized as fake.

With the continuing upward spiral in prices of real leather, coupled with a difficult supply situation, prospects for the fakes were never brighter, according to the major producers and handlers.

Spending boom in men's wear

Men's apparel manufacturers expect it. They expect the spending boom that started in 1972 to continue with added vigor in the current year.

One industry leader contended that since soft goods were the first area to be hit during the recession, its comeback should be strong and rapid. Optimism about men's wear volume this year is universal and not confined to any one product or price line.

Fund-raising affair planned by local shopping center

25 Northwest suburban civic and charitable organizations were represented at a continental breakfast meeting last week at the Scandia House, sponsored by Mt. Prospect Plaza Merchants Association. The purpose of this meeting was to set a definite date for the 3rd Annual Charity Fair to be held at Mt. Prospect Plaza on Saturday, May 19th.

Adele Jeschke, public relations director of Mt. Prospect Plaza presented a slide review of previous Fairs, and rules for this year's fair were discussed.

The Charity Fair, a combination of a giant size bazaar and Country Fair, is open for participation by any Northwest suburban civic, fraternal, religious or social organization with a philanthropic project.

Cash prizes are awarded by the Mt. Prospect Plaza Merchants Assn. for Best decorated booths, and for Highest Booth Sales. The plaza also provides facilities for staging the Fair, such as space, signs, advertising and publicity.

Organizations operating the booths will furnish their table or tables, decorate them, and provide the wares they sell. Types of booths usually include baked goods, home-made jams and jellies, handcraft, white elephants, games, etc. to name just a few.

In conjunction with the fair a contest for Charity Fair Queen is conducted. Each group participating nominates a candidate from their organization to run for Charity Fair Queen. Voting is 10 per vote, and groups may begin collecting votes for their candidate one month prior to the Charity Fair.

Each year the Charity Fair has grown. Proceeds of last year's Fair were $5,231.51 against $4,622.19 the year before. The Charity Fair Queen contest last year netted $1,179.28 as against $853.53 the previous year.

Each organization retains all monies derived from their booth sales and the Queen contest, to use for their favorite project. Some of the past projects have been Cancer research, day camp for Cerebral Palsy children, Community counseling etc.

Reservations have currently been made by 18 organizations for booth space in this year's fair, with more coming in every day. Booth locations are awarded on a first-come first-served basis. There is no charge for participating.

Organizations interested in obtaining further information regarding this year's fair and queen contest may do so by calling Adele Jeschke at 255-0644 or writing Mt. Prospect Plaza Merchants Assn. at 1058 Mt. Prospect Plaza, Mt. Prospect, Illinois 60056. We will make every endeavor to accommodate all organizations wishing to participate.

Hair fashions shop caters to men as well as women

Winters Hair Fashions II, in the new Palatine Mall located at Hicks and Baldwin Rds., offers complete beauty service for men and women.

The concept of the shop, according to Ron Winters, the owner, is to bring Michigan Avenue to Palatine. "It is no longer necessary to go downtown for high fashion hairstyling," Winters said. "There are just as many experienced and good hairdressers in this area."

Winters has managed salons in Chicago, Mount Prospect and Barrington. Miss Julie, Manager of Hair Fashions II, studied beauty care at L'Oreal in Paris.

Winters said that there is a necessity for men's hair-styling. "Men are more in the public eye than women and need to look good for that reason."

Men's hairstyling is different from the conventional barber shop cut, he said. "Hairstyling includes shampooing the hair first then determining the natural growth of the hair and cutting it according to its natural lines."

Men customers can choose the hairstyle they want from artist sketches or from photographs. A few of the many styles include the western look, the sea captain look, Prince Louis IV, Sir Edward V and Count Marco VI.

Winters also hand-makes toupees. They are custom-made to fit each individual's personal preference. He begins by taking a sample of the customer's hair, and then measures the head for size.

Winters, who uses only 100 percent human hair for the toupees, then blends the strands to match the sample. Finally the hairs are hand sewn to the cap of the toupee. Each toupee takes about one month to make. "If the toupee is given proper care it will last four to five years," he said.

Winters, who takes great pride in his profession, said he will not sell a man a toupee unless he looks good in it. "Otherwise the customer will feel self-conscious," he said.

Also featured for men are facials, hair coloring, manicuring, permanent waving, beard trimming and shaving.

Among the beauty services for women at Hair Fashions II are lessons on day and night-time applications of make-up. A nominal fee is charged.

Winters said that the one or two hours a week a woman spends in a beauty salon are very important to her. "Besides making her look good, it makes her feel good and gets her out of the house for a while into an atmosphere where she can sit back and relax."

The men's section of the new establishment features a Spanish decor; the women's shop has a French decor. Winters Hair Fashions II also contains a boutique. Jewelry, purses, clothes, sheep skin rugs and paintings are among the things for sale.

The men's salon is open from 9:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. on Saturday. The women's salon is open from 9:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday and from 9:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. on Thursday and Friday.

New restaurant for Woodfield

Fun Family Restaurant opened in Woodfield Mall, Schaumburg, on February 23. Representatives of government and industry attended the ribbon-cutting ceremonies on Friday, with the ribbon being cut by Mayor Robert Atcher of Schaumburg.

Fun Family Restaurant, owned by Bumbleberry Enterprises, Inc., serves 32 flavors of pies plus sandwiches, stews and chili. The restaurant is managed by Mr. Lynn Abbott.

Fun Family restaurant seats 125 people and represents an investment of approximately one-third of a million dollars.

Bumbleberry Enterprises, Inc., has restaurants in California, Las Vegas, and Milwaukee.

Nursery opens new department

The Charles Klehm & Son Nursery, Arlington Heights and Algonquin Rds., Arlington Heights, has opened a new fresh cut flowers department.

Flowers, in season, are on hand seven days a week. A huge new cooler has been installed to assure crisp fresh flowers.

The customers may choose their own flowers, or if they prefer, they may have nursery personnel make the selection. All flowers are gift boxed with fresh greens.

La Tejanita restaurant expands dining facilities

Gus Villareal, owner of La Tejanita, 202 N. Duntun, Arlington Heights, has turned a small grocery store into a successful restaurant specializing in Mexican food.

Nine years ago Villareal opened up a store to sell Mexican food and handle carryout orders. After a while he set up a few dining tables in the store. Since that time his restaurant business has continually grown.

Early this year he closed down the grocery store because by that time most Mexican food products could be bought in large chain grocery stores and he needed more room for his restaurant.

The restaurant is now divided into two sections and has a seating capacity of 74. One section has a distinct Mexican atmosphere. Villareal decorated the room with hand-carved dark wood booths and chandeliers imported from Mexico. The tall booths create a private and intimate atmosphere for diners.

All the food La Tejanita serves is made from scratch from homemade recipes. The restaurant serves breakfast as well as Mexican dishes like tacos, enchiladas, burritos, guacamole, tortillas, and Mexican tripe.

Villareal, who has lived in this area since 1950, is pleased with success of his business. "Arlington Heights and the surrounding area have been good to me," he said. "People have really helped me out by telling their friends about the restaurant."

La Tejanita is open from 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. on weekdays and from 9:30 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. on Friday and Saturday. Beginning in March, Villareal plans to stay open until 11 p.m.

Hardware won't deter burglars

by TOM TIEDE

NEW YORK — Put to an extreme but not fanciful example, a man of property today, can upon leaving his home, lock his windows with tumbler combinations, secure his liquor cabinet with a thumbprint sensing latch, button up his closets with a voice-activated bolt, seal off his outside doors with a dead-bolt that operates by push-button combination, spring an electronically operated, super-sensitive sonic alarm for his grounds — and still, dag nab it, get robbed blind.

Urged by the worst crime epidemic in the nation's history, Americans have in recent years been locking up to a degree unparalleled in the civilization of man. From schoolchildren with hall lockers to the owners of Mercedes automobiles, the nation's citizens have been securing their belongings with some $430 million worth of locks and bolts a year.

And what an array of protective devices! One widely used tumbler lock has 23 million possible combinations. Experts in New York are installing multiple-closing hardware including, in some cases, pots and pans in front of the apartment door. One expert advocates putting two locks on a door and leaving one unlocked — that way the burglar picking both will unlock the locked and lock the unlocked.

Gad. There is no end. There is one latch on the market that opens by voice command, and a salesman says of it: "For some reason a dirty word is very good for activating it."

BUT FOR ALL the imagination, and the expense (an average-sized, modest home today has at least $100 worth of bolt hardware, and often as much as $1,000), the wonder is if it's doing much good. Locksmiths say yes. "If the devices are installed correctly," But the evidence argues otherwise.

Lock sales in the United States have almost doubled in the last five years, but so too, probably has the burglary rate. More than 2.5 million burglaries will be reported to police this year (vs. 1.6 million in 1967) and authorities say the actual count is much higher. "Many people don't report burglaries, especially if only small things are taken," says one law enforcement expert. "We have about one burglary reported every 14-15 seconds in this country today. But if I had to guess the actual number I'd say one every 12 seconds — or maybe even one every 10."

The inconsistency here, between increased use of locks and increased numbers of successful burglaries, is easily explained. Says the FBI: "Years ago a good lock would stop a good thief. He was sophisticated enough to know that he shouldn't waste time picking some latch. Now, however, the quality of the average burglar has deteriorated. He's no longer a professional. He's a kid, or a junkie, or something like that. He hasn't got brains enough to be deterred. If there's a lock on the window he'll just break the window. It must be damn discouraging for the guy trying to protect his home."

INDEED. Recently in New Jersey a suburban home owner was robbed despite what he called "a Maginot Line of locks around the place." For years, on leaving for work each morning he "shut up everything from my woodshed to my color TV." Alas, one day the thieves broke through. How? Two teen-age kids drove a station wagon into his driveway, broke a back window, opened the front door from the inside, and departed with his color TV. "The neighbors saw the car," snaps the victim, "but they thought it was the repair man."

There is, sighs Lee Rognon, executive director of the American Locksmith Assn., "no foolproof lock." The nation can walk on the moon, mine the sea, create life in a test tube, but can't keep the addict out of the living room. Latches costing $50-$80 and throwing full inch deadlocks into hard maple wood, can be circumvented merely by circumventing. Thieves are entering homes and offices today through chimneys, dumbwaiters and open attic vents. Police report robbers who have pried off siding for home entry or disguised themselves as cleaning women for office capers. Some crooks have been known to take an entire window pane out and then putty it back upon leaving.

Yet says Lee Rognon, war is war, we can't surrender. "We urge that locks be put on every door and every window. If you can't stop them, then at least slow them down. Delaying a thief gives police that much more opportunity to intervene."

Bill Cobb of the Yale Lock Corp. agrees. He says even today's unsophisticated burglars are wary of at least four things: noise, light, time and people. He says a well-protected home will cover all. A bell alarm, for example, at under $10, a light left on in the window all night to keep burglars wondering; a system of locks which will delay a crook to the point, hopefully, he might give up for something easier; and a carefully planned "lock of occupancy" in a home at all times.

THE LAST POINT, says Cobb, is most important. "People do dumb things. They close their curtains when they go out at night. They have the society columns report when they are vacationing in Hawaii. Then there is the gal who goes shopping and leaves a note on the locked door for her son; invariably the note says: "key is under the mat."

The carelessness, says the Yale spokesman, is unbelievable. And the corporation is undertaking an education counter-attack. In March, Yale will open a pilot project in Atlanta to "enlighten people" concerning property protection. Do's and don'ts. Industrial ideas. Etc. Yale hopes the program will make citizens as tricky as criminals.

But, don't count on it. Americans are rushing to protect their valuables with unprecedented intensity, yet people still lose nearly $1 billion worth of property every annum. "When you get right down to it," says a New York police detective, "it's humiliating. I remember one time where a burglar robbed an apartment of a TV, some jewelry, several bottles of liquor and, get this, two of the three locks on the front door."

But Never on Sunday

Reverend Willis packs .38 Special

by DANIEL L. TAYLOR

GALVESTON, Tex. (UPI) — Five days a week, rookie policeman Charles Monty Willis puts on his blue uniform and silver badge, straps his .38 caliber police special to his side and patrols Galveston's high crime district. But never on Sunday.

On the seventh day, Willis dons a different uniform: conservative business suit — and mounts the pulpit of the First Church of the Nazarene to address his congregation.

Willis, 26, is both an ordained Nazarene minister and a commissioned officer in the Galveston Police Department.

THE IDEA to become a policeman evolved about three years ago while Willis rode with patrolmen as the police chaplain. He entered the Police Academy last May and became an active member of the force July 1.

"From the first I think I fit right into being a policeman," Willis said. "When I was the chaplain, I rode in the cars and saw every kind of crime there was."

When Willis first hit the streets as a patrolman, Police Chief Glenn Stanford said he would be like any other officer, with no special consideration given to his status as a minister.

"I'VE WORKED PRETTY regularly in the high crime district and it's been real good," Willis said. "I like to be active and answer calls. I've made a lot of arrests and come close to leading the department in arrests."

Like any policeman, Willis has had to draw his gun on occasion although he has fired it only on the police range. But he wouldn't hesitate to shoot if the situation called for it, he said.

"My number one thought is to take care of my life," Willis said. "I don't think many people like the thought of going to jail, whether it's at the hands of a policeman or minister or whatever. If the time comes when it is necessary to use a weapon, I'll do it."

"I have two children and a good wife and I plan to go home every night. I'm just a human being. I try to treat people as I would like to be treated, but I don't let my feelings as a minister override my desire to take care of myself," he said.

WILLIS ALSO said he had a responsibility to other policemen who depended on him in tight situations.

Willis enjoys both jobs but admits he has trouble finding time for both.

"There is definitely a difficulty finding time," he said. "I'm sure I don't get everything done but so far I have been able to do both jobs. I think my congregation and family don't mind and I haven't heard any complaints."

Before Willis joined the force, he told his congregation of his plans.

"THEY GAVE ME a vote of confidence and were all in favor of it," he said.

Willis, his wife, Emily, 26, and their two children, Charles Jr., 5, and Tawn Annette, 3, live in the church parsonage, a five-room, one story white frame house on a palm tree-lined street behind the church.

Mrs. Willis said she is proud of her husband and doesn't worry about his police work.

"I'm really pretty excited about it," she said. "The potential danger really doesn't bother me. I just figure everybody has his time and if it comes I have to accept it."

MRS. WILLIS AND her husband, a man of medium height with brown eyes and brown hair, is dedicated and immovable when he believes he is right.

"He is dedicated to everything — his church, his family — to everything," Mrs. Willis said. "He doesn't let anyone sway him if he thinks he is right, concerning the law, morality or whatever."

She said her husband often uses experiences from his beat in his sermons.

"When he talks about sin and what he has seen of alcoholics and prostitutes, the congregation listens," she said. "They know he isn't talking about something from a book, he is talking about what he has seen. And because of his religious convictions, he is able to tie it all together."

WILLIS SAID MANY people ask him if there is a conflict between the roles of minister and policeman in society.

"I really don't see any conflict," he said. "When I started as a policeman I was impressed with the amount of education necessary to be on the force. Today's requirements are stiffer and more is expected of policemen today."

Willis hopes "I can keep doing both. I do everything I can to keep myself clean as a minister. I want to be the best minister I can and the very best policeman I can."

Coping with free society: 'confusing'

EDITOR'S NOTE: The author was paroled from the California Correctional Institute at Tehachapi in November of 1972. He is 34 years old and has spent 13 of those years in various maximum security penitentiaries. Here he describes his new life on the "outside."

by GENE HERRINGTON

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. — After spending 13 years of my life behind prison bars, I find coping with free-world society quite confusing.

When I was released from state prison on parole last Thanksgiving Day, I felt joy and elation with my new freedom. Although I had no job to go to, I had hoped to be attending Bakersfield College as a full-time student under the GI Bill in February. As things turned out, I see now where this idea was not very realistic for someone like myself. I have no relatives to live with and nobody to pay the rent or food bills.

I was lucky to find temporary work in an almond packing house as soon as I got out. This kept me going until Christmas. However, once that job ended, and I couldn't find anything else to do, I sank into a state of mental depression. I am healthy and want to work, yet society has nothing for me to do! Many prospective employers have rejected my applications because of my police record. To add to the financial burden, I caught the "London" flu and had to spend time at the county hospital for treatment and medication.

SINCE I AM probably the first felon to be initiated into the Knights of Columbus, the Bakersfield Council was kind enough to lend me $600 to purchase a pickup truck so I could get around town. Getting insurance was hard with a felony record, but eventually a broker found a company that would take me at an added monthly premium.

It wasn't just financial problems which I had to learn to handle, but also the emotional adjustments necessary to survive. Quite naturally I fell passionately in love with the first girl who gave me any attention after half a decade in a world without women. I dreamed of her day and night. If she wasn't actually with me in person, she was in my fantasies. Whether I was at work, at home, or anywhere, she would be there with me — in my imagination.

Unfortunately, the affair lasted but three weeks and I had to learn by experience that sometimes grown men do cry. The hurt from it all has made me wary of forming any deep, personal relationships again for awhile.

In prison one can steel himself against possible physical assault. I have been beat, cut, shot and had bones broken by both police officials and prisoners, and earned how to survive — by not getting personally involved. I could see a fellow inmate or a guard stabbed to death and walk away from it without getting upset in the least. Outside, however, I find myself sensitive to the slightest feeling of rejection (whether real or imagined) and am scared to death to let go and love. Adjusting to a male-female world, as opposed to an all-male world is a difficult thing.

ALTHOUGH I AM sick and tired of being locked up and having nothing, and being dehumanized by the prison system, if it were not for the moral support of my parole agent, a newspaper editor, a priest, a school principal, and a couple of girl friends — I question whether I would still be a free man today. I've been so scared and lonely at times I don't see how I ever survived this long, but somehow I have. I couldn't have done it alone.

I went to prison at the age of 19, was released when I was 23, stayed free three weeks, and was returned for another five-year sentence. At that time I was too proud to accept charity, too immature to set proper value on anything, and too bitter to respect anything or anybody.

When I was almost broke, I spent my last 20-dollar bill on a "Saturday Night Special" (.22-caliber pistol), and set out to take what I felt the world owed me for all the years of suffering and humiliations the prison system put me through. I didn't get far, though, because within 24 hours of my first holdup I was caught and on the way back again.

Today I still feel little resentments. I can't vote and to me this is an archaic, extrajudicial punishment which should have no bearing on the chances of my ever returning to a life of crime. I can't get married, buy a car, purchase property, or leave the country without permission from state officials.

I'm somehow scratching out a daily existence through little, temporary and part-time jobs I've been getting through the state employment agency. My revised plans include full-time employment as soon as I can find it, and attendance as a part-time student in the evening division of Bakersfield College where I'll be majoring in journalism.

Prisoner return rate can be slowed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A prison system that frees its inmates with only the traditional new suit and a $10 bill can expect to see them again. The people running Exit and Excel think they have found some ways to slow this "revolving door of justice."

Some of the answers offered by first-year studies of the two federally-financed prison release projects in Maine and Indiana are not new: prepare inmates for life on the outside, find them jobs they can do and will like, continue counseling and other aid after they have left prison.

But there also are some new insights into the problems of ex-convicts offered by Palmer-Paulson Associates, the Chicago firm administering Exit in Maine and Excel in Indiana on funds granted by the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA).

FOR EXAMPLE, one of the toughest obstacles faced by former inmates is the inability to obtain driver's licenses. A person who cannot get to work cannot hold a job, even if the job itself does not require the operation of a car or truck.

A second finding is not so elementary. Palmer-Paulson Associates discovered that released inmates who did not start work immediately seemed to hold the jobs they eventually got longer. They do not know for sure why this is true, but suspect it may be a sign that many ex-convicts are placed in jobs without sufficient care in matching their training and interest to the work.

And the "rightness" of the job is the prime element in keeping ex-convicts from returning to crime and then prison, according to John Palmer, president of Palmer-Paulson Associates.

"We believe we have discovered how to slow down the revolving door of justice," he said in a statement released with the formal first year report on Exit and Excel. "It is to find positions for ex-offenders in trades they are equipped and trained to handle and to help them in reintegrating into free society once again."

AT LEAST FOR the first year of the two projects, which began in mid-1971, the Exit-Excel methods produced some impressive results: only 9 per cent of the 246 Maine inmates and 6.3 per cent of the 14 Indiana Prisoners who were placed in jobs returned to legal custody. In the statement, these rates are compared to a quoted 65 per cent national rate of prisoner return.

The study also said it found nearly 60 per cent of the Exit group in Maine and 65 per cent of the Excel inmates who were placed in jobs were working at the end of the year.

The project, which cost $28,141 in Maine and $270,300 in Indiana during the first year of operation, has been given second-year funds by LEAA.

CCBG platform promises better village programs

by JOE FRANZ

The Concerned Citizens of Buffalo Grove (CCBG) have released a party platform that pledges to better government and establish priorities in all areas of local government. The CCBG is sponsoring three candidates for the April 17 elections.

The candidates said they would take action to protect village interests in the areas of schools, parks, sewers, flood control, roads and public transit.

The platform calls for the extension of village services in order to eliminate what the candidates called inequalities in service.

They specifically cited the fire department's paramedic program as an example.

The paramedic program currently serves residents of Cook County Buffalo Grove. Residents of Lake County Buffalo Grove do not get the service because they are in a different fire protection district which does not have a paramedic program.

THE CANDIDATES said they favor extending the paramedic program to all village residents.

The CCBG candidates said they would attempt to guide and control village growth by assuring the necessary open space. They also said they would support the density requirements for buildings as outlined in the village master plan.

The candidates added, however, that if they are elected they will attempt to remove from the master plan, "unrealistic and arbitrary restrictions on businesses." They said they will promote the sound economic growth of the village.

The platform pledges to "reestablish the credibility of the village government by committing ourselves to the highest ethical standards."

It specifically pledges to voluntarily have trustees resign if there is ever a conflict of interest between the village and one of trustees' outside activities.

The candidates said they will propose ordinances enabling citizens to recall village officials who develop a conflict of interest and one that will require trustees to resign before filing for any other elective public office.

THE CCBG candidates for the three available trustee positions on the village board are:

• Mrs. Betty Spence, 37, of 901 Westbourne Ln.;

• Charles Cushman, 40, of 810 Checker Dr.; and

• Algimantas Kenells, 39, of 220 Stonegate Rd.

The CCBG was the first party to release its platform. Seven other candidates, three from the Village Independent Party (VIP) and four independents are also running for the available seats.

Open house set Thursday at parks office

The Buffalo Grove Park District will open its doors and its books Thursday for a public information session on the current state of parks and recreation in the village.

The informal session will follow a short business meeting scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. in the Emmerich Park building, 180 Raupp Blvd. Candidates for the district's April election have also been invited.

Slides will be used to supplement reports on the development of present park sites and plans for future construction.

Park Director Stan Crosland said the park board has planned the open house to give residents an opportunity to discuss local recreation first hand with park officials.

"Spring is coming, and because of the construction to be continued very shortly as soon as the weather breaks, we felt it was important to let people know what to expect in the spring and summer," Crosland said.

IN ADDITION to outlining building progress, commissioners will also discuss plans for upcoming recreation programs. Registration for all spring activities begins the week of March 12.

The park district plans to distribute a brochure giving the schedule of spring programs prior to registration. This brochure also will contain a written progress report on parks under construction and plans for sites to be developed.

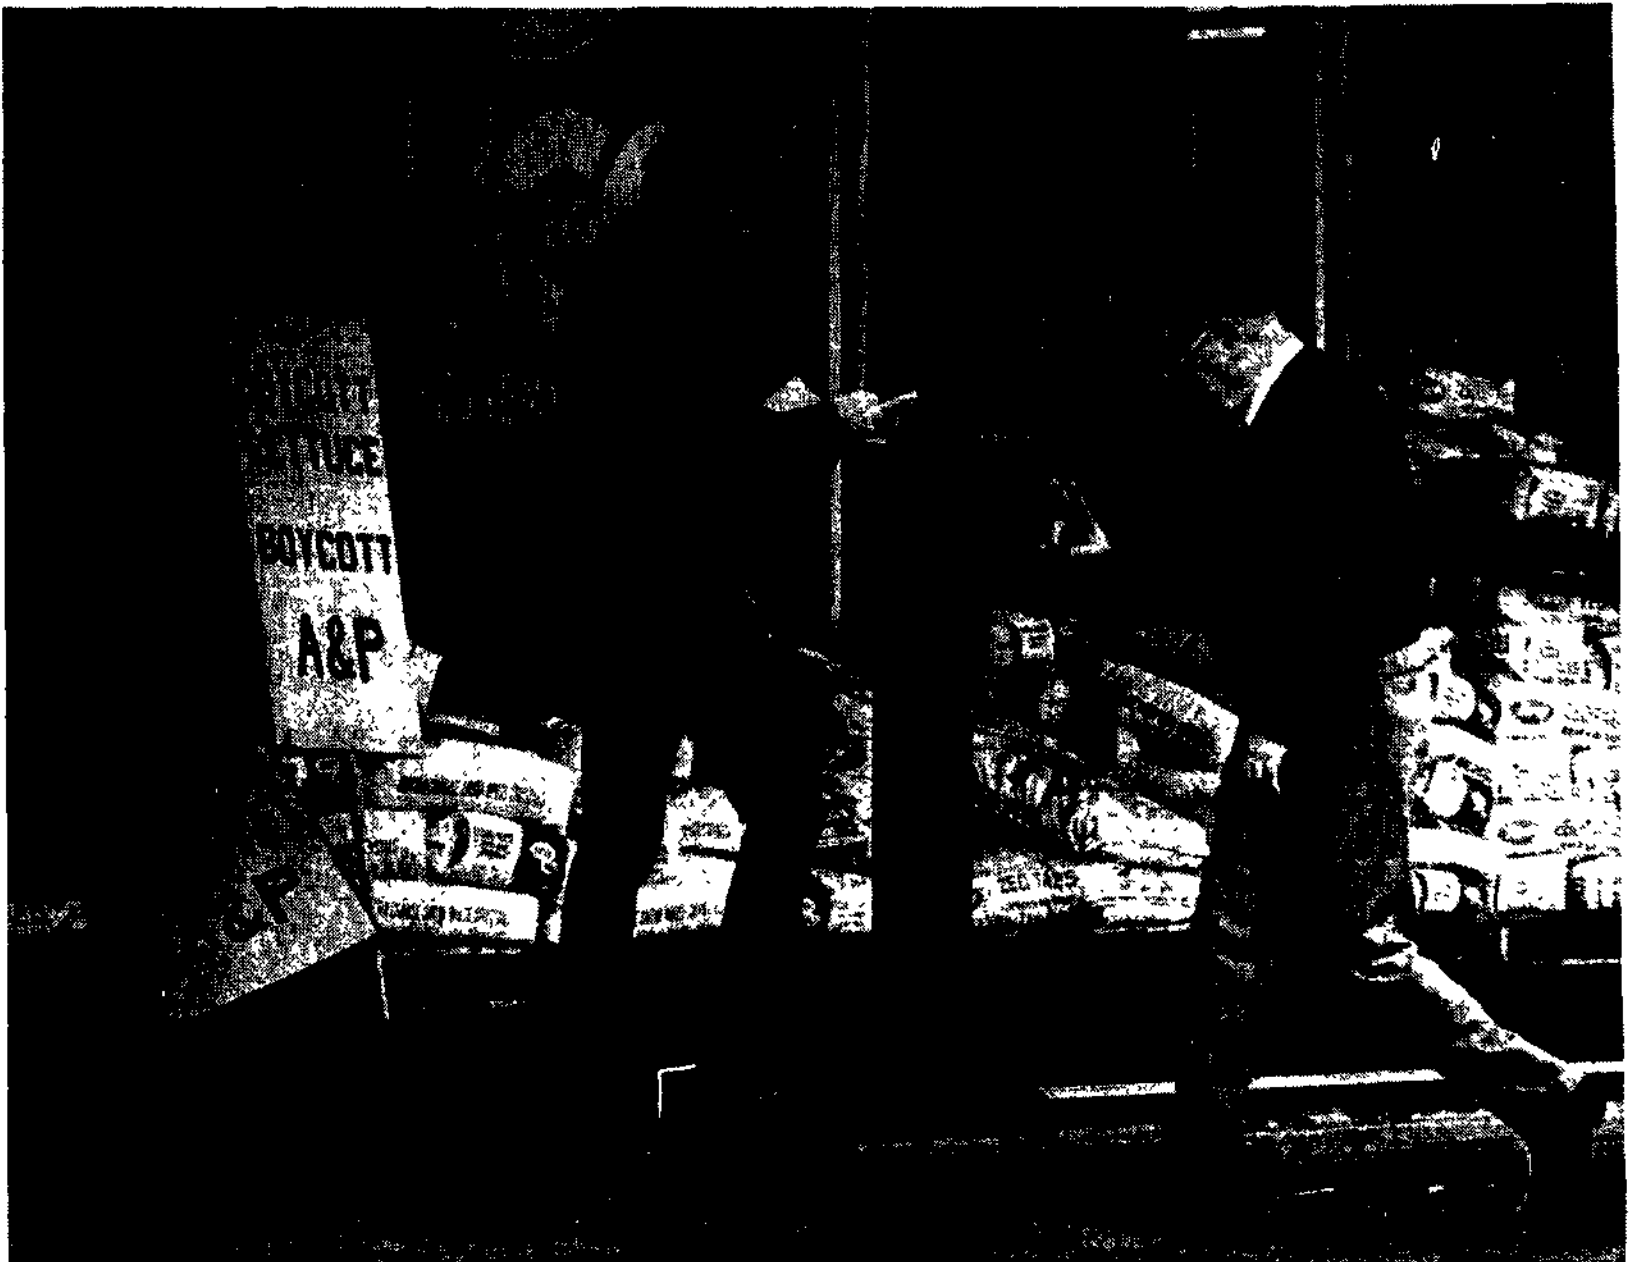

During the regular business portion of Thursday's meeting, the commissioners are set to pass an ordinance for the April 17 election and approve warrants for the next two weeks.

Plan weekend campaign to urge boycott

Lettuce pickets supporting pickers

by LYNN ASINOF

Pickets who boycotted lettuce at the A&P food stores in Wheeling and Des Plaines Saturday may become a common weekend sight.

The pickets, who are supporting efforts by the United Farm Workers (UFW) are urging shoppers not to buy from A&P stores. They say they will continue their picketing until the A&P chain makes the commitment to buy only UFW union lettuce.

Cynthia Kelly, who is in charge of picketing and leaflet passing in the Northwest suburbs, said A&P stores are selling some union lettuce. She said, however, the chain is continuing to buy non-union lettuce when UFW lettuce is not available.

"DURING THE PAST several weeks, A&P has made a great effort to handle union lettuce," she said. "But we want a

Miss Kelly said, the lettuce picked by members of the Teamsters Union should not be considered union lettuce because the Teamsters have not signed contracts with their pickers.

According to an A&P spokesman in Chicago, the company thinks it is buying union lettuce no matter which union it is from. "It is not our job to worry about interunion problems. We regret we can't solve the problems," he said.

The picketing efforts are part of a nationwide movement to pressure two food chains, A&P and Safeway, into buying UFW union lettuce. The pickets are asking shoppers not to buy any goods from the stores until the chain is committed to carry only union lettuce.

MISS KELLY contended that pickets turned about 75 persons away from the Wheeling store Saturday. She also claimed each shopper represented $20 to $25 in merchandise, thus having significant impact on the store's business.

The Wheeling A&P manager said he could not comment on any matters concerning the picketing but indicated no business was lost last Saturday. The Chicago spokesman said the chain has not been hurt by the picketing and does not plan to change its procedures in the near future.

Miss Kelly said if the A&P chain decides to carry only union lettuce, this will pressure more lettuce growers into allowing their pickers to organize. "It would really be a blow to the growers if they were told those stores were only going to handle union lettuce," she said.

Miss Kelly said picketing and leafletting will continue in the Northwest suburbs, with heavy emphasis on the weekends. She said, however, they hope to expand the picketing to three days a week.

An unexplained surge in late buying pulled the stock market out of its mid-session doldrums and prices closed higher on the New York Stock Exchange. The Dow Jones average of 30 blue-chip industrial stocks closed 5.57 higher at 966.89. A similar performance by Standard & Poor's 500 stock index left it 0.40 higher at 112.68. Northwest area gets 'twice share' O'Hare noise: report

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

The Northwest suburbs "shoulder twice their share" of O'Hare airport noise, a report by a Des Plaines city official contends.

"The communities surrounding O'Hare would not have too much to complain about if they could be convinced that everything possible was being done to reduce the noise problem. Waiting for quieter engines is merely failing at a task that must be accomplished," said Philip Lindahl, Des Plaines environmental control officer.

Lindahl's report was hand-delivered to Washington, D.C. yesterday by Mayor Herbert Behrel. The 20-page study was also to be entered last week in minutes of a Federal Aviation Administration hearing on "airplane fleet noise requirements."

FAA regional officials in Des Plaines denied Lindahl's charge 31 per cent of takeoffs and landings are conducted over the Northwest suburbs. The percentages for other directions include: east 22 per cent; southeast—16 per cent; northeast—11 per cent; southwest—10 per cent and west—10 per cent, according to Lindahl.

"THE ACTUAL STATISTICS are more balanced than that," said Les Case, FAA environmental and noise abatement officer.

Lindahl's totals were based on a 1972

Northeastern Illinois Plan Commission report on O'Hare use. The figures were compiled in October 1969 and were projections for 1975 airport traffic levels.

Case said the airport's "runway utilization log" for August, 1972, showed about 9 per cent to the northeast, 22 per cent in the northwest; 11 per cent west; 2 per cent southwest; 24 per cent southeast, and 32 per cent east.

Personnel shortages have limited runway log keeping, he said. No statistics for total use in 1972 are available.

Case said noise impact is now "distributed more evenly" over the suburbs because O'Hare tower chiefs, who plan runway use, "look at what happened the day before. This is a new phenomenon. The chief tries to hit people with noise who didn't have it the day before and he tries to avoid previous high use areas."

LINDAHL CLAIMED Park Ridge and Northwest Chicago receive "special treatment" because takeoffs over the communities on runways 22R and 27R, are prohibited between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.

Lindahl called for 24-hour a day use of "a recognized unpopulated tollway departure route" off runway 32R, already one of the airport's busiest, to relieve Northwest suburban noise. "The silent argument . . . is that by routing east-bound departures off 32R out over the tollway adds about two minutes to the flight time and costs a few dollars — so we suffer instead," he said.

Lindahl charged "a credibility gap now exists in the FAA community relations office" and he criticized FAA changes in takeoff requirements as "old existing procedures . . . an apparent attempt to deceive the residents of the O'Hare area."

Case answered by saying, "We never claimed noise would be eliminated. At this point, everything is being done without disregarding safety."

In August, 1972, the FAA ordered pilots to climb to 1,500 feet altitude at "full (Continued on page 3)

Driver's ex-girlfriend

Auto kills woman walking on road

A Rolling Meadows woman was killed early yesterday when she was struck by a car while walking along River Road in Des Plaines, according to Des Plaines police.

Geen Jones, 19, of 2206 Eastman, was pronounced dead on arrival at Holy Family Hospital after the car driven by John Parish, 23, of 1845 Circle Dr., Des Plaines, struck her about one-half mile north of Central Road, police said.

The accident took place about 4 a.m., about half an hour after she left Bobby McGee's tavern, 704 N. River Rd., Mount Prospect, where she had been since about 10 p.m. Sunday night, police said.

Parish told police he had been at the tavern also with another girl, Wendy Acker, 233 Fletcher in Wheeling that evening.

Parish told police he had gone to the tavern with a Wheeling woman and had talked to Miss Jones, whom he described as his ex-girlfriend, at one point during the evening, according to police.

POLICE SAID Parish and the Wheeling woman left the tavern after Miss Jones. They were driving southbound on River Road when the accident occurred. Parish then rushed her to Holy Family where she was pronounced dead, police said.

Police investigators said there was no indication that the car had gone off the roadway. They said Miss Jones must have been walking on the road when she was hit because there was no trace of mud on her shoes.

Parish also told police he was observing the 45 mile per hour speed limit at the time. Police said Parish volunteered to take a lie detector test in connection with the accident and passed the test satisfactorily yesterday.

Parish was charged with failure to yield the right of way to a pedestrian and going too fast for conditions.

He was released on bond and is scheduled to appear in court April 2.

MAINE SOUTH HIGH School in Park Ridge, recently, received an excellent rating for staff and administration performance from a consultant who evaluated academic programs at the school last month for the North Central Association, a national school accrediting organization. Teachers at the four Maine Township Schools evaluated their own programs, listing strengths and weaknesses, last fall in preparation for the NCA analysis.

Report to North Central Association first step of evaluation

Academic programs assessed by Maine faculty

Second of two articles

The strengths and weaknesses of academic programs in the four Maine Township High Schools were analyzed by teachers in a series of reports for the North Central Association, a national school accrediting organization.

The reports, prepared last fall, were presented to members of the association evaluation team when they visited the four high schools last month. The schools were accredited by the association seven years ago and are reevaluated every seven years.

The analysis of school programs by teachers was the first stage of the evaluation. The second stage was a visit by team members Feb. 7-9. The final stage is a written report by the association analyzing their findings which will be presented to the district in the next few weeks.

ALTHOUGH THE four schools share major problems related to budget cuts in the district, teachers listed many problems unique to their school.

At Maine West High School in Des Plaines, business education and physical education teachers said the district's early dismissal policy, which allows most students to leave school at the end of their regularly scheduled class period, decreased student interest in their programs.

Business education teachers said students are leaving school instead of taking a skill course for their personal use such as typing or shorthand. Physical education teachers said fewer students are participating in extra-curricular sports activities during the final periods of the school day or after school.

James Coburn, assistant principal and coordinator of the evaluation report at Maine West, said in an interview the early dismissal policy, which became effective last fall, has resulted in a student tendency to take fewer courses. Students are required to take four basic courses per year. In previous years many took five courses, but that number is decreasing, said Coburn.

Maine West has no plans to discontinue the early dismissal program and Coburn hopes that as students become accustomed to early dismissal they will begin to participate in sports and extra credit courses.

TEACHERS AT MAINE West also criticized the district textbook ordering policy which says the same text must be used in comparable courses in each of the four schools. The policy does not allow for individual differences of teachers, students or the community, said the report. It is "impossible to respond to the varying types of students in evidence throughout the district. Des Plaines is not Park Ridge, Mount Prospect, Glenview or Niles," say teachers.

This year, teachers are allowed to supplement the regular classroom textbooks with other books approved by the administration and the district textbook committee, said Coburn. The district's textbook policy helps students save money, he said. The books are ordered by the school and the students purchase them. If different books are ordered in each school the price would be higher and fewer used books would be available, he said.

A profile of students at Maine West shows that 10 per cent have IQ's over 130, 20 per cent have an IQ between 115 to 129 and 37 per cent are between 100 and 114. Thirty per cent of the students plan to attend a four-year college and another 19 per cent said they would attend junior college. About 40 per cent said they wanted to enter a professional or technical career.

The community has a good balance of industry, small businesses and residences and has a good tax base according to the report. Sixty-two per cent of the parents of Maine West students attended college and 64.7 per cent earn more than $10,000 per year.

THE COMMUNITY plays a major role in determining the makeup of education at Maine East High School at Dempster Street and Potter Road in Park Ridge, according to the report by teachers there.

Serving parts of unincorporated Des Plaines and portions of Niles, Park Ridge and Morton Grove, the school has a community diverse in education background, occupations of parents and attitudes toward education.

Richard Van Scoyoc, chairman of the Maine East committee, making the study of the community, said the lack of a unified community means a lack of unified support for the school. Identification with a school usually occurs through identification with a community, he said. Community support of the school has been "less than enthusiastic," said Van Scoyoc in an interview with the Herald. As in all schools there is a group of parents that work for the school but that group

High water, mud hamper rescue effort

Rescue crews searched yesterday for signs of a Chicago youth believed drowned after falling from his canoe Saturday in the Des Plaines River near River Road and Devon Avenue.

The youth, John Pienta, 18, of 3434 N. Neva Ave., was canoeing in the river along with two friends, Kenneth Hora, 18, of 3716 N. Octavia Ave., and Michael Brichetto, also 18, of 3218 N. Rutherford Ave., when Pienta's canoe capsized.

RESCUE OPERATIONS conducted by Cook County Sheriff's police and forest rangers along with Rosemont firemen have been hampered by high water caused by rain Sunday and muddy conditions along the river's banks.

Cook County Forest Rangers and Rosemont firefighters made unsuccessful attempts to find the youth's body by dragging the river with hooks Sunday and yesterday, but will make another dragging attempt today while continuing to spot check the river.

Rosemont Fire Chief Roy Evans said his men dragged the river for eight hours Saturday and Sunday from Dam No. 4 near Devon Avenue to Lawrence Avenue.

RESCUE CREWS cruising the banks had to give up early however according to Cook County Forest Ranger Lt. Paul Rupp because "the river got so deep so fast and the banks were too muddy for us to continue."

Rupp added plans to fly a helicopter over the area Sunday were cancelled due to dense fog but said the copter may be sent up today.

Rosemont Fire Department divers also were hampered in their search efforts due to river conditions Sunday and yesterday.

Evans said Schiller Park, Franklin Park, River Grove and Melrose Park authorities have been alerted also to check Des Plaines river areas in their towns for signs of Pienta.

3-year-old girl found drowned in Salt Creek

by JULIA BAUER

A daylong search for a 3-year-old Palatine girl ended in tragedy yesterday when men dragging Salt Creek discovered the body of the child, Susan Gieseler, apparently drowned at the Pleasant Hill Boulevard bridge.

The child, who lived at 159 S. Maple Ct., was discovered missing by her mother at 9:15 a.m. At 5 p.m., public works employee Robert Best discovered the child's body, which had apparently been washed into a sewer line entering the stream at water level under the bridge.

Palatine police originally were notified at 9:40 a.m. of the missing girl and a door-to-door hunt was started. The Palatine Fire Department began dragging the branch of Salt Creek at 3:30 p.m. A five-man team took a rowboat and searched the stream south of the Hellen Road bridge between Smith and Brockway streets. Another crew took long poles and swept across the width of the stream north where it was too narrow to allow the boat. BEST, WHO WAS aiding in the search, was walking in the stream when he discovered the girl's body a mile downstream from her home.

Mrs. James W. Gieseler, the child's mother, told police that her daughter had long blond hair and was wearing a pink coat and aqua slacks when she apparently wandered away from home yesterday morning.

The county's canine patrol was called out to attempt to track the girl. Cook County Sheriff's Police organized that portion of the search.

The neighborhood around Susan's house was filled with policemen as they knocked on every door to ask if Susan had been seen. Detectives questioned young children in another effort to find the girl.

The east bank of Salt Creek was fenced off. But the west shore, the side Susan's house was on, sloped down without a break to the water's edge.

O'Hare noise 'double dose' in area: report

power," instead of a more gradual climb over neighboring suburbs. "There was a lot of pulling of hair to get the planes higher, quicker," Case said. "We were trying to balance safety and noise impact."

"CURRENT PROCEDURES in effect since April, 1970, restrict takeoffs between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.," Lindahl said. The FAA's lane of relief policy limits those night operations to runway 32L to the "maximum extent possible," according to the FAA.

"The noise sensitivity of people does not start at 11 p.m. and end with the roar of the first jet after 7 a.m.," said Lindahl.

Washington (D.C.) National airport's.

"That just is not up to us to determine," Case said. Control of airport hours rests with Chicago. "If the people want the airport to limit flights after 11 p.m., it's up to them to convince the city. It's not up to the federal government."

"We insist that the number one consideration is safety," Case said. "Flight procedures have been developed over the years and economics was not the reason. We could close the airport and solve the noise problem."

O'Hare officials can "play noise abatement" during hours of light operation, usually at night, he said. "From 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. we've got to use all our ingenuity and concrete to evaluate and handle the large amount of traffic" that can reach 150 planes an hour.

MUCH AIRPORT NOISE stems from use of the older, noisier DC-9, 707, 727 and 737 planes allowed under a grandfather clause in the 1968 noise abatement requirements. The planes do not meet the same noise standards as recent 747's, he said.

Lindahl's report will be included in the FAA hearing designed to require retrofitting of the old planes to meet current noise standards by 1978. The proposal would require changes in 50 per cent of airline fleet planes in 1978.

"I'm sure there's going to be a big fight over this," Case said. "The airlines will fight it because of cost. They'll either have to change the planes or get rid of them. The civic groups will say we're not doing it fast enough."

Lindahl's report added support to last summer's claims by former U.S. Rep. Abner Mikva and the Environmental Protection Agency that O'Hare noise reaches levels dangerous to hearing. In September, Mikva and EPA claimed suburban airport noise reached 118 decibels. About 110 can damage hearing of one in five persons exposed to the sound — similar to the blast of an auto horn three feet away — for 30 minutes a day over a prolonged period, EPA has claimed.

Lindahl reported readings of up to 106 decibels when monitoring 95 flights over six days in January and February. Fifteen per cent of the readings topped 100. About 17 per cent were less than 90 decibels.

Lettuce pickets may be common weekend sight

by LYNN ASINOF

Pickets who boycotted lettuce at the A&P food stores in Wheeling and Des Plaines Saturday may become a common weekend sight.

The pickets, who are supporting efforts by the United Farm Workers (UFW) are urging shoppers not to buy from A&P stores. They say they will continue their picketing until the A&P chain makes the commitment to buy only UFW union lettuce.

Cynthia Kelly, who is in charge of picketing and leaflet passing in the Northwest suburbs, said A&P stores are selling some union lettuce. She said, however, the chain is continuing to buy non-union lettuce when UFW lettuce is not available.

"DURING THE PAST several weeks, A&P has made a great effort to handle union lettuce," she said. "But we want a commitment that when there is no union lettuce they will handle no lettuce."

Miss Kelly said, the lettuce picked by members of the Teamsters Union should not be considered union lettuce because the Teamsters have not signed contracts with their pickers.

According to an A&P spokesman in Chicago, the company thinks it is buying union lettuce no matter which union it is from. "It is not our job to worry about interunion problems. We regret we can't solve the problems," he said.

The picketing efforts are part of a nationwide movement to pressure two food chains, A&P and Safeway, into buying UFW union lettuce. The pickets are asking shoppers not to buy any goods from the stores until the chain is committed to carry only union lettuce.

MISS KELLY contended that pickets turned about 75 persons away from the Wheeling store Saturday. She also claimed each shopper represented $20 to $25 in merchandise, thus having significant impact on the store's business.

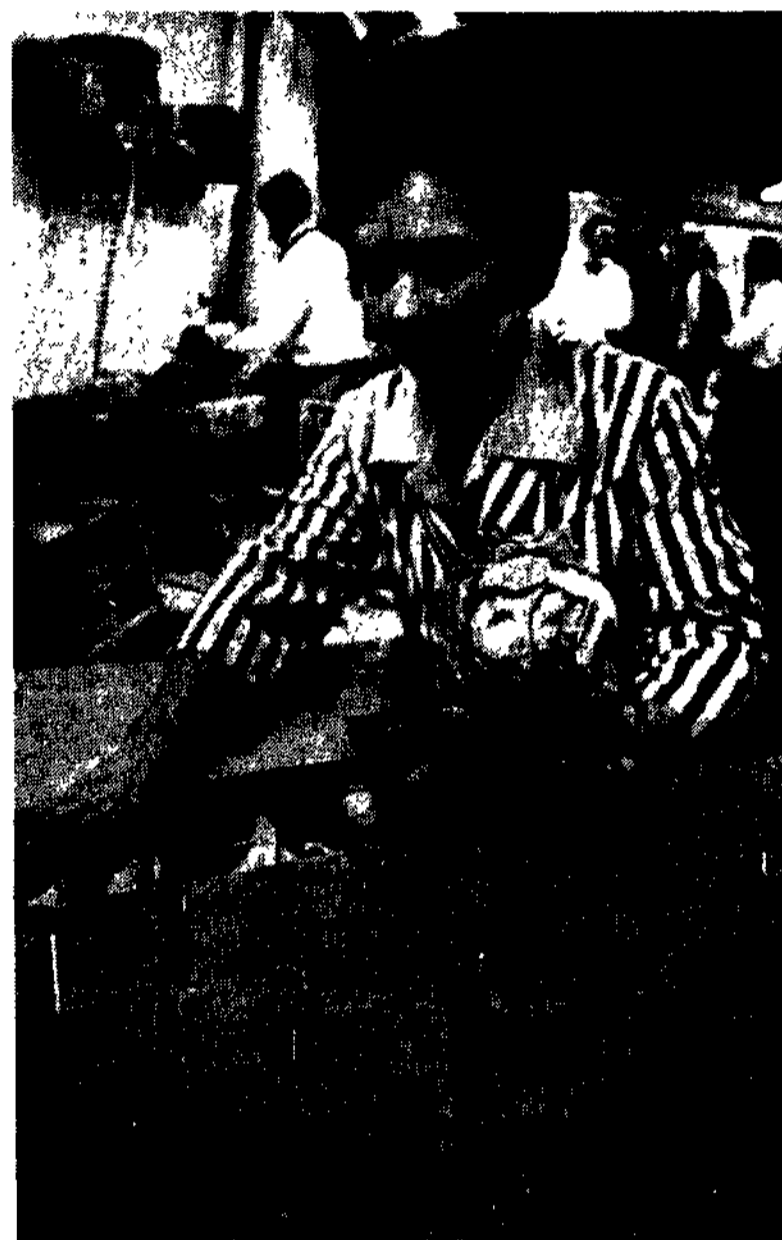

The Wheeling A&P manager said he could not comment on any matters concerning the picketing but indicated no business was lost last Saturday. The Chicago spokesman said the chain has not been hurt by the picketing and does not plan to change its procedures in the near future.

Miss Kelly said if the A&P chain decides to carry only union lettuce, this will pressure more lettuce growers into allowing their pickers to organize. "It would really be a blow to the growers if they were told those stores were only going to handle union lettuce," she said.

Miss Kelly said picketing and leafletting will continue in the Northwest suburbs, with heavy emphasis on the weekends. She said, however, they hope to expand the picketing to three days a week.

UNPACKING UNION lettuce at the Wheeling A&P food store is Mary Haddock. The lettuce carries the seal of the United Farm Workers (UFW). However, protesters say the food chain often sells lettuce carrying the seal of the Teamsters Union or no union at all. Until A&P makes a commitment to sell only UFW lettuce protesters say they will continue to picket the stores in the Northwest suburbs.

Oakton trustee leaving board day of election

Oakton Community College trustee Meyer Kamin will resign effective April 14, the date of the next election for the board of trustees, the Herald learned yesterday.

Kamin, an employee of Life of America Insurance Co., in Chicago, said his company is moving out of state this summer, forcing him to resign from the college board. Kamin said he is leaving effective

Meyer Kamin

April 14 so a new trustee can be elected to fill the remaining two years of his term.

The college board of trustees will meet at 8 tonight at the temporary campus, 7900 N. Nagle Ave., Morton Grove, to vote on a resolution setting the election for Kamin's seat to coincide with regular elections April 14.

The Oakton Community College convention publicity committee met last night after Herald press time. Gene Sjostrand, chairman of the convention, said he hoped to discuss the possibility of endorsing a candidate for Kamin's seat during the meeting.

LAST MONTH the convention, an unofficial caucus with no formal ties to the college, endorsed three candidates for the three vacancies on the Oakton board this year. Up for reelection to three-year terms are trustees LeRoy Wauck, Raymond Hartstein and Paul Gilson. LeRoy Wauck said he would not run for reelection and Gilson and Hartstein were endorsed by the convention along with Timothy Schiacke, a lawyer from Park Ridge.

Kamin of 8104 Kolmar Ave., Skokie, is chairman of the budget and finance committee at Oakton and vice chairman of the committee on policies.

Nominating petitions will be accepted by the Oakton board secretary until March 23.

Report to accrediting association first evaluation step

Maine faculty weighs academics

gets smaller every year at Maine East, he said.

BECAUSE MANY different schools feed into Maine East, high school courses must be adapted to make the conversion from junior high school to high school easier for students, said Van Scoyoc. The occupational background of the community is a complicated mixture of professional and vocational careers which also affects school programs.

"Since well over one half of East's students continue their education beyond high school, the community expects the school to provide sound academic environment for college preparation. But the community also expects the school to provide relevant vocational training and guidance for those students who have inclinations in that direction," says the report.

Sociological changes in the community also affects education at Maine East, according to the report. In an interview Van Scoyoc said Maine East, the oldest of the district's four high schools, has changed over the years from an agricultural community with single-family homes to an industrial and commercial area with an abundance of multiple family housing.

He said many Maine East students come from broken homes and families are constantly moving in and out of the area. About 1,000 freshmen enter the school each year, he said, but by the time they are seniors, 500 members of the class have moved away and have been replaced by new students.

CHANGES IN THE community, broken homes, and the high mobility of residents causes instability in the community and sociological problems in the school, said Van Scoyoc. Although a wide range of such problems exist at Maine East, including drug problems, there isn't a high incidence of any one problem.

The Maine East report by counselors said social problems in the school will continue to be a major area of concern for counselors. The philosophy of counseling at Maine East places emphasis on the personal worth of each student, the diversity of personalities on the staff makes it easier for students to find someone to talk to and in general the counseling staff is open, friendly and sensitive to students, said the report.

THE NEWNESS OF the school is still a major factor affecting education at Maine North High School, 9511 Harrison St., Des Plaines, according to an evaluation of academic programs by teachers there. Maine North, opened in 1970, is still lacking in some of the physical facilities of the other three schools and has about 1,500 students, about half as many as each of the other schools.

In general, physical facilities are adequate according to the report but the school still lacks an auditorium, large group instruction room, music and drama facilities and athletic fields, which will be built in the second phase of construction during the next few years.

"The library is still comparatively small," but will be built up over the years said Glen Hoffmann, coordinator of the report in an interview last week. Maine North can't offer as many different courses as the other schools, especially electives like economics, anthropology, and Latin American history, he said. Because the school needs another large group instruction room, large group teaching techniques, with lectures in large classes and discussions in smaller groups, aren't used as often as Maine North.

IN SOME WAYS Maine North's small size is an asset, said Hoffmann. Since the faculty is small, teachers can develop closer working relationships. There's more opportunity for "bull sessions" when teachers can get together and share their ideas, he said. The staff is also somewhat younger at Maine North, said Hoffmann, which tends to encourage new ideas and teaching methods. English teachers said in the report, that size is a strength in their department because the faculty isn't large enough to break up into small social cliques.

The most common complaint by teachers at Maine South High School in Park Ridge is the fear that district budget cutbacks may affect the quality of education in years to come. Teachers generally rated academic programs very high in almost all departments. B. Everard

Blanchard, coordinator of graduate programs at DePaul University in Chicago and team leader for the North Central Association in the organization's visit at Maine South, gave staff and administration one of the highest ratings of all high schools in the nation. Academic programs are synchronized accurately with area junior high schools and colleges and cooperation between teachers, administration, students and parents is high, said Blanchard. He said that if the other high schools in Dist. 207 have comparable programs then the district as a whole may be rated among the top in the nation.

MOST OF THE students attending Maine South live in Park Ridge. Parents and the community as a whole regard education highly, said Michael Myers, administrative assistant at Dist. 207. This attitude toward education attracts the best teachers and administrators, results in highly motivated students, and community support for the school, he said.

Most of the students at Maine South are preparing for college. About 55 per cent of the graduating class last year entered a four-year college and another 18 per cent entered a junior college. About 57 per cent of the students at Maine South say they hope to enter a profession or technical job and 11 per cent plan to become craftsmen. The drop out rate at Maine South is a low three per cent.

Fifty per cent of the fathers and 25 per cent of the mothers of Maine South students are college graduates and another 20 per cent of the fathers and 25 per cent of the mothers attended college but did not graduate. In a survey of parents conducted by the school for the North Central report parents stressed the importance of college preparatory programs and said the school has good teachers, excellent course selections and high academic standards.

NW suburbs get 'twice share' O'Hare noise: report

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
The Northwest suburbs "shoulder twice their share" of O'Hare airport noise, a report by a Des Plaines city official contends.

"The communities surrounding O'Hare would not have too much to complain about if they could be convinced that everything possible was being done to reduce the noise problem. Waiting for quieter engines is merely failing at a task that must be accomplished," said Philip Lindahl, Des Plaines environmental control officer.

Lindahl's report was hand-delivered to Washington, D.C. yesterday by Mayor Herbert Behrel. The 20-page study was also to be entered last week in minutes of a Federal Aviation Administration hearing on "airplane fleet noise requirements."

FAA regional officials in Des Plaines denied Lindahl's charge 31 per cent of takeoffs and landings are conducted over the Northwest suburbs. The percentages for other directions include: east 22 per cent; southeast—16 per cent; northeast—11 per cent; southwest—10 per cent and west—10 per cent, according to Lindahl.

"THE ACTUAL STATISTICS are more balanced than that," said Les Case, FAA environmental and noise abatement officer.

Lindahl's totals were based on a 1972

Northeastern Illinois Plan Commission report on O'Hare use. The figures were compiled in October 1969 and were projections for 1975 airport traffic levels.

Case said the airport's "runway utilization log" for August, 1972, showed about 9 per cent to the northeast, 22 per cent in the northwest, 11 per cent west; 2 per cent southwest; 24 per cent southeast, and 32 per cent east.

Personnel shortages have limited runway log keeping, he said. No statistics for total use in 1972 are available.

Case said noise impact is now "distributed more evenly" over the suburbs because O'Hare tower chiefs, who plan runway use, "look at what happened the day before. This is a new phenomenon. The chief tries to hit people with noise who didn't have it the day before and he tries to avoid previous high use areas."

LINDAHL CLAIMED Park Ridge and Northwest Chicago receive "special treatment" because takeoffs over the communities on runways 22R and 27R, are prohibited between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.

Lindahl called for 24-hour a day use of "a recognized unpopulated tollway departure route" off runway 32R, already one of the airport's busiest, to relieve Northwest suburban noise. "The silent argument . . . is that by routing east-bound departures off 32R out over the tollway adds about two minutes to the flight time and costs a few dollars — so we suffer instead," he said.

Lindahl charged "a credibility gap now exists in the FAA community relations office" and he criticized FAA changes in takeoff requirements as "old existing procedures . . . an apparent attempt to deceive the residents of the O'Hare area."

Case answered by saying, "We never claimed noise would be eliminated. At this point, everything is being done without disregarding safety."

In August, 1972, the FAA ordered pilots to climb to 1,500 feet altitude at "full (Continued on page 3)

Village attorney makes ruling

Candidates' names will be on ballot in same order in which they filed Candidates' names in the Elk Grove Village April election will appear on the ballot in the order the candidates filed, Village Clerk Richard McGrenera announced yesterday.

The decision followed criticism by two local candidates that the method for arranging the names on the ballot at the clerk's discretion was unfair. McGrenera had drawn up a proposed ballot for the election that gave incumbents a choice of position on the ballot.

McGrenera said Village Atty. Edward Hofert advised that the names be listed according to the filing times. "I asked Hofert for an opinion because I wanted to be absolutely sure everything was done legally," McGrenera said.

According to the order of the original ballot, candidates for president were incumbent Pres. Charles Zetek, Robert "Bud" Lindahl and McGrenera. The ballot order for trustee hopefuls for three 4-year terms was: incumbent Nanci Vanderweel, incumbent George Spees, Melvin Bytnar, Kevin McCarthy and incumbent Ted Staddler.

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES as they now will be listed, according to the order of filing, are Lindahl, McGrenera and Zetek. Four-year term trustee candidates will be listed Mrs. Vanderweel, Bytnar, Spees, McCarthy and Staddler.

Candidates for a two-year trustee term and the clerk's office were not affected by the announcement.

Lindahl and Bytnar, who were displaced by incumbents in the original ballot, said yesterday they were extremely happy about the clerk's decision to change the order.

"I feel the candidate who files first should be listed first, and I feel this is the fair way to do it," Lindahl said. "I think being first will get me some extra votes, but I will still work hard and won't let up in the campaign."

BYTNAR SAID listing candidates in order of filing was a "time-honored custom," and changing the ballot to reflect this was "in keeping with the democratic process."

"I was glad to hear about it (change in ballot), and it shows the high level of character of the village clerk," Bytnar said. "It shows the clerk's basic, fundamental desire for good government."

McGrenera reiterated his opinion yesterday that the order in which names appear on a ballot is not important in an election. He said he had extended to the incumbents the choice of ballot position out of courtesy.

Lettuce pickets march to support pickers

by LYNN ASINOF

Pickets who boycotted lettuce at the A&P food stores in Wheeling and Des Plaines Saturday may become a common weekend sight.

The pickets, who are supporting efforts by the United Farm Workers (UFW) are urging shoppers not to buy from A&P stores. They say they will continue their picketing until the A&P chain makes the commitment to buy only UFW union lettuce.

Cynthia Kelly, who is in charge of picketing and leaflet passing in the Northwest suburbs, said A&P stores are selling some union lettuce. She said, however, the chain is continuing to buy non-union lettuce when UFW lettuce is not available.

"DURING THE PAST several weeks,

A&P has made a great effort to handle union lettuce," she said. "But we want a commitment that when there is no union lettuce they will handle no lettuce."

Miss Kelly said, the lettuce picked by members of the Teamsters Union should not be considered union lettuce because the Teamsters have not signed contracts with their pickers.

According to an A&P spokesman in Chicago, the company thinks it is buying union lettuce no matter which union it is from. "It is not our job to worry about intervention problems. We regret we can't solve the problems," he said.

The picketing efforts are part of a nationwide movement to pressure two food chains, A&P and Safeway, into buying UFW union lettuce. The pickets are asking shoppers not to buy any goods from the stores until the chain is committed to carry only union lettuce.

MISS KELLY contended that pickets turned about 75 persons away from the Wheeling store Saturday. She also claimed each shopper represented $20 to $25 in merchandise, thus having significant impact on the store's business.

The Wheeling A&P manager said he

Man hit by school bus Feb. 13 dies

John Michala, 72, of 542 Willow Ln., Elk Grove Village, died yesterday at Alexian Brothers Medical Center from injuries he got when he was struck by a school bus Feb. 13. He was crossing Higgins Road near the Park 'n Shop center in Elk Grove Village when the accident occurred.

His death marks the first traffic fatality in the village for the year.

Officials at Alexian said Michala underwent several hours of surgery for a skull fracture and multiple injuries the day of the accident. A spokesman said an autopsy will be scheduled.

Police said Michala was crossing the road from the shopping center walking northward when he was struck by a bus driven by Adam Salagowski, 23, of Chicago. No passengers were aboard the bus, owned by the Davidmeyer Bus Co., Elk Grove Village. Salagowski was charged with not exercising due caution to avoid hitting a pedestrian.

Funeral arrangements are pending.

UNPACKING UNION lettuce at the Wheeling A&P food store is Mary Haddock. The lettuce carries the seal of the United Farm Workers (UFW). However, protesters say the food chain often sells lettuce carrying the seal of the Teamsters Union or no union at all. Until A&P makes a commitment to sell only UFW lettuce protesters say they will continue to picket the stores in the Northwest suburbs.

Flooding suit to be filed against bank

Bernard Lee, Elk Grove Township auditor, said Monday that a suit will be filed against the Cosmopolitan National Bank of Chicago about the flooding conditions in the Roppolo-Landmeier subdivision.

Lee said he directed the township's attorney to file an action because a township road is damaged whenever flooding occurs. The township will file as a single party rather than a class action, but other parties could join the suit if they desire.

The suit will be filed against Cosmopolitan as the holder of the land trust that owns the property.

According to the trust officer at the bank the names of the owners and attorneys of the trust are confidential and cannot be revealed. Repeated efforts by the township to contact either the owners or attorneys through the bank have failed.

IN EARLY January, the Herald sent a registered letter to the trust officer, requesting that the trust attorney contact a reporter. No reply from either the trust officer or attorney has been received.

Flooding problems in the Roppolo-Landmeier area have existed for several years. Landfill work and the laying of a pipeline in an open field north of the subdivision apparently reversed the natural flow of a drainage ditch. Instead of water flowing into Higgins Creek, the water flows from the creek and floods homes and the township road.

Residents of the area have sought the township's help in correcting the problem since September. The township attempted to act as an advisory agency for the residents, but was unable to obtain any relief.

With the filing of the suit, the township will now become an active participant in the dispute.

All of township in unit study

The recently formed citizens committee established to study the feasibility of starting a unit school district in Schaumburg has officially expanded its study area to include all of Schaumburg Township.

The Schaumburg Unit School District Feasibility Study Committee adopted boundaries which included all of Schaumburg Township and a portion of Palatine Township which is within the limits of the village of Schaumburg.

The group also officially accepted its first contributions including a previously announced $5,000 donation from the Schaumburg United Party.

WILLIAM JACKSON, chairman of the committee, said the committee will study the feasibility of establishing a unit district for the entire township and not just the village.

"We are going into this effort with an open mind, we do not know if the final consultant's report will recommend a unit district for the township, the village or suggest that the educational system be left as is," Jackson said.

James H. Blankenship, vice chairman of the committee, said the group feels that it represents all of Schaumburg Township.

"THE PEOPLE here are from the village of Schaumburg and it is financed by the people of this village, because no other group would come forward," Blankenship said.

ALL OF THE non-voting advisers, Mrs. Bonnie Hannon, a member of the Dist. 54 board, Robert Seger, a member of the High School District 211 board, Dave Wilson, president of the Schaumburg Education Association, and Tom Guidotti, an expected candidate for the Dist. 54 board, said they are entering the committee with an open mind and no preconceived idea as to what the final outcome will be.

In presenting the $5,000 SUP contribution, Schaumburg Village Trustee Ray Kessel said the formation of the committee to study the unit school district question represented government at its best.

"It is good to see this group consider something that has been a hot potato, you have got the ball, now carry it," he said.

The committee wasted no time in taking action. A meeting is being planned later this week, with a representative of Richard Martwick Cook County School superintendent, to discuss details and criteria for making the study.

Preliminary interviews with several professional consulting firms will be set for the following week.

A formalized statement on purposes, aims and guidelines will be adopted at the group next meeting on Friday in the conference room of the Great Hall, 231 S. Civic Dr., Schaumburg.

power," instead of a more gradual climb over neighboring suburbs. "There was a lot of pulling of hair to get the planes higher, quicker," Case said. "We were trying to balance safety and noise impact."

"CURRENT PROCEDURES in effect since April, 1970, restrict takeoffs between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.," Lindahl said. The FAA's lane of relief policy limits those night operations to runway 32L to the "maximum extent possible," according to the FAA.

"The noise sensitivity of people does not start at 11 p.m. and end with the roar of the first jet after 7 a.m.," said Lindahl.

Suburb officials have often called for a night O'Hare shutdown, similar to Washington (D.C.) National airport's. "That just is not up to us to determine," Case said. Control of airport hours rests with Chicago. "If the people want the airport to limit flights after 11 p.m., it's up to them to convince the city. It's not up to the federal government."

"We insist that the number one consideration is safety," Case said. "Flight procedures have been developed over the years and economics was not the reason. We could close the airport and solve the noise problem."

O'Hare officials can "play noise abatement" during hours of light operation, usually at night, he said. "From 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. we've got to use all our ingenuity and concrete to evaluate and handle the large amount of traffic" that can reach 150 planes an hour.

MUCH AIRPORT NOISE stems from use of the older, noisier DC-9, 707, 727 and 737 planes allowed under a grandfather clause in the 1968 noise abatement requirements. The planes do not meet the same noise standards as recent 747's, he said.

Lindahl's report will be included in the FAA hearing designed to require retrofitting of the old planes to meet current noise standards by 1978. The proposal would require changes in 50 per cent of airline fleet planes in 1976.

"I'm sure there's going to be a big fight over this," Case said. "The airlines will fight it because of cost. They'll either have to change the planes or get rid of them. The civic groups will say we're not doing it fast enough."

Lindahl's report added support to last summer's claims by former U.S. Rep. Abner Mikva and the Environmental Protection Agency that O'Hare noise reaches levels dangerous to hearing. In September, Mikva and EPA claimed suburban airport noise reached 118 decibels. About 110 can damage hearing of one in five persons exposed to the sound — similar to the blast of an auto horn three feet away — for 30 minutes a day over a prolonged period, EPA has claimed.

Lindahl reported readings of up to 106 decibels when monitoring 95 flights over six days in January and February. Fifteen per cent of the readings topped 100. About 17 per cent were less than 90 decibels.

Pickets back union pickers

could not comment on any matters concerning the picketing but indicated no business was lost last Saturday. The Chicago spokesman said the chain has not been hurt by the picketing and does not plan to change its procedures in the near future.

Miss Kelly said if the A&P chain decides to carry only union lettuce, this will pressure more lettuce growers into allowing their pickers to organize. "It would really be a blow to the growers if they were told those stores were only going to handle union lettuce," she said.

Miss Kelly said picketing and leafletting will continue in the Northwest suburbs, with heavy emphasis on the week-ends. She said, however, they hope to expand the picketing to three days a week.

DIST. 214 STUDENT Fred Metz and Don Lichter, a mechanic at Tom Todd Chevrolet in Wheeling, work together on some adjustments on an engine. Metz is one of 28 high school students who are working for two hours a day in local auto dealerships to get experience in auto mechanics. The school district hopes to expand the program next year to include more boys.

Intern program in high schools

Chevy garage their classroom

by WANDALYN RICE

The repair shop at Tom Todd Chevrolet in Wheeling services about 60 cars each day in a large garage just behind the area where new cars are displayed.

"A place like this is a lot different than a school mechanics shop," said Robert Freeman, High School Dist. 214 coordinator for the power mechanics intern program, as he walked into the busy shop. "Kids can get experience here they would never get in school."

Right now three students from Dist. 214 schools are getting experience at Todd's — and about 25 other students are getting similar experience at other auto dealerships from Des Plaines to Schaumburg.

THE STUDENTS work two hours a day without pay in the Dist. 214 intern program started this year to provide job training for students who have completed the district's courses in auto mechanics. Next year, Freeman said, he is hoping to have up to 50 boys enrolled in the program.

The class isn't necessarily for boys who are sure they want to be auto mechanics when they get out of school, Freeman said.

"I look at it as a vocational exploratory type of thing. If a boy can find out about the job before he gets out of high school, it gives him a chance to decide if he wants to go for additional training in the field," he said.

The boys provide their own transportation to their jobs, Freeman said, and are given a three-hour block of time in their school schedules for the program. Many punch time clocks just as regular mechanics do.

EACH BOY works under the supervision of a trained mechanic and may work in many areas of auto repair, from changing anti-freeze to searching for an ill-described squeak in the front end of a car, Freeman said.

Dealers have been generally pleased with the program, Freeman said, and Doug Greco, service manager at Todd's, said the mechanics have accepted it too.

"At first the mechanics thought the boys were going to be a hindrance, hanging all over them and asking questions," Greco said, "but these boys turned out to be pretty skilled."

At Todd's, he said, the boys work with an individual mechanic in a specialized area for two or three weeks at a time and then rotate, so they get an overview of all types of work.

"RIGHT NOW the boys are in light duty work where we repair things like squeaks and rattles and minor water leaks. That way they learn there's more to mechanics than overhauling an engine," he said.

Greco added he is generally in favor of the program, too, particularly recalling his own high school days. "These boys get to be juniors and seniors and they don't want to study English. They want to learn something that they can use when they get out," he said.

"Here nobody is standing over them giving them homework or making sure they come here and go back to school," he said. "When I was in school you didn't get out without a police escort, but here the kids are responsible."

Daylong search uncovers body

by JULIA BAUER

A daylong search for a 3-year-old Palatine girl ended in tragedy yesterday when men dragging Salt Creek discovered the body of the child, Susan Gieseler, apparently drowned at the Pleasant Hill Boulevard bridge.

The child, who lived at 159 S. Maple Ct., was discovered missing by her mother at 9:15 a.m. At 5 p.m., public works employee Robert Best discovered the child's body, which had apparently been washed into a sewer line entering the stream at water level under the bridge.

Palatine police originally were notified at 9:45 a.m. of the missing girl and a door-to-door hunt was started. The Palatine Fire Department began dragging the branch of Salt Creek at 3:30 p.m. A five-man team took a rowboat and searched the stream south of the Hellen Road bridge between Smith and Brockway streets. Another crew took long poles and swept across the width of the stream north where it was too narrow to allow the boat.

BEST, WHO WAS aiding in the search, was walking in the stream when he discovered the girl's body a mile downstream from her home.

Mrs. James W. Gieseler, the child's mother, told police that her daughter had long blond hair and was wearing a pink coat and aqua slacks when she apparently wandered away from home yesterday morning.

The county's canine patrol was called out to attempt to track the girl. Cook County Sheriff's Police organized that portion of the search.

The neighborhood around Susan's house was filled with policemen as they knocked on every door to ask if Susan had been seen. Detectives questioned young children in another effort to find the girl.

The east bank of Salt Creek was fenced off. But the west shore, the side Susan's house was on, sloped down without a break to the water's edge.

Cleaner to cut flooding

Palatine village trustees last night decided to spend more than half of the village's first-year federal revenue sharing funds on a high-pressure sewer cleaner.

The $45,000 Vac-All is based on a vacuum principle, sucking debris from sewers so they can function at their full capacity and are not as likely to cause flooding in heavy rainfalls.

The trustees had tentatively decided at an earlier budget meeting to purchase the machine, but did not decide until last night to take the funds from the village's $85,000 revenue sharing allotment.

By purchasing the Vac-All from revenue sharing funds rather than from the road-and-bridge and the sewer funds, trustees were able to partially reduce a projected $48,000 budgetary deficit.

The deficit was lowered to about $20,000 which village Mgr. Burton G. Braun indicated he could eliminate by "juggling inter-fund transfers."

IN EFFECT, long-standing deficits in various village funds will be carried over into fiscal 1974-75, rather than being reduced or eliminated in fiscal 1973-74.

The trustees must finalize the 1973-74 operating budget by the end of April. A public hearing on the budget is expected to be held in early April.

At present, projected revenues not including federal revenue funds, stand at $1.78 million and projected expenditures at $1.83 million, producing a $47,942 deficit.

Another problem facing the village manager is that this year's budget, which expires May 1, is now expected to break even rather than provide $30,000 carryover into fiscal 1973-74. Braun indicated he could handle that amount through bookkeeping adjustments.

He said the village is in a "fairly good and sound financial position."

"There's just not enough money to go over all the things we might want to do at a given time."

Open gym schedule starting at complex

A new open gym schedule will go into effect this weekend at the Rolling Meadows Sports Complex, 3900 Owl Dr.

Open gym hours for children in first through eighth grades will be from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Hours for persons in high school and above will be from 2:30 to 5 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday and 7:30 to 10 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Due to a karate tournament at the complex, there will be no open gym hours this Sunday.

It's census day in the village

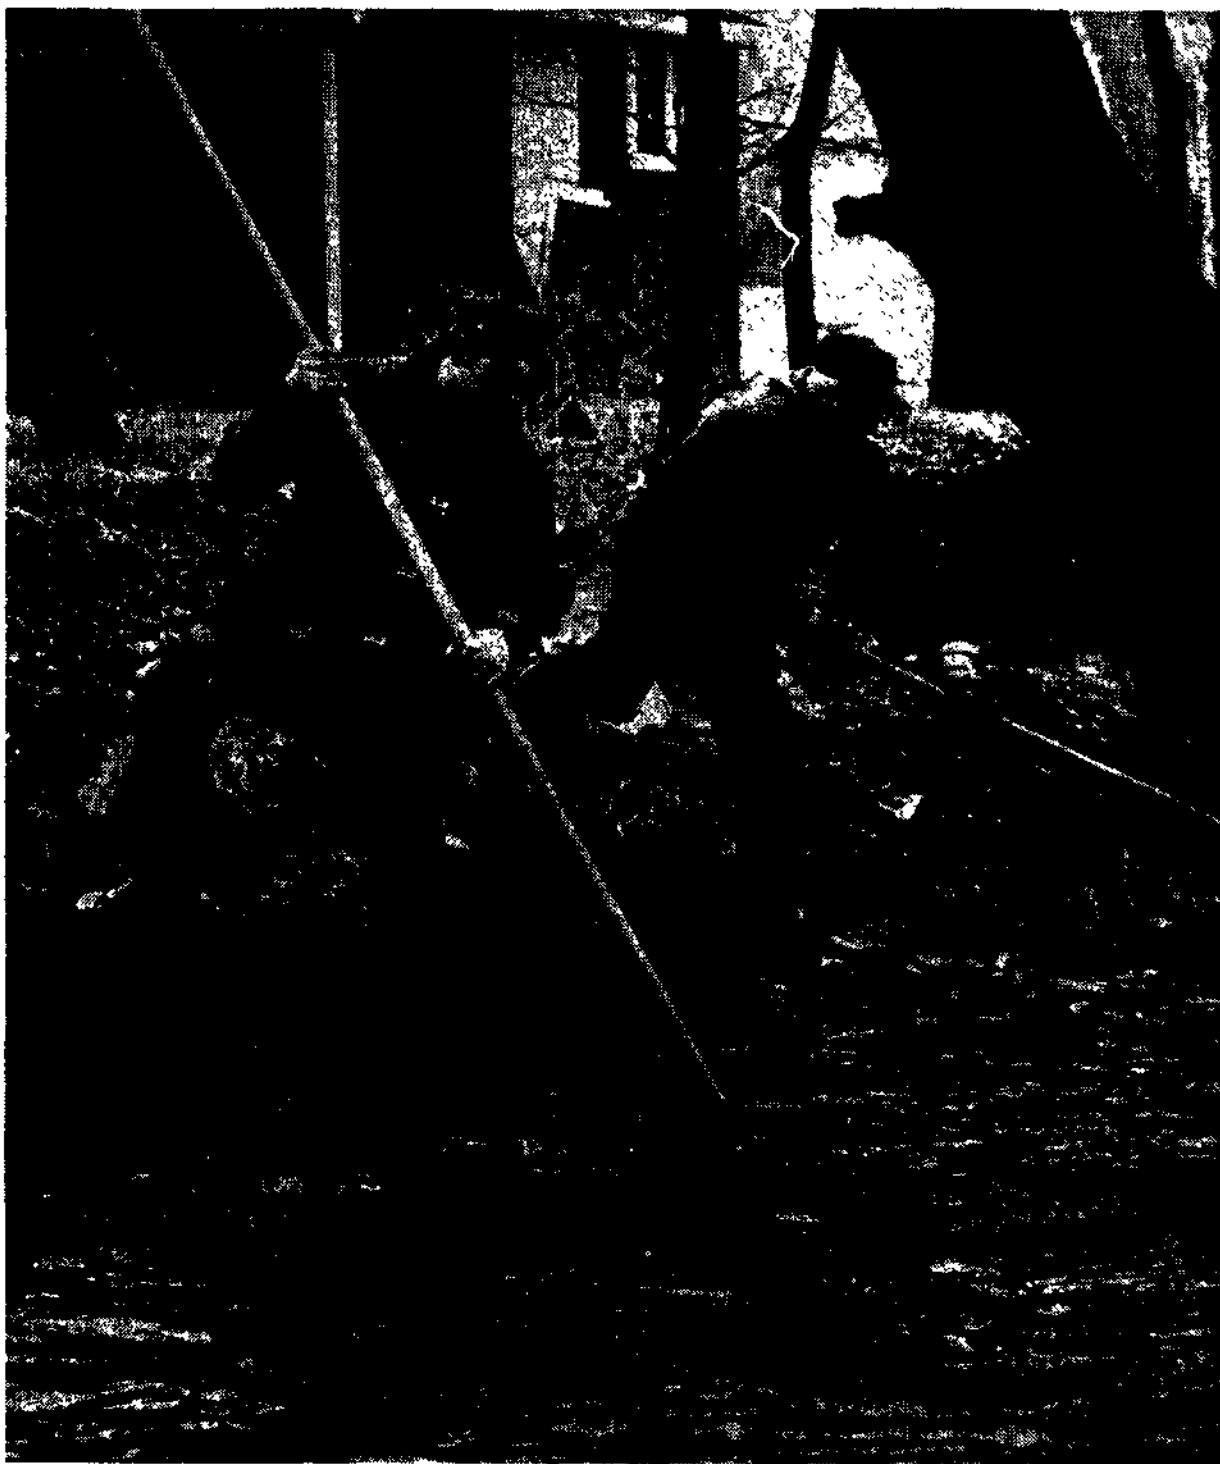

Palatine census workers will take to the streets today.

The census takers will be identifiable by badges. They'll be asking only for the number of persons living in each household.

The census was authorized by village trustees at a cost of $9,500, in an effort to show a substantial increase in the village's population since the last regular census in 1970.

Greater population means more money for the village, because federal and state revenue sharing, income tax and motor vehicle fuel tax rebates are based partly on population.

The census is expected to take two to three weeks.

PALATINE FIREMEN and public works employees joined forces yesterday to search for the body of 3-year-old Susan Gieseler. Her body was found under the Pleasant Hill Boulevard bridge at approximately 5 p.m. after an all-day search.

Republicans' 6-point platform raps village leadership

Republicans seeking to regain control of the Palatine Village Board yesterday issued a six-point platform attacking the leadership exercised by the Village Independent Party and suggesting their own solutions to local problems.

Wendell E. Jones, the TOP candidate for village president, and other state members released their "action plan" at a morning press conference.

The platform singles out flooding, increasing taxes, planning, traffic, indifference and intergovernmental cooperation as problem areas.

The Republicans charged that the VIPs, who hold a majority on the village board, have "mismanaged" the village. Jones in addition described the Palatine administration as "rudderless and leaderless."

"We want to put an end to this with our action plan," he said.

GOP challenges VIP to debate

The Republican candidates for Palatine village office yesterday challenged their Village Independent Party opponents to a debate. The VIPs quickly accepted the invitation "anywhere, anytime."

Republican village president candidate Wendell E. Jones issued the debate challenge during a press conference in his home. He said a time and place have not yet been determined.

VIP village president candidate Clayton W. Brown, contacted yesterday by The Herald, said he "would enjoy" a debate. "We want to meet them as much as possible," he said.

The campaign leading up to the April 17 election is expected to consist of Republican criticism of VIP programs and VIP defense of its party's programs.

The VIPs have held a majority on the village board since the last election in 1971.

At least three meetings between candidates from the two parties have been scheduled, but are not expected to be a debate format. They include a candidates' night by the Willow Wood Homeowners Assn., March 14; the Arlington Crest homeowners, March 20, and the Palatine League of Women Voters, April 2.

- Reconditioning of storm sewers over a five-year period;
- Adoption of a new master plan;
- Attraction of business and industry, to broaden the tax base;
- Compilation of a thoroughfare plan to relieve traffic congestion;
- Creation of a citizens advisory board to give advice to the elected officials;
- Cooperation with neighboring municipalities in the joint use of equipment and services.

The candidates indicated that they decided upon the major areas of concern in the village through the four "Listen-In" sessions they held with residents and businessmen, and pledged to continue holding "Listen-Ins" if elected.

The Republican nominees, besides Jones, include Richard W. Fonte, Robert J. Guss Jr. and James L. Shaw for four-year trustee positions; Bryan P. Coughlin Jr., for a two-year trustee position; and Diane B. Greenless, for village clerk.

BOTH IN THE platform and in their comments, the Republican candidates were highly critical of action and inaction taken by the Village Independent Party members of the village board since the party was formed and took control of the village board two years ago.

Four of the six VIP candidates in the April 17 election are incumbents.

Jones, who has been a village trustee for six years, said: "My ideas have been thrown into the hopper by the administration." He compared his term of office on the village board to "swimming upstream against the current."

The Republicans cited flooding as the No. 1 problem in Palatine. Among their suggestions was the creation of emergency flood teams to provide pumps, sand-

Margie Kutz to enter race for school board

Margie Kutz, 913 Marsha, Palatine, has taken out a nominating petition for the April 14 school board race in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15.

Mrs. Kutz, who has two children attending Lincoln School, said she has decided to run for the school board because she feels she can make a contribution. I am an outspoken person and I felt I should put my "time where my mouth is," she said.

Mrs. Kutz, 42, is a housewife. She is a member of the Lincoln PTA and Kiwi, an organization for former American Airline Stewardesses.

Two three-year terms will be voted on in this election. Incumbents Leland Gibbs and Walter Sundling have filed their nominating petitions for reelection. The deadline for filing nominating petitions is March 23.

bags and other equipment to flood victims.

The candidates pledged "immediate tax relief to the homeowner," relying more on federal revenue sharing funds to provide municipal services. Taxes will be going up this year by an estimated 12 cents per $100 assessed valuation, the first increase in seven years.

THE REPUBLICAN candidates also promised to reduce the fee on local vehicle stickers from $10 to $6 over a four-year period.

They proposed using motor vehicle fuel tax funds to repair streets; providing two hours of free parking in downtown Palatine on Saturdays; establishing greater surveillance of overweight trucks; insuring "effective" speed limitations in residential areas; and working with downtown merchants to provide off-street parking.

In addition, the candidates said they would hold village board meetings in neighborhoods as well as village hall "to show people the board is willing to meet them half-way."

The citizens advisory board proposed by the Republicans would be composed of residents and representatives of homeowners groups, appointed by the village board.

The suggestions were made, said Shaw, because "the present village administration has completely shut themselves out from the people."

O'Hare noise 'double dose' in area: report

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

The Northwest suburbs "shoulder twice their share" of O'Hare airport noise, a report by a Des Plaines city official contends.

"The communities surrounding O'Hare would not have too much to complain about if they could be convinced that everything possible was being done to reduce the noise problem. Waiting for quieter engines is merely failing at a task that must be accomplished," said Philip Lindahl, Des Plaines environmental control officer.

Lindahl's report was hand-delivered to Washington, D.C. yesterday by Mayor Herbert Behrel. The 20-page study was also to be entered last week in minutes of a Federal Aviation Administration hearing on "airplane fleet noise requirements."

FAA regional officials in Des Plaines denied Lindahl's charge 31 per cent of takeoffs and landings are conducted over the Northwest suburbs. The percentages for other directions include: east 22 per cent; southeast—16 per cent; northeast—11 per cent; southwest—10 per cent and west—10 per cent, according to Lindahl.

"THE ACTUAL STATISTICS are more balanced than that," said Les Case, FAA environmental and noise abatement official.

Lindahl's totals were based on a 1972 Northeastern Illinois Plan Commission report on O'Hare use. The figures were compiled in October 1969 and were projections for 1975 airport traffic levels.

Case said the airport's "runway utilization log" for August, 1972, showed about 9 per cent to the northeast, 22 per cent in the northwest; 11 per cent west; 2 per cent southwest; 24 per cent southeast, and 32 per cent east.

Personnel shortages have limited runway log keeping, he said. No statistics for total use in 1972 are available.

Case said noise impact is now "distributed more evenly" over the suburbs because O'Hare tower chiefs, who plan runway use, "look at what happened the day before. This is a new phenomenon. The chief tries to hit people with noise who didn't have it the day before and he tries to avoid previous high use areas."

LINDAHL CLAIMED Park Ridge and

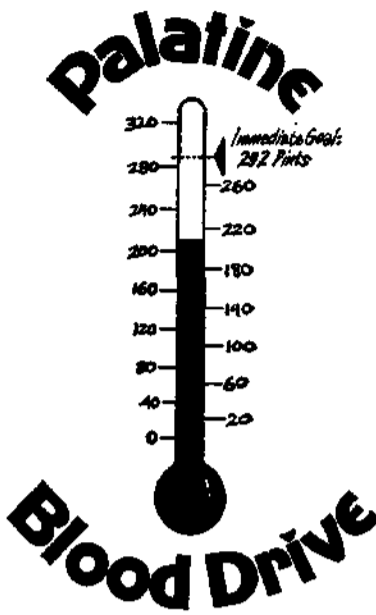

Northwest Chicago receive "special treatment" because takeoffs over the communities on runways 22R and 27R, are prohibited between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.

Lindahl called for 24-hour a day use of "a recognized unpopulated tollway departure route" off runway 32R, already one of the airport's busiest, to relieve Northwest suburban noise. "The silent argument . . . is that by routing east-bound departures off 32R out over the tollway adds about two minutes to the flight time and costs a few dollars — so we suffer instead," he said.

Lindahl charged "a credibility gap now exists in the FAA community relations office" and he criticized FAA changes in takeoff requirements as "old existing procedures . . . an apparent attempt to deceive the residents of the O'Hare area."

Case answered by saying, "We never claimed noise would be eliminated. At this point, everything is being done without disregarding safety."

83 blood donors needed to reach village's 292 goal

Two hundred nine Palatine residents have signed, but an additional 83 are being sought to donate blood next week in the second drawing of the village blood drive.

Failure to reach the goal of 292 donors is due mainly to the inability of local groups assisting in the drive to reach their quota of volunteers.

"We're getting a lot of excuses from people," said Wayne Browning, chairman of the blood drive committee.

The next blood drawing is scheduled from 4 to 5:30 and from 7 to 9 p.m. March 14 at the Presbyterian Church of Palatine, Palatine and Rohlfing roads.

Volunteers in good health between the ages of 18 and 65 years can sign up at the village health department, 358-7555, to give a pint of blood.

THE VILLAGE is hoping to obtain a total of 1,200 pints during five drawings. The figure would amount to 4 per cent of Palatine's population, and would entitle all village residents to an unlimited supply of blood for one year.

At the first blood drawing Jan. 13, a total of 232 pints was obtained.

Though the number of volunteers in next week's drawing "hasn't been as dramatic as last time," environmental health director Richard A. Dawson says he is confident the 1,200-pint goal can be reached.

Of the 209 volunteers for next week's drawing, 155 were recruited by the health department; 39 by the Pepper Tree Homeowners Assn. (though the subdivision lies outside the village, it has agreed to participate in the cooperative blood program), and 15 by the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 PTA. Also assisting in the drive are the Fremd High School Boosters Club and the Palatine Newcomers Club.

About 70 persons have signed up for the June 8 drawing.

Just 5 per cent of the outside work is completed, and workers have finished approximately 40 per cent of the inside construction, according to Countryside Y executive director Herman Hertog.

"It's been very smooth," Hertog said of this winter's work. So far, no labor contract disputes or supply shortages have hampered the builders' progress. Even the weather, an expected complication during the winter months, has cooperated.

The good winter weather is partially making up for heavy rains during the summer. Tons of water had to be pumped from the early excavation on several different occasions. But now, it looks like the new Y will be ready to open on schedule in September.

SOME Y OFFICIALS are confident once the building opens, a rush of new members will boost the current number of supporters. Others are concerned the new facilities will create complacency and less enthusiasm among the members who have worked for the new building, a drive started when the Countryside Y was organized five years ago.

"We see this only as a beginning," Hertog said last week. "The building is not the Y. It's only part of it."

In recent years, Y programs have been held in community buildings and schools. Most Y swimming lessons have been at the St. Viator High School pool in Arlington Heights. Churches also have donated space. Headquarters for the Y have been at a Palatine village-owned residence at 115 W. Johnson St. That building will be used for village offices after the Y moves out in August.

APPLICANTS FOR the positions of building superintendent and a third program director are being interviewed now. The two new people will probably start late this spring.

On April 27, the annual meeting and dinner-dance for all Y members and friends is set at the Howard Johnson Motor Lodge in Palatine. New by-law changes and a new board of directors will be voted on, and a schedule for opening and dedicating the new building will be officially set up.

Park district plans Cougar game trip

A family hockey trip to see the Chicago Cougars play Alberta March 10 is being planned by the Salt Creek Park District. Residents of Palatine Township may attend for $2.75 per person. A bus will leave for the Chicago Amphitheatre from Rose Park, 530 S. Williams, Palatine, at 6 p.m. Register by calling 258-6680.

IT'S GROWING, as construction workers resort to ladders to put finishing touches on the new Countryside YMCA, Northwest Highway and Baldwin road in Palatine Township. Just six months remain until the official opening of the facilities for fall programs, including adult fitness centers, an indoor swimming pool and activity rooms for arts and crafts.

Auto kills woman walking on road

A Rolling Meadows woman was killed early yesterday when she was struck by a car while walking along River Road in Des Plaines, according to Des Plaines police.

Geon Jones, 19, of 2206 Eastman, was pronounced dead on arrival at Holy Family Hospital after the car driven by John Parish, 23, of 1845 Circle Dr., Des Plaines, struck her about one-half mile north of Central Road, police said.

The accident took place about 4 a.m., about half an hour after she left Bobby McGee's tavern, 704 N. River Rd., Mount Prospect, where she had been since about 10 p.m. Sunday night, police said.

Parish told police he had been at the tavern also with another girl, Wendy

Acker, 233 Fletcher in Wheeling that evening.

Parish told police he had gone to the tavern with a Wheeling woman and had talked to Miss Jones, whom he described as his ex-girlfriend, at one point during the evening, according to police.

POLICE SAID Parish and the Wheeling woman left the tavern after Miss Jones. They were driving southbound on River Road when the accident occurred. Parish then rushed her to Holy Family where she was pronounced dead, police said.

Police investigators said there was no indication that the car had gone off the roadway. They said Miss Jones must have been walking on the road when she was hit because there was no trace of mud on her shoes.

Parish also told police he was observing the 45 mile per hour speed limit at the time. Police said Parish volunteered to take a lie detector test in connection with the accident and passed the test satisfactorily yesterday.

Parish was charged with failure to yield the right of way to a pedestrian and going too fast for conditions.

He was released on bond and is scheduled to appear in court April 2.

Baseball clinic set for spring by parks

A baseball clinic for first-through third-grade boys will be offered by the Rolling Meadows Park District this spring.

The clinic, which starts next week, will run for 10 weeks. The boys will meet for an hour and a half each week and receive instruction on batting, fielding and throwing. There will be no pitching.

Classes will be limited to 20 boys. The clinic will be held on Mondays from 4 to 5:30 p.m. and 6:30 to 8 p.m. If the demand is great enough, more classes will be opened during the week.

The classes will start indoors but move outside as the weather permits. Each boy must have gym shoes and a glove. A tee shirt will be provided by the park district.

Instructors for the clinic are Stan Pace, superintendent of parks and varsity baseball coach at Morton Grove Junior College, and Rudy Nelson, recreation director. There will be guest instructors during the clinics.

The registration fee for the clinic is $3 and may be made at the administration building, 1 Park Meadow Pl.

Open gym schedule starting at complex

A new open gym schedule will go into effect this weekend at the Rolling Meadows Sports Complex, 3800 Owl Dr.

Open gym hours for children in first through eighth grades will be from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Hours for persons in high school and above will be from 2:30 to 5 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday and 7:30 to 10 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Persons wishing to use the gym must bring gym shoes with them in order to be admitted to the complex. There is no fee for grade school children and a 25 cents fee for high school students and adults.

Due to a karate tournament at the complex, there will be no open gym hours this Sunday.

MORE THAN 250 boys and girls 6 and 15 years old participated in the Regional Jaycee Speed Skating Championship on Saturday at the Rolling Meadows Ice Arena. Rolling Meadows finished second, one point behind Northbrook in a field of seven. Saturday's winners will compete in the state competition at Park Ridge.

3-year-old girl drowns in Salt Creek

by JULIA BAUER

A daylong search for a 3-year-old Palatine girl ended in tragedy yesterday when men dragging Salt Creek discovered the body of the child, Susan Gieseler, apparently drowned at the Pleasant Hill Boulevard bridge.

The child, who lived at 150 S. Maple Ct., was discovered missing by her mother at 9:15 a.m. At 5 p.m., public works employee Robert Best discovered the child's body, which had apparently been washed into a sewer line entering the stream at water level under the bridge.

Palatine police originally were notified at 9:45 a.m. of the missing girl and a door-to-door hunt was started. The Palatine Fire Department began dragging the branch of Salt Creek at 3:30 p.m. A five-man team took a rowboat and searched the stream south of the Helen Road bridge between Smith and Brockway streets. Another crew took long poles and swept across the width of the stream north where it was too narrow to allow the boat.

BEST, WHO WAS aiding in the search, was walking in the stream when he discovered the girl's body a mile downstream from her home.

Mrs. James W. Gieseler, the child's mother, told police that her daughter had long blond hair and was wearing a pink coat and aqua slacks when she apparently wandered away from home yesterday morning.

The county's canine patrol was called out to attempt to track the girl. Cook County Sheriff's Police organized that portion of the search.

The neighborhood around Susan's house was filled with policemen as they knocked on every door to ask if Susan had been seen. Detectives questioned young children in another effort to find the girl.

The east bank of Salt Creek was fenced off. But the west shore, the side Susan's house was on, sloped down without a break to the water's edge.

QUALIFYING ROUNDS for the Virginia Slims women's tennis tour opened yesterday at the Arlington Tennis Club in Palatine. Ann Koger of Baltimore, Md., is one of 32 hopefuls vying for eight spots in the tournament, which has been dominated by Australian Margaret Court. The tournament shifts to the Lakeshore Racquet Club on Friday.

O'Hare noise 'double dose' in area: report power," instead of a more gradual climb over neighboring suburbs. "There was a lot of pulling of hair to get the planes higher, quicker," Case said. "We were trying to balance safety and noise impact."

"CURRENT PROCEDURES in effect since April, 1970, restrict takeoffs between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.," Lindahl said. The FAA's lane of relief policy limits those night operations to runway 32L to the "maximum extent possible," according to the FAA.

"The noise sensitivity of people does not start at 11 p.m. and end with the roar of the first jet after 7 a.m.," said Lindahl.

Suburb officials have often called for a night O'Hare shutdown, similar to Washington (D.C.) National airport's. "That just is not up to us to determine," Case said. Control of airport hours rests with Chicago. "If the people want the airport to limit flights after 11 p.m., it's up to them to convince the city. It's not up to the federal government."

"We insist that the number one consideration is safety," Case said. "Flight procedures have been developed over the years and economics was not the reason. We could close the airport and solve the noise problem."

O'Hare officials can "play noise abatement" during hours of light operation, usually at night, he said. "From 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. we've got to use all our ingenuity and concrete to evaluate and handle the large amount of traffic that can reach 150 planes an hour."

MUCH AIRPORT NOISE stems from use of the older, noisier DC-9, 707, 727 and 737 planes allowed under a grandfather clause in the 1968 noise abatement requirements. The planes do not meet the same noise standards as recent 747's, he said.

Lindahl's report will be included in the FAA hearing designed to require retrofitting of the old planes to meet current noise standards by 1978. The proposal would require changes in 50 per cent of airline fleet planes in 1976.

"I'm sure there's going to be a big fight over this," Case said. "The airlines will fight it because of cost. They'll either have to change the planes or get rid of them. The civic groups will say we're not doing it fast enough."

Lindahl's report added support to last summer's claims by former U.S. Rep. Abner Mikva and the Environmental Protection Agency that O'Hare noise reaches levels dangerous to hearing. In September, Mikva and EPA claimed suburban airport noise reached 118 decibels. About 110 can damage hearing of one in five persons exposed to the sound — similar to the blast of an auto horn three feet away — for 30 minutes a day over a prolonged period, EPA has claimed.

Lindahl reported readings of up to 106 decibels when monitoring 95 flights over six days in January and February. Fifteen per cent of the readings topped 100. About 17 per cent were less than 90 decibels.

IT'S GROWING, as construction workers resort to ladders to put finishing touches on the new Countryside YMCA, Northwest Highway and Baldwin road in Palatine Township. Just six months remain until the official opening of the facilities for fall programs, including adult fitness centers, an indoor swimming pool and activity rooms for arts and crafts.

Weather break boosts progress on Y building

Unseasonably good weather has boosted progress on construction of the $2.5 million Countryside YMCA building northwest of Palatine.

Just 5 per cent of the outside work is uncompleted, and workers have finished approximately 40 per cent of the inside construction, according to Countryside Y executive director Herman Hertog.

"It's been very smooth," Hertog said of this winter's work. So far, no labor contract disputes or supply shortages have hampered the builders' progress. Even the weather, an expected complication during the winter months, has cooperated.

The good winter weather is partially making up for heavy rains during the summer. Tons of water had to be pumped from the early excavation on several different occasions. But now, it looks like the new Y will be ready to open on schedule in September.

SOME Y OFFICIALS are confident once the building opens, a rush of new members will boost the current number of supporters. Others are concerned the new facilities will create complacency and less enthusiasm among the members who have worked for the new building, a drive started when the Countryside Y was organized five years ago.

"We see this only as a beginning," Hertog said last week. "The building is not the Y. It's only part of it."

In recent years, Y programs have been held in community buildings and schools. Most Y swimming lessons have been at the St. Viator High School pool in Arlington Heights. Churches also have donated space. Headquarters for the Y have been at a Palatine village-owned residence at 115 W. Johnson St. That building will be used for village offices after the Y moves out in August.

APPLICANTS FOR the positions of building superintendent and a third program director are being interviewed now. The two new people will probably start late this spring.

On April 27, the annual meeting and dinner-dance for all Y members and friends is set at the Howard Johnson Motor Lodge in Palatine. New by-law changes and a new board of directors will be voted on, and a schedule for opening and dedicating the new building will be officially set up.

Sister Joann takes final vows; 800 witness ceremony

Nearly 800 persons witnessed the profession of final vows by Sister Joann Brdecka of St. Colette parish in Rolling Meadows on Sunday.

The ceremonies took place in Sister Joann's home parish, St. Catherine Laboure, Glenview. In addition to family members, priests and the religious of the Order of St. Francis, many parishioners from the two parishes where Sister Joann has been stationed attended the hour long services.

Sister Joann was transferred to St. Colette parish last June to assist in the parish pastoral ministry program. Since her arrival she has been active in both religious and social parish activities.

The homily at the services was given by the Rev. Columba McManus. Choirs from St. Colette, St. Dominic's and the Franciscan sisters also took part in the services, as did the ecumenical folk group from St. Colette. The final blessing was given by the Rev. Carl Mettling.

Sister Joann will continue at St. Colette in the pastoral ministry program. She lives at the convent of St. James' parish in Arlington Heights.

Prior to coming to St. Colette, Sister Joann spent three and a half years at St. Dominic's parish in Chicago's Cabrini Green area.

Sister Joann graduated from Alverno College in Milwaukee with a degree in home economics. She continued her studies at Garrett Theological Seminary in Evanston where she received her master's degree in divinity. She later studied at the Divine Word International Center of Religious Education in London, Ont.

Village approves pacts for street repaving program

The Hoffman Estates Village Board last night approved contracts for a street repaving program which includes three street segments near the old village hall and four in the area of the Highlands.

The work was to have been done last summer, said John Hossack, village public works superintendent. It was delayed after the state took more time than expected to review the village's plan because of needed research, he said.

Hoffman Estates is experimenting with tearing up and mixing old pavement in the base coat, he explained. Other communities throw the old paving material away. The state reviewed the success in previous work done under that system in the village, he said. Approval came late last fall, and the village decided to wait until spring to award contracts, to avoid having streets under construction during the winter, he said.

Streets to be repaved are:

• Flagstaff Lane between Washington and Grand Canyon boulevards.

• Washington between Flagstaff and Bode Road.

• Morton Street between Kingman Lane and Flagstaff.

• Highland Boulevard between Golf Road and Frederick Lane.

• Frederick between Highland and Kent Road.

• Frederick between Bedford and Denison roads.

• Hillcrest Boulevard between Hampton and Monticello roads.

The contract was awarded to Rock Road Construction for $144,065.90. Engineers had estimated the cost at $15,850 more. Work is to start in mid-June and be completed in about two months. Consultants said warm weather is needed for the process to be successful.

Hossack said the firm submitted the lowest of six bids. Engineers estimated the cost at $158,000.

Other work undoubtedly will be undertaken this summer Hossack said, although it may be more of a maintenance project than road reconstruction. It is also likely, he said, the new program will be undertaken late this summer.

$2 million

A $2 million bond sale will be held in June by Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54 to complete current construction projects with an estimated cost of $4.5 million. A previous $2.25 million bond issue was sold in 1972 to begin the projects.

The bond issue is part of a $7.25 million referendum approved by Dist. 54 voters in 1970.

The June bond sale will provide funds for completion of John Muir Elementary School, 1973 Kingston Rd., Hoffman Estates; Dwight Eisenhower Junior High School, 801 W. Hassell Rd., Hoffman Estates; Albert Einstein Elementary School, Hanover Park, and Walden Elementary School in Hanover Park.

The funds also will pay the balance of construction costs on the Armstrong School addition, 155 N. Kingsdale Dr., Hoffman Estates; the Helen Keller Junior High School addition at 820 Bode Rd., Schaumburg; the Jane Addams Junior High School addition at 700 Springinsguth Rd., Schaumburg and the Robert Frost Junior High School addition on Wise Road, Schaumburg.

Progress reports were also given on construction at J. Edgar Hoover School, 315 Springinsguth Rd., Schaumburg and Adolph Link School, 900 S. W. Glen Trail Rd., Elk Grove Village. Hoover School is being financed by the state.

Marvin Lapicola, director of business services for Dist. 54 said Link School, expected to be completed in September, may be ready by July or August.

Link School is expected to cost $246,756. Vale Construction Company, developer of the Elk Grove Village area the school is located in, is paying half the cost of the school and gave the district an interest free loan for the balance of construction.

TONGUE OUT in total concentration, Kevin McCormick, a first-grader at Lakeview School, paints a head he constructed out of papier mache and an aluminum can. March has been designated National Youth Art Month, and in observance students in Dist. 54 will be working on similar art projects. The district also plans displays of student work in the community and in the schools, along with special art activities.

Policemen, firemen to teach safety course

Your babysitter can learn to cope

by STEVE BROWN

Can your babysitter administer basic first aid to your youngster's cuts and bruises, know what to do in case fire breaks out or a prowler tries to break in?

Parents now may be uncertain as to what answers they might give to those questions, but in about a month Schaumburg area babysitters should be able to answer "yes" to all those questions and have a certificate signed by the chief of police and fire chief to back them up.

The Schaumburg Fire and Police departments announced Saturday they will hold a three-week Babysitter's Safety Course, beginning March 24. The course, which will be taught by police officers and firefighters, will advise babysitters on a number of on-the-job emergency situations.

Fire Chief Lloyd Abrahamsen and Police Chief Martin Conroy said the program would be open to all area youngsters age 12 and older. They said the program will be taught in three one hour sessions on three consecutive Saturdays.

THE COURSE, which will be offered at no charge, will teach youngsters procedures for handling injuries and other medical emergencies, how to identify shock and explanation and treatment of poison incidents.

Another segment of the course will deal with fire safety and the police department will offer advice on dealing with suspected prowlers, intruders and other emergency situations.

Schaumburg Village Trustees Herb Aigner and Ray Kessel both praised the fire and police departments for formulating the program and said the two agencies should be congratulated for creative thinking.

When the youngsters complete the course they will each receive a certicate signed by Mayor Robert O. Atcher and the police and fire chiefs. In addition, they will receive a card they can carry when they take babysitting jobs.

"WE HOPE THAT when the program is completed, parents will ask for these cards and hire babysitters that have been a part of this program," Abrahamsen said.

The three weekend sessions are now planned for the Great Hall, 231 S. Civic Dr., Schaumburg, but a larger facility will be obtained if the demand proves necessary.

Persons may register for the course at Schaumburg Police Department, 231 S. Civic Dr., Schaumburg Fire Station No. 1, 1435 W. Schaumburg Rd., Fire Station No. 2, 1024 N. Meacham Rd., Schaumburg High School, 1100 W. Schaumburg Rd., Jane Addams Junior High School, 700 S. Springinsguth Rd., and Robert Frost Junior High School, 320 W. Wise Rd., all in Schaumburg.

Police facility committee formed

A new committee of Schaumburg village officials has been formed to oversee the initial steps toward development of a new police facility.

The committee is composed of Police Chief Martin Conroy; John Coste, village administrator; Joseph Zgonina, engineer, and Peter Retten, building commissioner.

One of the group's first tasks will be to interview architects. The first interviews are scheduled for later this month. Nine architectural firms responded to a village request for bids to design the facility.

According to a timetable established for the entire village cultural and civic center, the police facility will be completed during 1975.

Initial plans also call for the facility to be located on a 40 acre site on Schaumburg Road, just east of Roselle Road, where the village's new municipal building is also being constructed.

The village's police and fire committee will also participate in the planning and construction of the police building.

The estimated cost of the building is around $1 million.

Currently the department is located in the lower level of the Great Hall. When the municipal building is completed later this year, Chief Conroy said he plans to move a portion of the police operation into the old village hall.

Howie Circuit Court suits delayed again

The Circuit Court trial of suits involving the Howie-In-The-Hills property in Hoffman Estates has again been deferred, pending the outcome of settlement negotiations of federal court suits over proceeds from the sale of the land.

Status reports were due in Circuit Court yesterday on the settlement negotiations. Hoffman Estates Village Atty. Edward Hotert reported yesterday continuances had been granted on the Circuit Court action, with new dates for status reports of April 2 and May 7.

The federal courts also have established a date for status reports, this time regarding specific negotiations between the receivership holding title to the Howie property and bondholders claiming a right to a share of the proceeds of the proposed land sale to Meridian Housing Corp. Attorneys representing the receivership and the bondholders are to report their progress March 14, said Hotert.

That session will be held in chambers before Federal Judge Edwin A. Robson, as was a session last week. At last Tuesday's conference, said Hotert, Judge Robson indicated the claims of at least some of the bondholders should be settled.

Village candidates' night set Thursday

Candidates for Hoffman Estates village offices will speak at a candidates' night at 8 p.m. Thursday in the municipal building, 1200 N. Gannon Dr. The event is being sponsored by Hoffman Estates Residents' Association (HERA).

All candidates for mayor, trustee and clerk have indicated they will attend, said Mel Budish, HERA spokesman. Presidential candidates will speak first, and the audience then will have 20 minutes to question them. Trustee candidates then will have three minutes to speak, with another question-and-answer period when they have finished. Clerk candidates will speak last, with a third question-and-answer session when they are through.

RELAX: Mayor Robert O. Atcher and other village officials do not stand to make a bundle from either continued development of Centex-Schaumburg Industrial Park or a possible expansion of Schaumburg Airport.

According to two sources close to Centex Corporation management, parcels of land lying north and south of Irving Park Road near Wright Boulevard in the southern part of the village are owned by Roselle Properties, a 16-member land trust held by First National Bank of Chicago.

While three principals in the ownership agreement had been earlier identified, their individual percentages of holdings had not.

New information reveals 50 per cent of the industrial park and airport land is owned by Jack Pritzker, a prominent Chicago attorney and philanthropist. Twenty-five per cent is designated to Bill Lambert, who owns extensive property in Schaumburg. Lambert, who does not live in the village, also donated a 40-acre site for Schaumburg's civic and cultural centers.

The remaining one-fourth is held by Marshall Bennett, of Bennett & Kahnweiler, agents for the industrial park, and 13 other persons.

While names of the 13 have not so far been publicly released, it has been confirmed that Bennett & Kahnweiler has frequently passed out one-percent ownerships in the Schaumburg land to highly respected members of their company or other employees who have done an outstanding job for them. Rather a bonus type of arrangement.

So, it would appear that several local residents who have openly questioned officials' financial interest in this land can rest securely in the knowledge that such is not the case.

TIMBERCREST HOME OWNERS Association will hold a village candidates night Friday, March 23, at 8:30 p.m. at Dirksen School. According to a Timbercrest representative, seven candidates for village office are expected to appear. The public is encouraged to attend fully armed with questions.

WATCH FOR Art Wagner and Dick Ritchie to announce candidacy for reelection as Schaumburg Township school trustees soon.

A HAPPY BIRTHDAY to Miss Debbie Hennessy, of Hoffman Estates, who celebrated her 13th yesterday. It's bound to be a lucky year for her.

A LONG weekend on the "Sun Coast" confirmed that Karen and Emil Jasik, formerly of High Point, definitely have become Floridians. Enjoying their new home and life in Sarasota, the Jasiks send news back to friends that the thing they miss least about Hoffman Estates is Dist. 54's cold weather lunch program! Their friends will understand, they say, due to their heavy involvement in the program in past years.

NO MAN is indispensable as song as he has a friend, says Otto Nobetter.

Village, mayor dragging feet on development: Mrs. Hayter

Mrs. Virginia Hayter, Republican candidate for mayor of Hoffman Estates, recently attacked incumbent Mayor Frederick Downey in the matter of recruitment of industrial development and suggested consideration of the village hiring a professional planner.

"The business and industry commission appointed several years ago is in limbo, or at least as dormant as a bear in hibernation. While other groups have been scheduled for periodic reports, it is interesting to note the village president has not even mentioned this group for many months," said Mrs. Hayter.

Mrs. Hayter also charged there has been no discussion of responsibility for developing information to convince potential business developers to move into the village.

"The business resident of a community is the taxpayer's friend," said Mrs. Hayter, saying the village received more than $215,000 in sales tax revenue in 1971-72, and almost $150,000 in the first nine months of 1972-73.

A balance of types of taxing property is of prime importance to the village, and it can be developed with personal attention from community leaders, she said. She noted the availability of land west of the Douglas Forest Preserve for industrial development, and its access to the proposed Fox Valley Freeway. There also is land north of the toll-way zoned manufacturing, she said.

Employment of a planning expert could also help attain this, she suggested, calling for a review of costs of contracting for planning consultants and of hiring a village planner.

Ex-boyfriend's car kills woman on highway

A Rolling Meadows woman was killed early yesterday when she was struck by a car while walking along River Road in Des Plaines, according to Des Plaines police.

Gean Jones, 19, of 2206 Eastman, was pronounced dead on arrival at Holy Family Hospital after the car driven by John Parish, 23, of 1845 Circle Dr., Des Plaines, struck her about one-half mile north of Central Road, police said.

The accident took place about 4 a.m., about half an hour after she left Bobby McGee's tavern, 704 N. River Rd., Mount Prospect, where she had been since about 10 p.m. Sunday night, police said.

Parish told police he had been at the tavern also with another girl, Wendy Acker, 233 Fletcher in Wheeling that evening.

Parish told police he had gone to the tavern with a Wheeling woman and had talked to Miss Jones, whom he described as his ex-girlfriend, at one point during the evening, according to police.

POLICE SAID Parish and the Wheeling woman left the tavern after Miss Jones. They were driving southbound on River Road when the accident occurred. Parish then rushed her to Holy Family where she was pronounced dead, police said.

Police investigators said there was no indication that the car had gone off the roadway. They said Miss Jones must have been walking on the road when she was hit because there was no trace of mud on her shoes.

Parish also told police he was observing the 45 mile per hour speed limit at the time. Police said Parish volunteered to take a lie detector test in connection with the accident and passed the test satisfactorily yesterday.

Palatine girl, 3, drowns in Salt Creek

by JULIA BAUER

A daylong search for a 3-year-old Palatine girl ended in tragedy yesterday when men dragging Salt Creek discovered the body of the child, Susan Gieseler, apparently drowned at the Pleasant Hill Boulevard bridge.

The child, who lived at 159 S. Maple Ct., was discovered missing by her mother at 9:15 a.m. At 5 p.m., public works employee Robert Best discovered the child's body, which had apparently been washed into a sewer line entering the stream at water level under the bridge.

Palatine police originally were notified at 9:48 a.m. of the missing girl and a door-to-door hunt was started. The Palatine Fire Department began dragging the branch of Salt Creek at 3:30 p.m. A five-man team took a rowboat and searched the stream south of the Hellen Road bridge between Smith and Brockway streets. Another crew took long poles and swept across the width of the stream north where it was too narrow to allow the boat.

BEST, WHO WAS aiding in the search, was walking in the stream when he discovered the girl's body a mile downstream from her home.

Mrs. James W. Gieseler, the child's mother, told police that her daughter had long blond hair and was wearing a pink coat and aqua slacks when she apparently wandered away from home yesterday morning.

The county's canine patrol was called out to attempt to track the girl. Cook County Sheriff's Police organized that portion of the search.

The neighborhood around Susan's house was filled with policemen as they knocked on every door to ask if Susan had been seen. Detectives questioned young children in another effort to find the girl.

The east bank of Salt Creek was fenced off. But the west shore, the side Susan's house was on, sloped down without a break to the water's edge.

NW suburbs get 'twice share' O'Hare noise: report

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

The Northwest suburbs "shoulder twice their share" of O'Hare airport noise, a report by a Des Plaines city official contends.

"The communities surrounding O'Hare would not have too much to complain about if they could be convinced that everything possible was being done to reduce the noise problem. Waiting for quieter engines is merely falling at a task that must be accomplished," said Philip Lindahl, Des Plaines environmental control officer.

Lindahl's report was hand-delivered to Washington, D.C. yesterday by Mayor Herbert Behrel. The 26-page study was also to be entered last week in minutes of a Federal Aviation Administration hearing on "airplane fleet noise requirements."

FAA regional officials in Des Plaines denied Lindahl's charge 31 per cent of takeoffs and landings are conducted over the Northwest suburbs. The percentages for other directions include: east 22 per cent; southeast—16 per cent; northeast—11 per cent; southwest—10 per cent and west—10 per cent, according to Lindahl.

"THE ACTUAL STATISTICS are more balanced than that," said Les Case, FAA environmental and noise abatement officer.

Lindahl's totals were based on a 1972

Northeastern Illinois Plan Commission report on O'Hare use. The figures were compiled in October 1969 and were projections for 1975 airport traffic levels.

Case said the airport's "runway utilization log" for August, 1972, showed about 9 per cent to the northeast, 22 per cent in the northwest; 11 per cent west; 2 per cent southwest; 24 per cent southeast, and 32 per cent east.

Personnel shortages have limited runway log keeping, he said. No statistics for total use in 1973 are available.

Case said noise impact is now "distributed more evenly" over the suburbs because O'Hare tower chiefs, who plan runway use, "look at what happened the day before. This is a new phenomenon. The chief tries to hit people with noise who didn't have it the day before and he tries to avoid previous high use areas."

LINDAHL CLAIMED Park Ridge and Northwest Chicago receive "special treatment" because takeoffs over the communities on runways 22R and 27R, are prohibited between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.

Lindahl called for 24-hour a day use of "a recognized unpopulated tollway departure route" off runway 32R, already one of the airport's busiest, to relieve Northwest suburban noise. "The silent argument . . . is that by routing east-bound departures off 32R out over the tollway adds about two minutes to the flight time and costs a few dollars — so we suffer instead," he said.

Lindahl charged "a credibility gap now exists in the FAA community relations office" and he criticized FAA changes in takeoff requirements as "old existing procedures . . . an apparent attempt to deceive the residents of the O'Hare area."

Case answered by saying, "We never claimed noise would be eliminated. At this point, everything is being done without disregarding safety."

In August, 1972, the FAA ordered pilots to climb to 1,500 feet altitude at "full (Continued on page 3)

Increase of 8,000 voters over 1971 due to annexation

23,698 residents registered for April 17 village election

As of Feb. 28, a total of 23,698 persons in Mount Prospect were eligible to vote in the April 17 village elections.

Voter registration by order of the county clerk's office, will continue through March 19. The village clerk's office, 112 E. Northwest Hwy., will be open from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday to accept new registrations.

This year's total shows an increase of over 8,000 from the number registered in 1971, the year of the last village election. Much of the increase is due to the 1971 annexation of about 10,000 residents in the New Town area of Prospect Heights.

The second major reason for the increase was the lowering of the voting age to 18 last year.

Due to the annexation, two new precincts were also added. There are now 17 precincts in the village.

Voting in the village has proven heavier in years when the mayorality is at stake. In 1969 when current mayor Robert D. Teichert bested then-incumbent Daniel Congreve, almost half of the eligible voters went to the polls. Out of 16,000 registered, 7,484 voted.

In the off-year 1971 election of three village trustees, the number of those eligible to vote declined to 15,641 and only 3,343 of those voted.

The vote this year could easily top 10,000 as annexed areas usually vote heavily the first chance they get after annexation.

IN ADDITION to Teichert, two independents are running for mayor. They are Michael H. Minton and Albert J. Mutsch. With Teichert on the Village Party slate are unopposed candidates Donald Goodman, seeking reelection for village clerk, and Richard Hendricks, candidate for a two-year trustee term.

Four men are seeking the three available four-year trustee spots. Incumbents Donald B. Furst, Bud Richardson and Patrick J. Link are also on the Village Party slate. The other man, Leo Flores,

The two available Mount Prospect Public Library Board seats are being sought by Miriam Star, Samuel Hess and Jack Anderson. Anderson was appointed to the board in January to fill a vacancy.

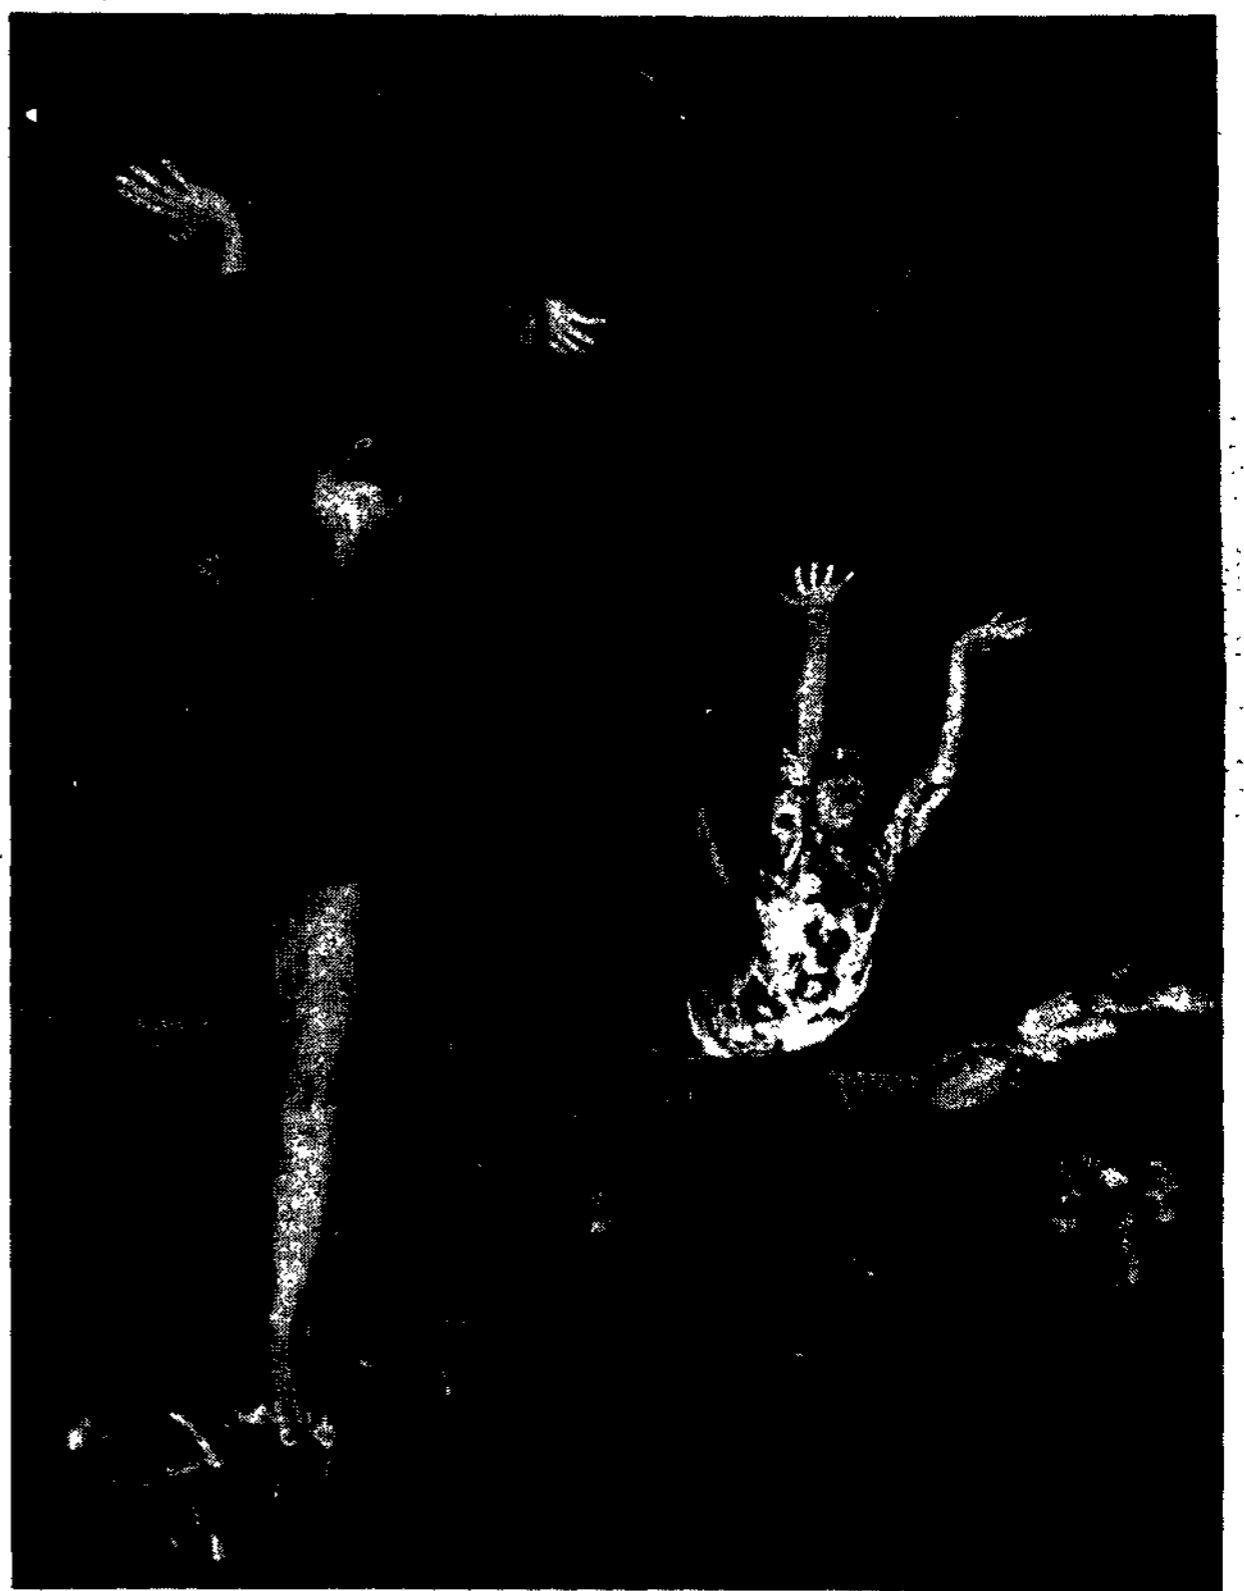

Chicago man charged on marijuana count

A Chicago man was charged with possession of marijuana after Mount Prospect police stopped him early Sunday to investigate a traffic violation.

Michael T. Petrie, 22, was driving a car westbound on Rand, police said when the car ran off the road twice. During pursuit, a passenger in the car opened a door on the right side and threw something out, police said.

After stopping the auto, police said they found what appeared to be a marijuana cigarette on the roadway, at Rand and Harvey street, and another cigarette was seen on the floor of the car. A plastic package of vegetable material believed to be marijuana was also found in the glove compartment of the car.

Petrie was also charged with improper lane usage. He is to appear in Mount Prospect Circuit Court branch April 18.

Four retiring firemen to be honored tonight

Presentations to four retiring volunteer firemen will be made at tonight's Mount Prospect Village Board meeting by Mayor Robert D. Teichert.

The men and their years of service are: Frank B. Schmidt, 25 years; Edward J. Knoch, 20 years; George R. Busse, 16 years, and Douglas D. Winkelmann, 15 years.

Also at tonight's meeting, starting at 8 p.m. in the Municipal Building, 112 E. Northwest Hwy., there will be a 40-minute film depicting fire department activities.

Other items on tonight's agenda include:

- Consideration of a $10,000 supplemental Motor Fuel Tax resolution for the completion of the William Street bridge.

- Presentation of the 1973-74 village budget.

- Possible adoption of an amendment to the current zoning ordinance and an ordinance creating a Planning Commission out of the old Plan Commission.

- A public hearing on the amendment of the Huntington Commons planned unit development agreement to permit construction of a Venture department store at the northwest corner of Dempster Street and Elmhurst Road.

2 girls seriously injured in Golf Road auto accident

Two Mount Prospect girls were seriously injured yesterday in an automobile accident on Golf Road in the village.

Pamela Aggar, 16, of 811 S. See-Gwin Ave., was transferred from Northwest Community Hospital to Wesleyan Memorial Hospital. Hospital spokesmen said she was in critical condition with a broken neck.

The second girl, Donna Pairitz, 17, of 905 S. See-Gwin Ave., was admitted to Northwest Community with lacerations and facial injuries. She was listed in serious, but improving, condition. Miss Pairitz is the daughter of Mount Prospect Fire Chief Lawrence A. Pairitz.

Both girls were passengers in a car driven by Charles Mead, 17, of 1140 S. Douglas, Arlington Heights. They were traveling east on Golf Road shortly before 12:30 a.m. when a second car made a left turn in front of them, police said.

The driver of that car, Herbert Stebbins, 35, of 1414 Hickory Ln., Mount Prospect, told police he was attempting to turn onto Lancaster Street.

Stebbins was charged with failure to yield the right of way and driving while intoxicated, police said. He is to appear April 4 in Mount Prospect Circuit Court branch. Stebbins and Mead were treated and released at Northwest Community.

Marilyn Hallman

Shirley Gundersen recently spent three days behind locked doors in Washington, D.C. She was one of 23 American Library Association committee members who met to select 1972 winners of the prestigious Newbery and Caldecott awards.

Each year since 1922, the Children's Services Division of the A.L.A. has awarded the Newbery medal to the author of "the most distinguished contribution to American literature for children" during the preceding year. In 1937 it presented the first annual Caldecott medal to the artist of "the most distinguished American picture book for children." Prize winning books bear gold seal replicas of the medals.

After three days of voting and discussion, the committee announced its choices. Jean Craighead George won the Newbery medal for her book "Julie of the Wolves." Winner of the Caldecott medal was Massachusetts artist Blair Lent. He illustrated "The Funny Little Woman," a Japanese folk tale retold by Arlene Mosel.

ARTIST AND AUTHOR were flown to Washington, D.C., by their publishers for a special awards tea. Shirley and the other committee members were able to talk with them at that time.

"Jean George lay on the tundra observing Arctic wolves for six or seven hours a day over a five-month period before writing her book," Shirley reported. The book is about a young Eskimo girl lost on the North Slope of Alaska.

This was not entirely a new experience for Mrs. George, who comes from a family of naturalist-researchers. She spent much time in the wilderness with her father and brothers hiking, canoeing and studying plants and animals.

In June Shirley will meet the medal winners again when she attends the annual Newbery-Caldecott award dinner in Las Vegas. At this time the official awards will be presented.

SERVING ON the selection committee, Shirley found it an interesting but time-consuming job. As director of library services for School Dist. 57, she skims many children's books each year before deciding what to purchase. For this special task, however, she had to read slowly and thoughtfully.

"I must have read between 400 and 500 books last year — practically everything published for children during 1972," she said. Since she was one of the eight committee members elected by the A.L.A. membership, rather than appointed, she did not know she would be serving until last June. Her reading had to be telescoped into just a few months.

Children's books are more difficult to write than adult books, Shirley pointed out. Like adult books, they must have good characterization and plot, be relevant and well written, but must also use a vocabulary children can understand.

Mrs. George is the author of 30 previous books. Lent has won many awards and citations for his illustrations. Three of his books were named as Caldecott honor books (runners-up) in previous years.

In addition to her committee duties, Shirley squeezed in quick trips to the Washington, D.C. zoo to see its new pandas, and to the National Gallery of Art.

Park View School enrollment topic

Enrollment projections for Park View School will be one of the primary subjects of discussion at the River Trails Dist. 26 board meeting tonight.

The meeting, to be in the Park View library, 805 N. Burning Bush Ln., begins with an executive session at 7:30 p.m. The regular public meeting convenes at 8 p.m.

According to Assistant Supt. James Retzlaff, there will be enough students in sixth grade at Park View next year to fill three classes. At present, there is no room at the school for three sixth-grade classes.

Other items on the Dist. 26 agenda include a report of the budget committee and a status report on the sale of bonds for life safety work at the schools.

Hogan named pro at country club

John Hogan Jr., 41, has been appointed golf professional at the Mount Prospect Country Club.

Hogan, a resident of Itasca, was formerly golf pro at the Salt Creek Golf Club in Itasca. He has also served as assistant and head pro at the River Forest Golf Club in Elmhurst and as an assistant pro at Tam O' Shanter Country Club in Niles.

Hogan replaces Roy Hunter, who died in December. He will be in charge of all recreational programs at the club and will manage the pro shop.

Police Explorer group weighed

The Mount Prospect Police Department is hoping to sponsor a law enforcement Explorer Scout group.

Open to 15 to 20-year-olds of both sexes, the organization would enable members to explore career potentials in the law enforcement field. Participants would be able to meet with, observe and get counsel from qualified people in the legal profession and law enforcement.

At a meeting last week, about 12 youths signed up for the program. A second meeting is being planned for 7:30 p.m. March 1 in the Municipal Building, 112 E. Northwest Hwy. At that time, Police Chief Bert Giddens said he hopes more youths will sign up for the program. Giddens spoke at the first meeting.

A list of proposed program topics includes: municipal court procedure, military law, police operations, municipal government, types of trials, defensive driving, airport security, bicycle safety, narcotics and various other aspects of law.

Explorer groups are designed to cover six areas: citizenship, social, service, outdoor, vocational and fitness activities.

MEG agents arrest 2 in drug-pushing case

Undercover policemen of the Metropolitan Enforcement Group Friday night arrested two Mount Prospect youths, allegedly the drug suppliers for the Forest View High School area.

According to one of the MEG agents, the boys, aged 15 and 16, were charged with delivery of a controlled substance drug. The arrest took place at 6:30 p.m. at the home of one of the youths, in the Lonquist Boulevard and Busse Road area of the village.

The two have been referred to juvenile court for processing. Mount Prospect police assisted in the arrests.

Suburbs get twice their share of O'Hare jet noise

power," instead of a more gradual climb over neighboring suburbs. "There was a lot of pulling of hair to get the planes higher, quicker," Case said. "We were trying to balance safety and noise impact."

"CURRENT PROCEDURES in effect since April, 1970, restrict takeoffs between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.," Lindahl said. The FAA's lane of relief policy limits those night operations to runway 32L to the "maximum extent possible," according to the FAA.

"The noise sensitivity of people does not start at 11 p.m. and end with the roar of the first jet after 7 a.m.," said Lindahl.

Suburb officials have often called for a night O'Hare shutdown, similar to Washington (D.C.) National airport's. "That just is not up to us to determine," Case said. Control of airport hours rests with Chicago. "If the people want the airport to limit flights after 11 p.m., it's up to them to convince the city. It's not up to the federal government."

"We insist that the number one consideration is safety," Case said. "Flight procedures have been developed over the years and economics was not the reason. We could close the airport and solve the noise problem."

O'Hare officials can "play noise abatement" during hours of light operation, usually at night, he said. "From 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. we've got to use all our ingenuity and concrete to evaluate and handle the large amount of traffic" that can reach 150 planes an hour.

MUCH AIRPORT NOISE stems from use of the older, noisier DC-9, 707, 727 and 737 planes allowed under a grandfather clause in the 1968 noise abatement requirements. The planes do not meet the same noise standards as recent 747's, he said.

Lindahl's report will be included in the FAA hearing designed to require retrofitting of the old planes to meet current noise standards by 1978. The proposal would require changes in 50 per cent of airline fleet planes in 1976.

"I'm sure there's going to be a big fight over this," Case said. "The airlines will fight it because of cost. They'll either have to change the planes or get rid of them. The civic groups will say we're not doing it fast enough."

Lindahl's report added support to last summer's claims by former U.S. Rep. Abner Mikva and the Environmental Protection Agency that O'Hare noise reaches levels dangerous to hearing. In September, Mikva and EPA claimed suburban airport noise reached 118 decibels. About 110 can damage hearing of one in five persons exposed to the sound — similar to the blast of an auto horn three feet away — for 30 minutes a day over a prolonged period, EPA has claimed.

Lindahl reported readings of up to 106 decibels when monitoring 95 flights over six days in January and February. Fifteen per cent of the readings topped 100. About 17 per cent were less than 90 decibels.

Lettuce pickets march to support pickers

by LYNN ASINOF

Pickets who boycotted lettuce at the A&P food stores in Wheeling and Des Plaines Saturday may become a common weekend sight.

The pickets, who are supporting efforts by the United Farm Workers (UFW) are urging shoppers not to buy from A&P stores. They say they will continue their picketing until the A&P chain makes the commitment to buy only UFW union lettuce.

Cynthia Kelly, who is in charge of picketing and leaflet passing in the Northwest suburbs, said A&P stores are selling some union lettuce. She said, however, the chain is continuing to buy non-union lettuce when UFW lettuce is not available.

"DURING THE PAST several weeks, A&P has made a great effort to handle union lettuce," she said. "But we want a commitment that when there is no union lettuce they will handle no lettuce."

Miss Kelly said, the lettuce picked by members of the Teamsters Union should not be considered union lettuce because the Teamsters have not signed contracts with their pickers.

According to an A&P spokesman in Chicago, the company thinks it is buying union lettuce no matter which union it is from. "It is not our job to worry about interunion problems. We regret we can't solve the problems," he said.

The picketing efforts are part of a na-

by JULIA BAUER

A daylong search for a 3-year-old Palatine girl ended in tragedy yesterday when men dragging Salt Creek discovered the body of the child, Susan Gieseler, apparently drowned at the Pleasant Hill Boulevard bridge.

The child, who lived at 159 S. Maple Ct., was discovered missing by her mother at 9:15 a.m. At 5 p.m., public works employee Robert Best discovered the child's body, which had apparently been washed into a sewer line entering the stream at water level under the bridge.

Palatine police originally were notified at 9:48 a.m. of the missing girl and a door-to-door hunt was started. The Palatine Fire Department began dragging the branch of Salt Creek at 3:30 p.m. A five-man team took a rowboat and searched the stream south of the Heilen Road bridge between Smith and Broadway streets. Another crew took long poles and swept across the width of the stream north where it was too narrow to allow the boat.

BEST, WHO WAS aiding in the search, was walking in the stream when he discovered the girl's body a mile downstream from her home.

Mrs. James W. Gieseler, the child's mother, told police that her daughter had long blond hair and was wearing a pink coat and aqua slacks when she apparently wandered away from home yesterday morning.

The county's canine patrol was called out to attempt to track the girl. Cook County Sheriff's Police organized that portion of the search.

Northwest area gets 'twice share' O'Hare noise: report

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

The Northwest suburbs "shoulder twice their share" of O'Hare airport noise, a report by a Des Plaines city official contends.

"The communities surrounding O'Hare would not have too much to complain about if they could be convinced that everything possible was being done to reduce the noise problem. Waiting for quieter engines is merely failing at a task that must be accomplished," said Philip Lindahl, Des Plaines environmental control officer.

Lindahl's report was hand-delivered to Washington, D.C. yesterday by Mayor Herbert Behrel. The 20-page study was also to be entered last week in minutes of a Federal Aviation Administration hearing on "airplane fleet noise requirements."

FAA regional officials in Des Plaines denied Lindahl's charge 31 per cent of takeoffs and landings are conducted over the Northwest suburbs. The percentages for other directions include: east 22 per cent; southeast—16 per cent; northeast—11 per cent; southwest—10 per cent and west—10 per cent, according to Lindahl.

"THE ACTUAL STATISTICS are more balanced than that," said Les Case, FAA environmental and noise abatement officer.

Lindahl's totals were based on a 1972

Northeastern Illinois Plan Commission report on O'Hare use. The figures were compiled in October 1969 and were projections for 1975 airport traffic levels.

Case said the airport's "runway utilization log" for August, 1972, showed about 9 per cent to the northeast, 22 per cent in the northwest; 11 per cent west; 2 per cent southwest; 24 per cent southeast, and 32 per cent east.

Personnel shortages have limited runway log keeping, he said. No statistics for total use in 1972 are available.

Case said noise impact is now "distributed more evenly" over the suburbs because O'Hare tower chiefs, who plan runway use, "look at what happened the day before. This is a new phenomenon. The chief tries to hit people with noise who didn't have it the day before and he tries to avoid previous high use areas."

LINDAHL CLAIMED Park Ridge and Northwest Chicago receive "special treatment" because takeoffs over the communities on runways 22R and 27R, are prohibited between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.

Lindahl called for 24-hour a day use of "a recognized unpopulated tollway departure route" off runway 32R, already one of the airport's busiest, to relieve Northwest suburban noise. "The silent argument . . . is that by routing east-bound departures off 32R out over the tollway adds about two minutes to the flight time and costs a few dollars—so we suffer instead," he said.

Lindahl charged "a credibility gap now exists in the FAA community relations office" and he criticized FAA changes in takeoff requirements as "old existing procedures . . . an apparent attempt to deceive the residents of the O'Hare area."

Case answered by saying, "We never claimed noise would be eliminated. At this point, everything is being done without disregarding safety."

In August, 1972, the FAA ordered pilots to climb to 1,500 feet altitude at "full (Continued on page 3)

$14.32 million flood control vote pushed back to June 2

The Arlington Heights Village Board has voted to postpone to June 2 a referendum on a proposed $14.32 million flood control program.

In a dramatic reversal last night, the trustees agreed to push the referendum date back to June 2 after they earlier had voted 4-3 to put the proposal to the people in the general election April 3.

Trustee Frank Palmatier, chairman of the Citizens Action Committee Against Flooding and a strong proponent of the April 3 date, moved that the later vote be adopted in the interest of seeking a more unified board position.

Trustees Ted Salinsky, Dwight Walton and Alice Harms all voted against the April 3 referendum date, citing the need to resolve a number of questions in the flood control package and the additional time required to present the package to the voters.

The trustees also agreed to raise the proposed bond issue from $12.245 million to $14.32 million in order to include additional land acquisition along McDonald Creek, a 10 per cent inflation contingency and legal fees.

AMONG THE ISSUES that now will receive further attention by the citizens committee are proposed underground retention at Pioneer Park, a forthcoming review of the Peterson report by the Northeastern Illinois Plan Commission, the Hasbrook basin project and questions raised by the village Environmental Control Commission.

"I can't help but sit here with a gnawing fear that if we go to the polls on April 3 we will go down to defeat and we shouldn't," Walton said. "We need a precise project to present to the voters with no loose ends."

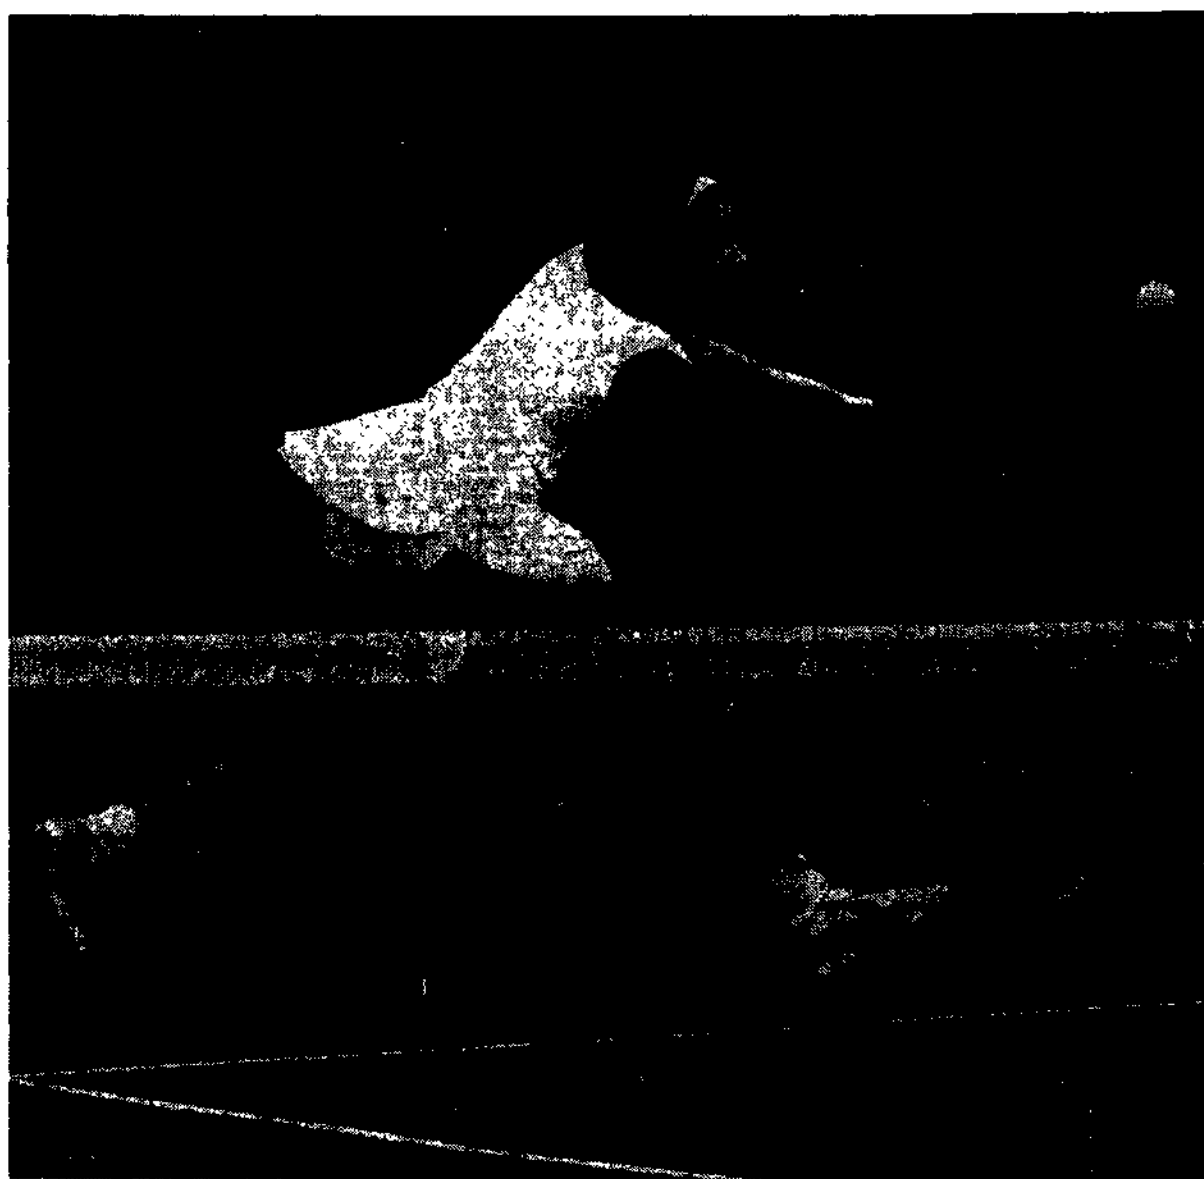

Earlier, Palmatier said he did not want to see the Peterson flood prevention recommendations "drag on as they did after the 1967 storm."

"Six years later we still haven't worked out the 1967 report. You can allow all kinds of delay to grow under your feet if you want to," he said.

In light of the 4-3 vote, however, Palmatier later moved that the referendum be pushed back to June 2 in order to give consideration to engineering questions and to give village officials more time to present the package to voters.

"I question the wisdom of an April 3 referendum without the consensus of this board. There is the possibility that such disarray in our own ranks would undermine the voters' confidence in the referendum," Palmatier said.

In voicing her opposition to the April 3 date, Mrs. Harms called for another engineering study, by the county's best engineering firm, before the village acts on the multi-million flood prevention proposals.

3-year-old girl drowns in Salt Creek

by JULIA BAUER

A daylong search for a 3-year-old Palatine girl ended in tragedy yesterday when men dragging Salt Creek discovered the body of the child, Susan Gieseler, apparently drowned at the Pleasant Hill Boulevard bridge.

The child, who lived at 159 S. Maple Ct., was discovered missing by her mother at 9:15 a.m. At 5 p.m., public works employee Robert Best discovered the child's body, which had apparently been washed into a sewer line entering the stream at water level under the bridge.

Palatine police originally were notified at 9:48 a.m. of the missing girl and a door-to-door hunt was started. The Palatine Fire Department began dragging the branch of Salt Creek at 3:30 p.m. A five-man team took a rowboat and searched the stream south of the Hellen Road bridge between Smith and Brockway streets. Another crew took long poles and swept across the width of the stream north where it was too narrow to allow the boat.

BEST, WHO WAS aiding in the search, was walking in the stream when he discovered the girl's body a mile down- (Continued on page 3)

Candidates dismissed from court hearing

Wheeling Township's Republican candidates, who were summoned to a hearing yesterday at the Chicago Civic Center, were dismissed today because Michael P. Taras, complainant, was not summoned to appear.

Taras has charged the candidates were improperly named to the slate for the approaching April 3 election.

The hearing was moved to March 12 at 11 a.m.

RICHARD BOYLES, Wheeling, is being taken from his car by Arlington Heights firemen after an accident which occurred at the intersection of Euclid from Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

O'Hare noise 'double dose' in area: report

power," instead of a more gradual climb over neighboring suburbs. "There was a lot of pulling of hair to get the planes higher, quicker," Case said. "We were trying to balance safety and noise impact."

"CURRENT PROCEDURES in effect since April, 1970, restrict takeoffs between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.," Lindahl said. The FAA's lane of relief policy limits those night operations to runway 32L to the "maximum extent possible," according to the FAA.

"The noise sensitivity of people does not start at 11 p.m. and end with the roar of the first jet after 7 a.m.," said Lindahl.

Suburb officials have often called for a night O'Hare shutdown, similar to Washington (D.C.) National airport's. "That just is not up to us to determine,"

Case said. Control of airport hours rests with Chicago. "If the people want the airport to limit flights after 11 p.m., it's up to them to convince the city. It's not up to the federal government."

"We insist that the number one consideration is safety," Case said. "Flight procedures have been developed over the years and economics was not the reason. We could close the airport and solve the noise problem."

O'Hare officials can "play noise abatement" during hours of light operation, usually at night, he said. "From 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. we've got to use all our ingenuity and concrete to evaluate and handle the large amount of traffic" that can reach 150 planes an hour.

MUCH AIRPORT NOISE stems from use of the older, noisier DC-9, 707, 727 and 737 planes allowed under a grandfather clause in the 1968 noise abatement requirements. The planes do not meet the same noise standards as recent 747's, he said.

Lindahl's report will be included in the FAA hearing designed to require retrofitting of the old planes to meet current noise standards by 1978. The proposal would require changes in 50 per cent of airline fleet planes in 1976.

"I'm sure there's going to be a big fight over this," Case said. "The airlines will fight it because of cost. They'll either have to change the planes or get rid of them. The civic groups will say we're not doing it fast enough."

Lindahl's report added support to last summer's claims by former U.S. Rep. Abner Mikva and the Environmental Protection Agency that O'Hare noise reaches levels dangerous to hearing. In September, Mikva and EPA claimed suburban airport noise reached 118 decibels. About 110 can damage hearing of one in five persons exposed to the sound — similar to the blast of an auto horn three feet away — for 30 minutes a day over a prolonged period, EPA has claimed.

Lindahl reported readings of up to 106 decibels when monitoring 95 flights over six days in January and February. Fifteen per cent of the readings topped 100. About 17 per cent were less than 90 decibels.
